Army Smartens Up Men's Battle Dress— Black Ties Okay

Ottawa, July 13 — Authority is now granted other ranks of the Canadian Army in Home War Establishment, to wear black ties with battle dress when off duty, Minister Ralston announced that battle dress collars be buttoned at all times and be worn only by soldiers.

Black tie goes . . .

. . . with battle blouse.

Army authorities explained that the wearing of ties with battle dress permitted men to adopt a more "dressed up" appearance without the necessity of changing the walking-out uniforms. Soldiers coming off guard duty and others whose duties might on occasion curtail off-duty hours will now be able to slip off to dances or other social events without losing time to change clothes.

Walking-out uniforms will continue to be worn, of course, and the new authorization was introduced for the benefit of men generally.

Stamp Collecting Helps Pay for War

A request emanating from a Philatelic Society in London, England, to all stamp collectors to help pay for the war by saving unused stamps of British and Colonial origin, is a direct contribution to the revenue of the country in reduction of the cost of war. It is a government security upon which no interest is payable, and which the government will not be called upon to redeem. Stamps which have been post marking cancelled do not have the value of uncancelled stamps, but gone toward the expense of transporting letters and the revenue has already been absorbed. Professional collectors have been known to buy up 90 percent of a single issue or commemorative stamps, buying them in blocks which they hold for a period of time and then return them to the market when their value has increased. Stamp collecting is an interesting hobby for both old and young and especially educational to the latter. Given this new meaning collectors can increase their collections and assist in the war effort at the same time.

Montgomery Visited Canadian Military Leaders Before Invasion

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, July 13 (CP Cable) — It was disclosed today that Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, Commander of Britain's famed 8th Army of desert fighters, visited Canadian military leaders in Britain recently before leading the British-Canadian force into Sicily.

Plans for Canadian participation with the 8th Army in the Sicilian attack were believed to be one of the main objects for the visit, made after the windup of the Tunisian campaign.

Gen. Montgomery, under whom Canadians served when he was general officer commanding Britain's southern command earlier in the war, conferred several times with Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian army commander, during his visit. The part the Canadians were to play as a unit of the 8th Army doubtless was the main subject of their conversations.

Gen. McNaughton's whereabouts since the Sicilian invasion started have not been announced.

While Gen. Montgomery was here, newspapers and radio, acting on the government's advice, carried no news of his presence but he was recognized several time in public and Londoners cheered him at every appearance.

1/2 inch from the mouthpiece, please!

Do people you talk to on the telephone say, "I can't hear you!"? Our repairmen report that the most frequent causes of complaint about not being heard may be traced to failure to use the telephone properly.

IT'S REALLY NO PROBLEM to make yourself clearly heard — provided you remember to speak directly into the mouthpiece with your lips half-an-inch from it.

Then you can speak in ordinary conversational tones and the other party will have no trouble hearing you.

By observing this rule, you will also help to conserve the time of telephone service men. The delicate mechanism inside the transmitter is adjusted to operate most efficiently at this half-inch distance.

*RESEARCH reveals that transmission results are only one-quarter as good when the lips are one inch (instead of half-an-inch) from the mouthpiece. Every additional half-inch has the effect of adding hundreds of miles to the talking circuit.

Restaurants Must Not Cut Portions

Under meat rationing restaurants are expected to go on serving the same big portions as before at the same prices. The Prices Board says that a meal will be the most important part of the meal in the public dining room, but the size of the servings are restricted and a reduction in the quantity with not a corresponding reduction in the price. The Board says it is an increase in price and would be, therefore, contrary to the whole spirit and intention of the price control policy. If restaurants occasionally run out of meat, their guests must must choose other dishes, an experience not unfamiliar to them even in time of peace.

Ration Coupons Cannot be Split

It is contrary to the ration regulations for ration coupons to be split and cashed partly at one time and partly at another. The smallest quantity of food which a consumer may buy at any one time is one coupon's worth.

Boarding Houses' Transient Guests

The Ration Administration has ruled that boarding houses catering to transient guests will have to collect coupons on a quota basis, but the administration because when guests stay only overnight or for a few days coupons cannot be collected from them, since each coupon represents their supply for a week's period. Thus, a quota cannot be fixed. Its only solution, should the guest stay longer than a week, ration coupons will have to be collected by the proprietor according to the regulations governing such cases.

THE PRESERVING SEASON

Hello, Homemakers! The harvest season is here again — and in the year between Canadians have realized the importance of "every other effort." Women have learned that their part in the kitchen is as important as "kitchen fatigue" in the armed forces. With the preserving season, we are utilizing to the best advantage, fruits and vegetables — leaving nothing to waste. This is one duty from which the housewife reaps a rich regard — the food is in can or jar ready.

When you have to make sugar go a long way, it is safe for you to guard your movement in your tactics—a real service stripe for your rolled-up sleeve.

RECIPES

Raspberry Jam

2 quarts raspberries, 2 cups sugar.

Crush fruit and simmer in minutes. Then add sugar and cook until thick — about 20 minutes. Pour into hot, sterilized jars and when cool, seal with melted paraffin. Yield: approximately 2½ pints.

A delicious jelly-like jam may be made by adding 2 teaspoons cider vinegar with the sugar in the above recipe.

2 quarts raspberries, 1 cup red currant juice, 2¼ cups sugar.

To make currant juice crush 1½ cups currants slightly and cover them with ¾ cup water. Cook until currants are soft and mushy —about 10 to 15 minutes. Drain through a moist jelly bag.

Clever Grandma with 1 cup red currant juice and let stand 20 minutes. Simmer raspberries and juice 30 minutes, then add sugar. Cook about 20 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and when cool seal with paraffin. Yield: approximately 2¼ pints.

2 quarts gooseberries, 1 1-3 cups water, 4½ cups sugar.

Top and tail the gooseberries simmer the fruit and water for 10 minutes. Add sugar and cook for about half hour. Pour into hot sterilized jars and when cool, seal with paraffin. Yield: about 3½ pints. This jam is quite thin when hot but it thickens considerably when it cools.

If desired one-half cup honey or corn syrup may be added to the recipe if it is too tart for your taste.

Jewel Jam

1 quart pitted cherries (6 cups unpitted), 1 quart gooseberries, 1 quart red currants, 1 quart raspberries, 3 cups sugar.

Wash and pit cherries and put in kettle with 2 cups of sugar. Bring to the boil and boil for 5 minutes. Then add quart of cleaned gooseberries and 1 quart of sugar. Bring to boil and boil 5 minutes. Then add quart of cleaned red currants and quart of cleaned raspberries and 4 cups sugar. Bring to boil and boil 5 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and when cool, seal with paraffin.

Yield: approximately 4 pints.

TAKE A TIP

1. Use ripe but not overripe fruit for jam.
2. Wash and cut up or mash fruit for jam, adding about half inch of water in bottom of saucepan.
3. To extract juice, heat fruit slowly, stirring frequently.
4. Pre-cook solid fruit or soft fruit first—then add sugar.
5. A longer boiling period is required when less sugar is used, but for reasons given by Mother, a spoonful. If it remains beside the cup or when poured off the spoon drips to 2 or 3 drops which, when chilled, is ready.
6. Pour while hot into sterilized jars. Cover with thin layer of melted paraffin then seal with wax with thick layer.
7. Why may fail to set if juice was not boiled long enough after adding sugar, or if fruit was overripe.
8. Why may be tough if juice and sugar are boiled together too long or if too much sugar is used according to amount of acid and pectin in fruit. Also, using too-ripe or too-green currants contain a lot of acid and require some water.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. M. Mc. suggests: To make whipped cream pour a can of evaporated milk into freezing tray; chill until fine crystals form around the edges. Meanwhile chill bowl and beater. Add half tsp. lemon juice to the milk poured in bowl and beat.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When A Woman Breaks Up Her Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 36 years old and my husband is 38. We've been married for 14 and a half years and have a nine months old son. We have a nice home and I think we have many of the finer things. But my husband is nothing. He has a good job and seems he has too much work to do.

He goes out every night with some chum, and on Sundays stays out so late he's too tired to enjoy dinner nor do I get out of the kitchen, till after the meal is over. I've been married my husband hasn't been home a single Sunday afternoon, since we've been married, as he always has to go to a movie once a week; alone, and he doesn't think I should ever do that.

I don't keep on living with such a man the rest of my life. What can I do, Miss Fairfax?

M. F. F.

You seem to have made up your mind to leave your home, and I think that is my conclusion, but there are important steps to consider, so don't act hastily in case you are living for yourself and baby!—The husband does not seem to be a despondable these days. Do you know of a reliable Big Forward man who you could leave your baby while you work?

Lastly, are you sure you no longer care for your husband, because you may have been beaten and treated as badly as you've been, but you're not built that way, heartless after quitting their tyranny. Think long and carefully before you decide. The mistake in such a decision is that you think it wonderful to put up with such behavior, on the part of a husband from the beginning. A second mistake is not to try to kiss it before smashing up the marriage.

Can't Make Up Her Mind

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl, Tom and I kept company and were seriously considering marriage. All of a sudden we stopped seeing each other and I became interested in another fellow. We went together, and he has now decided he'd been a fool to give me up and although I refused to see him, he managed to see me and talked me into thinking over the question of breaking my engagement and marrying him instead.

I know engagements are broken every day, but my fiance is very much in love and has made plans for our future. He threatens to break our engagement, knowing he is my first real friendship.

Tom and I don't want to build our happiness on my fiance's unhappiness, but still we have ourselves to consider. What is your advice? Shall I give up Tom and marry my fiance, or vice versa?

W. O.

It would be a mistake to marry either of these young men in your present state of mind. Tom has conclusively proven that he is not a model of fidelity. If he drifted off once, he's likely to do the same thing again? On the other hand, if you marry the second young man, it seems to me it would be a terrible case of duty rather than because you loved him so much you couldn't help marrying him. Under the circumstances I haven't time to "make haste slowly."

He Asked Her To Wait For Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past three years I have been corresponding with a boy for the past year of which he has been in the service. This correspondence started when he left our home town to go to high school in another city. We wrote letters back and forth to each other, and since then he has written once every two weeks. I have waited and his last letter said he still loved me, but that he did not want me to wait for him until he was finally engaged.

Many of my friends here have told me that he's married and I don't know whether or not it is true. Should I wait for him or should ask him about this. He says if me for his letters I'll know by next which I send, but he never acknowledged receipt. What shall I do?

W. B.

When this young man asked you to wait for him, after a silence of a couple of months, it looks to me as if he were just trying to say pleasant things to you, and you shouldn't've certainly not order my movement on that sort of pleasant.

Just write him a say, assuring letter and if you've met some one married, is it true? I'd like to congratulate you on having such a good letter to the bride."

And say I say it's not just the wise thing to send a large picture of one's self, if that is the case, but small snapshots are O.K. but large pictures, as I hear from reliable Big Forward men, are sometimes the fate of these expensive pictures, and are not sent up to the girls who send them.

Shy Love's Already Married

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been divorced for two months. Recently I met a young man of 22, who is married and has one child. We have been seeing each other constantly, and I have fallen in love with him. He is also in love with me also. He and his wife don't get along, because she does not like his people, and carries on terribly with him. He is very unhappy and so is his people. He wants to divorce her and marry me because who will appreciate his family. However, they want the child, so they don't get a move.

I've tried to break away, but he hints me that he can't live without me every day as before. What shall I do?

B.

When a young man of 22 who is married and has a child, decides to divorce and is seeking to marry again, it strikes me that a few growing pains would be beneficial before he tries matrimony again.

You've had one marriage and a divorce. Don't you think prospects for future happiness would be greater if you marry, someone older than yourself, and one who has shown a greater sense of responsibility than this husband and seems to have? How about the Draft? It will be a problem to be taken into consideration?

She Can't Decide

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22 years old, married, and have a four months old baby. My husband probably will be drafted soon, and I'm wondering what I should do when he goes.

I was adopted when a small child and my parents have been always very good to me, and gave me a beautiful home. I was married when my husband leaves they would like me to come back and stay with them, but I don't like to burden them. Let me say frankly as I think they've done their duty.

What do you think I should do? I've thought of getting in a girl friend to live with me, after my husband leaves, but it wouldn't be like home to me with my husband gone, especially as I expect a baby soon. Or shall I try to get a job and hire a woman to stay with my baby? I'm so undecided, I don't know what to do. Of course, he has not left yet.

J. B.

With a "nice home, affectionate parents, a darlin and a fine husband going strong, I can't see why you hesitate a moment about returning to your home. Then you say you don't like to burden them. Any parent with, dare, has not dear girl, if they hadn't been willing and glad to have you, they would not have proposed such an arrangement. And if anyone with someone entirely satisfactory, as your parents are, you have a right to leave the baby, you could get a job, pay part of the expenses and be entirely independent.

Her Fiance Prepared a Test of Her Curiosity and Wife-to-Be "Sailing Politely" She Failed

Men have the right to determine before marriage—before it is too late, whether their prospective wives are of the too-curious, too-jealous type.

Possibly I'm crediting one Dance Miss with that, but she really possessed, but I think the young man referred to in the following letter gave his fiancee a clever test.

I can't know that if she sees now, as she seems inclined, he'll be content and he won't be the kind of wife who'll be inclined to open his mail, listen in on his phone calls from the fascinating, and pry in the contents of his clothes pockets, while he's sleeping. There's no doubt about how men feel about such things.

The young woman writes:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been engaged for several months to a boy who has been in the service five months. He writes every day and tells me he's true, how much he misses me and that I'm the only girl for him.

Recently he sent me a package and in it was a letter to a girl. In it he said, thinking it was a girl for whom he had signed it could be talked letters from 12 or 15 girls he has been corresponding with. I was quite upset. Being curious I read some of the letters although they're only friendly notes, I find that he has been dating some of the girls, which makes me wonder if I'm the only one.

I gave up all my boy friends when we became engaged and he thinks I'm still doing it. Something is wrong, and now I dread opening his letters. I'm only 19 years old and sincere. I can't tell him I know about the girls, and I think that would be a give-away that I read the letters. The only way out to me seems to be a broken engagement, but that will be hard to do, as I'm very much in love.

T. Y.

My reply to her is:

I wonder if your fiance wasn't testing you to see if you would open the box and, if you did, what your reaction would be. It would be a mean trick, however, for a man to send such letters to a girl he's engaged to marry, for safe keeping.

It seems to me that you failed in the test in several ways. First of all, I don't see how you could have mistaken the box for a gift, if he actually stated it was a present for a girl friend, and secondly, if you were curious enough to open the box, you could have known, by the number of letters, that they were not from a girl friend.

Since as you say, they were only friendly letters, I think he is expected to understand that they're not that a man can't have letters from many of his acquaintances, without encouragement. Every body has been urged to write their friends in the war zones as a contribution to morale, so you should know.

Since you have admitted you mean that a boy or girl must give up all acquaintances or correspondence with other girls or boys, I'm sure a soldier can go out on active service, without your compromising his engagement.

If my diagnosis of this case is correct, you'll do yourself no good by breaking your engagement over this. If he doesn't love you, you'll be better evidence of it.

If I've misjudged the young man's test of you, I'm sorry, but I'm sure you'll be an odd type who'd probably be an odd husband. Further edition of your letters will probably crop out as warnings.

Toronto, July 13 — (CP) — Lt.-Col. Roderick Langer of Command, Ont., would be a competent coxswain because "he is all muscle and no fat" as well as he paralyses sundry rib-ticklers about hockey promoters in Canada last week.

Hear'e were breaking right and left — until Defence Minister Ralston stepped in to stop the carnage. Then Hockey and Air Force officials would also continue hockey next year. The word was good.

Cmdr. K. T. C. Orde, the Navy big-wig in Toronto, says he has every reason to believe the Navy will be in hockey in an important way next season.

The Air Force faces the future as calmly. Vice-Marshal T. A. Lawrence, Air Officer Commanding No. 3 Training Command at Winnipeg, said: "Hockey is an essential part of service life and we hope to maintain it as such."

The writers, outside of Cornwall, have regained their confidence. Already they're busy circling the wagons to get players — just wishfully yet of course. Bill Westbrook of the Star Journal says Red Hamill, the Chicago Black Hawks star who enlisted at Cornwall, is glated for the playing manager's post at Kingston.

Back for giving the lead to Canada again. And Part added deathly:

"It is impossible to predict right now that service hockey, if played, will consist of only local activity...It is the end of the road for big-time service sport."

TORONTO BEATS ROCHESTER 5 TO 1 TO HOLD LEAD

Jim Hopper Fives Six-Hitter as Leafs Combine a Three-Run Fifth-Inning Splurge

Baltimore isn't going to climb into the International League's first division if the Orioles keep on losing to the tail-end Jersey City Giants.

The Orioles dropped their second straight game to the Little Giants last night, 3-2, thus losing an opportunity to deadlock Syracuse for third place.

Pitcher Rube Barbart blew hot for Baltimore until the seventh when he held a 2-1 edge. Then in the eighth he lost control and before he could get his respective club had scored four runs. Roland Gilbert, Jersey City shortstop, led the two walks and an infield hit had Ray Orteig, centre fielder, and Tim Slate's control wasn't much better. He forced in two runs with a walk after Bob Dahl had rifled a single to Johnny Kerr for two more.

Orteig had a day hits off Ray Coombs. A wild pitch by Coombs in the fifth proved an easy run for the Little Giant hurler accounted for Baltimore's lone run.

The first place Toronto Maple Leafs continued a three-game winning streak with Jim Hopper's six-hit pitching to beat Rochester, 5-1.

Hopper has got a chance this first on two errors by Al Letchas. After that Toronto batsmen combined and reached second. The trio of tallies in the fifth proved an easy margin for Jrs Hutchinson. In winning his ninth game Hopper issued only three and issued only one base on balls.

Montreal rolled up a 13-6 lead then added Bill Ministel's relief pitching rally to eat the Senators, 12-9, in a game played before a crowd of 4,000 at Quebec. Newark and Syracuse were idle.

RELIANCE GIRLS BEAT OPTICALS BY 13-6 SCORE

Ev. Semark Hits Two Home Runs to Help Winners Even Their Standing

Reliance Senates moved into the ball-park Monday night to take the Belleville Softball League by downing the Quinte Optical Club 13 to 6 at the Armouries last night. Now the Reliance girls are even-stevens in the matter of wins and losses in their league with four on each side in the win column.

The issue was never really in doubt as Ev. Semark and Air Force Harold Kurtz's girls scored three runs in the second, four in the third, fourth, to subsequently lead 12 to 1 before Optical Club pitcher Odell rah rallied somewhat in the last frame to score four, the winners getting two in every inning, except the first.

Steady Pitching

Millie Master hurled her usually steady game off the Reliance mound and was given much better support than she got on her last start when hurled for the Opticals. E. Semark, Reliance right fielder, supplied the batting punch for the winners with two home-runs in five times up, productive of no less than five runs. L. Wright was next in line with two safe blows. Actually the Semarks did well for themselves, that is collectively, as E. Semark and L. Semark were the best offensively for the Optical. On Wednesday night the gals go at it again.

The lineups: Opticals — C. Bermack c., Hill ss., Anderson 2b., Coonrod 1b., Cook rf., Odell p., Mc-Garvey lf., Reid 3 and Hanley cf. Reliance — Wright lf., Coshup 1b., Dalziel 3b., Master p., Semark ss., Hickerson 2b., Foster p., Dalrymple rf., Semark cf.

Scores by innings:
Optical ..... 000 210 3 0 0 — 6 runs
Reliance ..... 023 242 x —13 runs

Umpires: Polster and Cornwall.

HANDSOME BRUTE, WHAT?

Don't be misled by the above picture because it's only "Irish Jerry" Monahan, one of the toughest headliners in the wrestling business, caught by the camera's unfriendly eye in Monday night's bout at the Arena. Jerry, who "Tore" Morgan, the fighting Marine, in the main bout of Wednesday night's rasslin' show at the Hugo Arena, is a native of Ireland.

Other Wednesday night attractions will see Promoter Frannie Fox's boy in tussling Al Dunlop at the Hugo. Dunlop, who expects in an Intermediate OASA, Light-off, Fox is matched against a rough, tough opponent in Jerry Monahan, who is a veteran of a year and a half in the service. Bristol forged ahead in the seventh when Pinkie drove Pinfield to left field, but Pinfield looked sure winners as they added two more in the eighth on Kurtz's triple. Hits by Sinclair, Partridge and Shannon were good for the Marines' two in the top half of the eighth. Then in the pinch in the ninth when Khler hit Hook walked and Sinclair's fly was hit into centre field where McCull for a base on balls that spelled defeat for the Bristol club left the lying run aboard in their half. The box score:

Father Time Takes Wallop Out of Babe Ruth's Big Bat

12,000 Spectators Plead With Former Sultan of Swat to Change, But to No Degree of Success

(By The Canadian Press)

It takes more than a uniform to make a ball player, as Babe Ruth in a charity field day exhibition affair at Fenway Park, Boston, Herman Hickman, tackle, was also a decade ago garbed himself in the famous No. 3 togs in which he disported for the New York Yankees. Hickman, who is regarded as the master-mind of a services all-star team which whipped the Boston Braves 9-8 but Ruth proved no help principally batting.

The 12,000 spectators pleaded with the sweater to show some stuff just once more. Alas, round and 46 years old, essayed the role of pinch-hitter. He took two formidable swings at the offerings of Pitcher Dave Odom and connected to be caught out in right field. Before the encounter he tried his luck in batting practice along with Ted Williams, 1941 batting champ of the American League but now working for Uncle Sam. Against the blazes of Ted Ruth's power's bullpen pitcher, Williams drove three balls into the right field bleachers. Ruth found he could not lift the pellet out of the field.

In the game itself Williams homered in the seventh to score three runs and break up a 5-all tie. Other hot-lay night in the Sandy Cohen Babe Young, formerly of the New York Giants, Al Roberge, late in Fielder of the Reds Sammy Hogan, late Cleveland catcher, and Tom Seaman.

Pittsburgh's veteran of the ring, Private Zivic, managed to carry Fritzie Zivic on 15 rounds of his go with Jake La Motta of New York last night in the Smoky City auditorium to a split decision. Zivic, who tipped the scales at 151 pounds against the 157 1-2 of the New Yorker, appeared wobbly during the closing chapters of the argument but grimly stayed on his feet to share the verdict.

The heavyweight battle at Baltimore last night between Tami Mauriello of New York and Tony Musto of Chicago had a similar ending when Musto was forced to quit because of a dislocated jaw in the Gothamite being awarded a technical K.O. at the conclusion of the seventh round. Mauriello, rated No. 3 heavyweight contender by the National Boxing Association, was credited with a seventh round knockout over Musto, who was floored for the count by a right to the jaw.

MARINES HANDED GAME ON PLATTER BY BRISTOLS

Sobrj is 6 to 5 With Winners Staging Ninth Inning Rally to Score Five

Staging as neat a Ceaton-Alphonse "you take it" act, the Bristol Softball Club handed the Stephens Adamson "Marines" last night a five-run gift gesture on the proverbial platter.

It's not the fact the Marines weren't in the game for any degree of success in emerging victorious, but their last inning runs were definitely of the gift nature and therein lies the answer to victory and defeat. The Marines won by the close margin of 6 to 5.

Steve Hook, erstwhile Belleville-Toronto-Belleville softball gladiator was the surprise pitcher out of the bag by Manager Al Hitchon when he announced the lineup, and Hook justified the choice in a sense by holding the Bristol batsmen to what he allowed four bases on balls and three hits, but he was also responsible for clouting a triple by Pinfield and a single by Pinkie Harris, who relieved Connie Harris, who weakened somewhat as the game progressed, but Connie was the victim of the breaks, have won had his support in the field been average. Hook certainly expects in an Intermediate OASA, Light-off. He is matched against a rough, tough opponent in Jerry Monahan, who is a veteran of a year and a half in the service. Bristol forged ahead in the seventh when Pinkie drove Pinfield to left field, but Pinfield looked sure winners as they added two more in the eighth on Kurtz's triple. Hits by Sinclair, Partridge and Shannon were good for the Marines' two in the top half of the eighth. Then in the pinch in the ninth when Khler hit Hook walked and Sinclair's fly was hit into centre field where McCull for a base on base on balls that spelled defeat for the Bristol club left the lying run aboard in their half. The box score:

Over 4,000 Attend Orange Rally at Madoc Fair Grounds

Geo. S. White, M.P., Speaks on Necessity of Sending Men Overseas

19 LODGES ATTEND

Madoc —(Special)— Well over four thousand people gathered in this village on Monday afternoon to celebrate the 324rd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, the Twelfth of July weather greeted the Orangemen and their friends as nineteen lodges, totalling approximately 1,200 members, staged a monster parade through the village streets and back to the Exhibition Park where the afternoon's program was staged.

The Traditional Twelfth of July dinner was lacking but despite rationing, celebrants enjoyed a basket picnic dinner, prior to the forming of the band. Members of the Frankford lady's and men's lodges headed the parade which was led by their Kittle Band. Scouts of the parade was down Front Street, south on Durham and back to the big grounds.

Speakers at the fair grounds included Rev. Patterson of Queensboro who referred to the past history of the Orange Order and the sacrifices made by the members and forefathers to obtain present freedom. These freedoms could not be maintained by going to church or to lodge once a year, he said. The speaker also referred to the boys in the fighting forces and the freedoms for which they are fighting.

Front Line Is Where You May Be Found

Member of the Federal House for Hastings Peterborough, Mr. George S. White referred to Canadians living in a free democratic country and to the fact that the day's celebration was an indication of that freedom.

Many people in Canada still feel that this country should not send boys beyond the border of this Dominion to fight, stated the speaker. But, he asked, do these people want a front line in Canada?

"Our front line," he declared, "is the Russian Channel, Malta, Burma or the Far East. It is wherever the enemy can be found on land, on the seas or in the air. Being on Canadian soil they the enemy must be brought to defeat."

He referred to the invasion of Sicily and the part which Canadians were taking in spearheading the attack. Special mention was made of the boys of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment personnel, who it was claimed were the finest boys in Canada.

County Among Leaders

Hastings County is among leaders in the province in voluntary enlistments to the armed services, according to Mr. White. Other parts of the Dominion, especially the Province of Quebec, have not contributed their share in this respect to the war effort.

Canada, as a member of the United Nations, is pledged to an all-out war effort. Those who stay at home must do their part as those overseas have the finest of weapons, all the needed reinforcements and everything needed, in mentioned quantities.

Equality, justice and equal rights for all were given as the ideals of Orangeism, which today has a grand opportunity to live up to those ideals.

The speaker ridiculed the statement of a prominent Canadian, who had stated people of this country would vote 45 per cent. for amalgamation with the United States. During war was no time to bring up such issues as change of flag, more seats in the House of Commons, racial or religious issues, he said.

Wants Best Effort

Good days and dark days are ahead for United Nations stated Mr. White, who urged adoption of the motto that "Today's best is not good enough for tomorrow." He appealed to everyone to put forward their best effort to support the boys overseas to the limit.

Canadians have studied the war in free nation by choice of a free parliament. Democracy should be believed in Freedom and the cause of freedom, he asked, do these people want a front line in Canada?

Cross.

Lodges Attending

Following were the lodges marching in the parade: Frankford (ladies' and men's lodge), Trenton, Foxboro, Sidney, Wooler, Marmora, Deseronto, Tamworth, Bloomfield, Sattlemont, Madoc, Queensboro, Eldorado, Plainfield, Hasseth Corner, West Huntingdon, Holloway, Beulah, Elliott and Regent.

Picton and District

Jas. de C. Hepburn Is Nominated In P.E.-Lennox

Picton, July 13—The parish hall was packed to capacity with over 800 delegates, for the Progressive Conservative convention on Saturday Afternoon.

Mr. Thos. Kinney as chairman of the meeting, and the following nominations were received: Thos. Kinney, Jas. de C. Hepburn, H. S. Colliver, J. E. Welsh of Picton; T. C. Creighton of Napanee, Hon. Hugh of Consecon; Fred Hubbs of Black Creek.

Only Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Bloomfield, and Mr. Stewart York of Creighton allowed their names to go before the convention and in the balloting which followed, Mr. Hepburn the present member from Prince Edward-Lennox, was elected as the Conservative candidate to contest the riding.

Hepes to See Woman M.P. Some Day

In refusing the nomination Mrs. Rose Rush said, that she hoped some day a woman would represent Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Hepburn who has governed the home, the country and the nation," she said if elected, she promises the world is in today. I think the men will be glad at some future time to pave the women help get them out of the mess."

Mr. Hepburn Speaks

Mr. Hepburn spoke briefly. He regretted an election at this time. "How are the boys involved in the conflict of Sicily today, and who may be in Italy on election day, going to vote by proxy?" Mr. Hepburn asked. He described the present election as a vital ballot sent up for Prime Minister Mackenzie King, and said if elected, the government led by Harry Mixon would cooperate in full by the Mackenzie King government.

A Bees Speak

Mr. Jamieson Bone of Belleville spoke on behalf of the candidate. Mr. Bone said had been active since 1930. "We might have had prosperity instead of the long period of depression. Things could have been changed by the government almost over night," he remarked. Mr. Bone referred to the C.C.F., as the old Santa Claus stuff, that promises something for everybody. Their plan, he said, to run things along the socialistic lines that Russia tried and is now discarding.

"Their pencil and paper theories," said Mr. Bone, "won't work out in practice." The farmer from the back concessions, who "really knows work, and who is honest, thinks come forward and straighten things out." The Conservatives he described as "the enthusiasts of Empire. "Everything the Liberals have done," said Mr. Bone, "they have done, because they have been prodded into it by the Conservatives." Dew's platform, declared Mr. Bone, was full of a p-ns, and he thought "we are going to get somewhere."

Geo. Tustin of Napanee, M.P. for Prince Edward-Lennox, was the final speaker. "Canada is at the crossroads," Mr. Tustin said, "I concluded that the speaker of the legislature thinks that Canada should go South. The Minister of Justice thinks Canada is going East. I say the course we stay with, is the last portion of freedom in the world today, the British Empire."

"When Mitchell Hepburn resigned said Mr. Tustin, "there was a regular exodus of cabinet ministers from Ottawa to Toronto, to choose

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 115

By SAM GORDON

The Knave

Goody, goody. Comes now the responses to an opening bid or one no-trump. Oh! Yes. Do I like to talk about my Horse. Sense no-trump count. Like a spoiled mother with a good baby.

You expect to take tricks on no-trump with high cards; aces, kings, queens. There are four of each; 12 in all. They are the basis for all the 13 no-trump tricks in any deal.

At no-trump, short cards are as useless as water wings on a duck. So, what should take the 13th no-trump trick? Any card lower than a queen.

What cards should you consider in advance as no-trump tricks? Can there be any doubt? Merely total your aces and kings and queens. That's all.

Tell partner how many high cards you have. Let partner tell you how many high cards he has. Each of you will then know how many high cards (no-trump tricks) are held by your pair.

Your pair may take one trick count a cute baby?

now than that. But you must not bank on it in advance. Besides the 13th trick is more or less of a gamble. It may be taken by any card in any hand.

Another opening of no shows five tricks with two sure tricks. If the opening is one no-trump, those five tricks must be high cards; that is, aces and kings, and queens, if accompanied by kings, with an opening bid of, one no-trump and you have this hand:

♣A 7 5 2

You have three high cards. With partner's five, you get eight. Eight tricks at no-trump are only enough for a bid of two no-trump. Your immediate response is two no-trump.

It takes nine tricks to make a game at no-trump; a bid of three no-trump. If you had four high cards, you would see enough for game. In this case, your response would be a one-jump to three no-trump.

Isn't the Horse Sense no-trump a cute baby?

National League Favored Over Junior Circuit in 11th Annual All-Star Ball Game

Southworth Says He'll "Stand or Get Flattened" With Powerhouse Starting Line-Up

McCARTHY PUZZLED

By RID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Philadelphia, July 13 —(AP)— They're calling it the "Battle of Brotherly Love" and the "Battle of Pennsylvania" and the "Battle of Philadelphia" and the "Battle of Anything Else" but whatever it's called, it's still the "midsummer night's dream game" here tonight, but whatever it shapes up, it looks like St. Louis Cardinals Manager Billy Southworth's secret" from the American League.

The National League's 1943 "Big Red Southworth, is going to stand or get flattened" with his powerhouse starting set headed by five members of his world champion Cardinal team, including his right-hand rifle-belter, Mort Cooper. But, Yankee Manager Joe McCarthy, after looking over his American League squad, has come up with a line-up that bears a striking resemblance to double talk in Braille.

All signs now point to a sell-out of some 32,000 cash customers and a gate of about $70,000.

Ruth Not Starting

Of course, by the time all the noses are counted, Joe McCarthy will know who's going to start for the American League, but it won't be announced his lineup he not only didn't know it himself at the hour—although the general guess is that he would be Rookie Phil Bonham of the Yanks—but he was also at a loss about his catchers, he wasn't sure about his outfield, and the only thing definite about his infield was that Joe Gordon will be one.

Marse Joe had his mind made up only about his centerfielder, who will be Chet Laabs, the Detroit batmeaner of the St. Louis Browns; his shortstop, the Yanks' ever-dependable Vern Stephens, also of the Browns; and his catcher, the veteran who will be Ken Keltner, the Cleveland Indians' long-ball belter.

The National League, meanwhile, were as cocky as the town bully on the playground, and they seemed to be their first real edge in both pitching power in the 11 years of the series.

Cooper to Pitch

The senior circuit squad lost Howie Pollet, the Cards' crack lefty, to the army overnight, and Art Adams the New York Giants' relief specialist was added to the squad in his place. However, Cooper is backed up by the Brooklyn star Truett Sewell, Claude Passeau of the Cubs, and Rex Lanier the Card southpaw.

Supporting these hurlers, Southworth made up a batting order of blockbusters that has an average of .301 as a group for the season, except for pitchers. That gives them a big batting edge over the American League Leaguers considered most likely to start for their "Pa" this summer has been a mere .266.

Callura to Defend Title in New Orleans

New Orleans, July 13 —(AP)— Little Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., puts his Canada's Boxing Association's world's featherweight title at stake in a 15-round match here Aug. 16 to prove that his third-round knockout by Phil Terranova of the Bronx in their three weeks ago was all a big mistake.

Promoter Nyp Gulnik said that he has closed with Callura's manager, Lev Bradley, to send the Canadian champion against Terranova in a championship match for a guarantee of $5,000 and the privilege of 50 per cent of the gate. The guarantee falls $5,000 short of the demand made by Bradley 10 days ago.

Harry Mixon as leader of the party." He described Mr. Mixon as a sounding board for Mackenzie King, and said under him, the "puppet government" of Ontario would merely carry out instructions received from Ottawa.

PRESENTATION BY BROADCASTERS TO COMMONS

Private Broadcasters Voice Concern Over 'National Station' Report

COMMERCIAL RADIO

Ottawa, July 13.—(CP) — The Canadian Association of Broadcasters is making presentation to the House of Commons Radio Committee said today private broadcasters view "disturbed" by the report of last year's Radio Committee supporting general nationalization of radio in Canada.

Joseph Sedgewick, K.C., of Toronto acted as spokesman for the delegation which included Glenn Bannerman, Toronto, president and general manager of the association; Senator Rupert Davies, Kingston, Ont., and Harold Garner, Montreal, Que.

Mr. Sedgewick said the sense of the brief which the association had been weakened by the report of last year's parliamentary radio committee and by some things now said in "limited ai".

If the committee proposed total nationalization of radio it should say so flatly. If it did not, radio should be freed of a constant threat of nationalization.

Nationalized radio in European countries was used largely for propaganda purposes. Before the war Prime Minister Mackenzie Gerson tion did not have a monopoly because there were numerous applications which broadcast exclusively Canadian.

"I believe it can be said that our people, and all people, prefer private radio", he said.

Mr. Sedgewick gave the committee the following brief resume made on behalf of the association to determine what type of radio to control the Canadian people prefer red.

Those favoring complete government ownership constituted 16 per cent, those favoring some government and some private stations 30.5 per cent, and those favoring all private stations 30.5 per cent. The survey had showed 19.9 per cent supporting private stations under government supervision and 19.3 per cent had expressed no opinion.

"The 39 Steps"

If ever a film has deserved sympathy, it is Robert Donat, whose co-starring role with Madeleine Carroll in "The 39 Steps", released him to be hunted and chased from one end of the film to the other. It was filmed on the streets of London, cornered on a speeding express train, hunted over the Scottish moors, through theatre crowds, and finally rounded up by a London vaudeville theatre.

But the most unkind cut of all was rising at the chilly hour of 3.30 to travel a great distance to where the Gaumont studios had erected an enormous section of the Forth Bridge". A howling March gale added to the discomfort of actor and cameramen, clinging to the girders and spans.

"The 39 Steps", a Gaumont production directed by Alfred Hitchcock from a peace-time adaptation of John Buchan's novel of British secret activities, is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Canadians and Tanks Hurl Back Charge Of Italian Cavalry

London, July 13 — (CP Cable) —Cavalry charges—a relic of the First Great War — were used by the Italians during the week-end in an attempt to break the tightening Allied hold in the Southeast corner of Sicily, according to a Reuters news agency dispatch from Allied Headquarters in N. Africa.

In the region of Comiso, midway between Syracuse and Licata and about 15 miles inland, Italian cavalry charged against Allied tanks and Canadian troops, armed to the teeth with the most modern weapons, the dispatch added.

The Canadians put up a terrific barrage of fire and forced the Italian horsemen to withdraw.

"DR. GILLESPIE'S NEW ASSISTANT" — "HARRIGAN'S KID"

Hour of Grace

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 8

"I hate to spoil it by intruding."

"You're not intruding at all." Mrs Hall had habit of frowning and then closing at the same time. "Am I supposed to know you? Forgive me, but it seems that not a few people, who, were at my wedding appear hurt when I fail to call them by their first names. I may as well be honest. I don't know yours."

"Of course you don't remember. I'm Meegan McLean. I was there, too, at your wedding."

He smiled. "Then we have met." Then he seemed to be studying her. "So you're one of Clare's childhood friends, too?"

They both laughed at once, their laughter mingling. It would be easy to laugh with him, she thought. You could laugh about a lot of things with him.

She said, "I was the youngest, a serious handicap at the time."

He frowned again. "I know you now. You're . . . you're Toby's sister. I know them all."

He did not say how or when he knew Toby and she had the uneasy feeling that before Toby sister placed her in rather a poor light with Wayne.

"Yes, I'm Toby's sister. Clare asked me to tell you that more guests are arriving."

"Then I must be getting back." As they began to walk together he said, "I'm not a very good host, am I? And I remember very little of this place from my childhood, and it's an old habit of mine to pick up these old binoculars and have a look at new places. This island is lovely, but I don't want to compare it with any other place. It doesn't remind me of any other place, not at all, characteristically Maryland as your soft shell crabs. I'm sorry I'm going to be able to spend more time here."

"Someone told me you are in Washington . . . in the service."

He turned his head and smiled in a slow smile. "Not exactly. In. But I'm working on that."

Meegan said, "This is one more time in my life when I wish I were a boy . . ."

"Don't say that. That's sacrilege."

Once more they laughed together. Then he said, "There's nothing glorious about war. It's a dirty business that has to be cleaned up."

They were walking up the stone path when the door opened and a woman stepped onto the porch. She was perhaps in her middle fifties with faded hair and a patient, long-suffering face. While Meegan reminded herself that Clare's aunt was dead and that this woman was obviously a member of the household, she and the woman exchanged glances. Though they said nothing, it was as though the woman asked "How is it?" and Payne had responded with "Everything is all right. Don't worry."

When the woman turned and went into the house again, Payne said, "Miss Willoughby . . . Clare's secretary." But he said it reluctantly and almost with a suggestion of shame as though he were apologizing for Clare's having a secretary.

But they were walking on toward the rear garden when Clare and Toby were still talking in the door; then Toby saw Meegan was introduced to them and Payne shook hands with the man. Toby said some pleasantry to the woman. And when the older man was saying that he had known the Halls for years, Meegan suddenly became aware that Payne was looking at her with a peculiar intensity as she was did in a bright light, she tried to analyze Payne's sharp look consisting at last that it had nothing to do with jealousy or completion, that it was a look concentrated upon Clare alone as though he was not certain as to what she would do or say next. Had it anything to do with his silent assurance to the faded Miss Willoughby? What was that? What manner of household was this? It was terribly confusing and she had been a one-saw all day, she thought. Up and down had gone her sensations. Up and down until her brain ached from thinking, and her body hurt from feeling.

Presently she saw the tall figure of Adele striding across the lawn to her car, making an excuse that no one heard, she left them quietly and went to Adela who was in her car now with the motor dead.

Adele looked at her angrily, her lipsed nostrils dilating.

"She hasn't changed a bit," she said. "Not a bit. So it's Toby now. How long has that been going on? Don't tell me they haven't seen each other in years. She hasn't changed a bit. She's still rotten inside. I should have known it."

Meegan shook her head slowly. "I don't understand it. She was so ashamed for Toby. Looking up, she asked, "Have you and she met?"

"Van was tight, five drove him home. But he wasn't so tight he didn't remember how wonderful she was before he married him. He was ravin; about her. I'm getting out of this stinking place. I'm call you."

Meegan was standing where Adele car had stood a moment before when Toby joined her.

"What is it you're doing at the club tonight, Meegan? They're getting up a party."

"No, Toby. I don't want to go."

"Sure you do. You mean you . . . you haven't anything to wear?"

"It's settled then. Don't be obstinate."

"I'm not being obstinate, but I'm not going if I don't want to go and I don't want to go."

"Then you don't. We'd go. Listen, you don't have to go any other night, you don't have to do anything I ask you to do, but this one night. You can't be going! Honest. It isn't sensible, I told them we'd go and I want an even number. You can't back out now. It's too late."

It was hopeless. She said, "All right. I'll go . . . this time but don't any more my plans for me again."

He smiled at her. "Don't talk it so hard. Why would you care what I do?"

"Because we have the same mother and because the three of us make our family now."

"Okay, I'm sorry. Now suppose you take the car and go home and get dressed and tell Mother we'll be late. I'll meet you at the club at seven-thirty for dinner. I won't change. I'm going in for a swim first." And then he dropped the key in her hand he said, "Thanks, Sister," and abruptly walked away.

Since she had had to wait for her mother to dress and to make and receive several telephone calls as to where the best bridge game would be that evening and to drive her there, it was after the appointed seven-thirty when Meegan arrived at the large white club house which faced the bay. Already the parking lot was filled almost to capacity and music from the ballroom was floating melodiously from the opened windows upon the still spring air. It was scarcely twilight so that a sail boat was still on the bay, its orange sails mingling with the warm colors which had begun to streak the sky.

For a few minutes she sat in the car, her hands tightly clasped upon the full-skirted, rose-colored dinner frock. More than anything she wished to be alone rather than to have more people and emotions to meet. "see-saving" added to the crowded day. She felt she could not bear having her heart lifted one moment and then dashed down the next, the certain result of an evening with Toby and Clare and Payne. More, she was frightened, feeling once more the stirring of something evil in the air, hatred and passions unleashed, the gates of decorum unlocked. But it was the thought of Clare that did that to her while to be with Payne made her feel that her nerves, simply and naturally, meeting as Ir thelr fields had known already say would and that they were Payne's own kind of people. Nor were her fears for Toby alone. She was frightened for herself and for her own kind of happiness. For the little while she had been with Payne that afternoon she was not the sensible young person she had to be. It was as though when she was with him she ceased to be anything other than a girl rapturously in love. But she was not in love with him. She did not know him and she had not the right to know him. It was a case of arrested development, like falling in love with a movie star one has never seen. It was childish and absurd. It was alarming and unforgiveable.

She was trembling when she got out of the car and walked to the club where old Miss, who had known her all her life, bowed and opened the door for her, his black face breaking into fine pleats when he smiled.

"Sho glad to see you, Miss Meegan. So glad to see you. Mistah Toby he already here. Some Mistah Toby, always jokin' . . ."

"How are you, Moss?"

"Jes fine. But ah'm sho no good when it's cold."

with the assault troops received extra hardening of their muscles and spirit without the target being attacked when they went in. Once the ship's few hours before the convoy sailed, in conference with the Canadian commander, Lieutenant-Colonel Stanley Todd.

In his ship's room the General, having "shaved and had a bath" and looking fit as a prize fighter by eating, "We are going in July the 9th (Friday)," one of the officers says they told him in the room. Asked if it was a "medical examination," the Commander smiled and only replied, "Breakfast."

Speaking of the difficulties the opposition might encounter, the officer said that their battle probably there would be trouble getting the vehicles, tanks and such ashore on the beaches where the Canadians were to land. He said, however, particular beaches had been selected because they afforded a better opportunity of establishing bridgeheads and getting ashore with the defenders at various coastal sectors.

The G.O.C. said his forces would give consideration to the rallied opposition, but told us there probably would be inclement on the amount of press copy which could be sent over the army wireless owing to submissions in the early stages because of army operational requirements.

It wasn't until we were several days out in the Atlantic that the troops got the first intimation of their destination. A map of the Mediterranean was pinned on the decks, reading. The following message has been received from the Rear Admiral of the fleet:

On War to Mediterranean

"We are on our way to the Mediterranean to take part in the greatest combined operation ever attempted. We shall be able to give fuller information later."

This was great news to the fighting men and their British comrades aboard. They went about their last shipboard training with new enthusiasm. At last they knew it wasn't just another "scale manoeuvre."

A few days after the whole secret came out and the complete details of the Sicilian invasion were told both officers and men. It was a dramatic moment aboard every ship in the convoy when the senior army officer on each revealed the target and plans.

On our ship the officers were called together in the lounge and the youthful commanding officer of one regiment stood up. The messengers were tense as he said, "Canadian forces are now part of the 8th Army that is going to invade."

He spoke slowly and forcibly. "Naval forces and army forces are available to the Allied Command," he said, "Our airforces are equal to anything the enemy can produce and we have sufficient reserve."

The Colonel told us the composition of the 8th Army in this operation, and said the United States forces would operate on the left flank of the Canadians.

Ocellous Tasks

Continuing, he pointed out, "The protection of the fleet is the vital task of the airforce, too, for such a large number of Allied shipping is involved in the operation; so close support for our ground troops cannot be expected until later."

With this sobering note to the general effect that the United could up his speech by giving an outline of the tasks of the various corps and divisions.

He concluded with, "All of us as Canadians have everything to be confident about and every incentive. This operation is one in which we go in with every advantage and at with years of training behind us.

"We go into this show with our hearts and clean consciences and with confidence in our men and officers. We go to win in the shortest possible time and with the least casualties. Everyone of us knows this operation is going to be the most exacting across the world ever read about.

"Our regiments will gain for themselves honor and for their country."

The Colonel sat down and for a few moments the officers talked. The officers were silent. Then Sam Scott-Cowley became spokesman. "We could read confidence in their minds and sincerity in their words," he said, as he shook hands with the Colonel, and, gathering the troops together, repeated the phrase.

Guess About Sicily

The troops listened intently, and when it was over there was no cheering or demonstration. They knew that they were the magnificent of the operations and it took a while for them to grasp it all.

When they broke off, though, there was a great furor, joking and slapping each other on the back, and some good guessing was said about what it would be Sicily went around gleefully, saying "I told you so."

We had several moments of excitement as sometimes were reported in our vicinity, and the depth charges were dashed about, dropping depth charges right and left.

Sicilian maps were issued immediately to practically everyone aboard, photographs of our beaches and the Pachino Peninsula. Models of our objectives were made and distributed.

Then how well the Canadians carried out their instructions was reported by Reuter's correspondent the Canadians stormed ashore. In a short space he told how the Canadian troops established their beachheads on Pachino Peninsula, suffering only light casualties in the fighting.

All officers were given a tactical and strategic picture of the coming operation, and everything was passed on to the non-commissioned officers and men. Models and sections were briefed individually over a sand table model of Pachino Peninsula and large mosaics of aerial photos which gave them a good idea of what the country would be like.

Task Envisaged

Before many days there wasn't a man aboard who hadn't had the opportunity to get a clear idea of the whole task.

They began to talk about Italian towns they would pass through as though they had lived there for years. Lectures on Sicily and Italy telling about the people and the way of life there, as well as the island's history and geography were given over the ship's public address system and hundreds of soldiers would crowd the corridors to listen.

Interspersed with these features were detailed outlines of the jobs of each Canadian task force.

However, few of us were sure until the day the operation was to begin, and everyone listened to every Italian-filled news broadcast we could pick up on the ship's radio to learn if the bombing of Sicily had started.

When we did pick up a broadcast it was followed like a running commentary on a rugby game.

We also kept anything our maps and photos and reading up on operational orders, intelligence summaries, booklets, Italian dictionaries and phrase books could get relating to Il Duce's land.

There was little leisure time for the troops, however. They were kept busy constructed dies to conclude the afternoon program.

A feature of one attending the celebration came early and enjoyed a basket picnic lunch under the shade of the evergreens in open view of the Bay of Quinte.

Lodges Present

Following were the various lodges taking part in the parade: Campbellford, No. 36; Mohawk, No. 90, Plainfield, No. 179; Shannonville, No. 342; Belleville, L.O.B.A., No. 250; Belleville Juvenile Lodge, No. 251; Benjamin Lodge, No. 276 and Point Anne Lodge, No. 2026.

County Master for Sixth Hastings, A. R. Charlton, acted as marshall of ceremonies for the official program, following the parade of lodges through the village and he formed the gathering the day had been planned when it was learned the other celebration was being held in the immediate vicinity. Lodges not attending other meetings were invited to attend.

Harry Rollins, Mayor of Belleville, spoke briefly in tribute to the young men of the Orange Order now in the active services. Mr. Rollins spoke on "Citizenship," and stated that while "the country owes no person a living, it does owe the right to make a living." A great debt of gratitude was owed to the youth who are now fighting their country's battle, assured Mr. Rollins.

Principles of Freedom

Like the first speaker of the afternoon, Rev. F. C. Beamer, of Roslin, stated that the minds of the people on this, the 53rd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, were on their boys who would be attending if it were not for the war now raging across the two hemispheres.

The boys overseas were fighting for the same principles that their forefathers fought for—freedom and liberty and the principles of Democracy. For these reasons the Orange Order existed.

Protestantism and Orangism were not dead, announced the last speaker, but were going ahead by leaps and bounds. Orangism had resisted the efforts of separatists for over 100 years in Canada. It is still 100 per cent. British, owing to its loyalty to King and Country and to liberty.

Toast Called Nation

Rev. Porter Bennett, Plattsmouth Church of Christ, who is visiting friends in the district, told his listeners that he was a minister for division. Rather it was the time for united action.

"We have no fight with the Roman Catholic Church or with the Knights of Columbus," he said. "All we want is a united nation, freedom of speech, of the press and of religion, if we are not united, we will be in the final victory to be won."

The speaker claimed that Germany, Italy and Japan had a place in the sun planned and stated that if the United Nations sat around the table leading the Axis powers and with France and England at each other's throats, they would be laying the foundation for another war to be participated in by their grandsons.

Blames Axis Leaders

"It is not the German people or the Italian people who are at fault," he said, "Rather it is their leaders who are at fault." Using very language which every young boy might understand, Mr. Bennett claimed that Hitler and Mussolini should be "taken to the woodshed."

"We are in this war to fight for the return of the right to the individual. Anything else is futile and our boys' sacrifice will have been in vain."

Cites Principles of Orangeism

Mr. George H. Hobbs, Federal member for South Hastings, referred to the principle on which the Orange Order is founded. "We in Canada need only one scheme, the public school; only one National Anthem; only one language, the English language, and only one flag, the Union Jack," he said.

Musical entertainment was interspersed between the addresses with Mrs. H. Bailey and Mr. Beazer in duets, solos and Miss Gertrude Simmons rendering a piano solo. Jack Cowley played the accompaniment for the two vocalists.

Winners in Sports

Winners in the events during the sports program were as follows: Boys' 3/4 yd. dash, 8 to 10 yrs., Russell Bennett; Girls' 25 yd. dash, 8 to 10 yrs., Marilyn Hall; Boys' 50 to 10 yrs., Ross Cowley; Girls' 50 yd. dash, 10 to 13 yrs., Jean Sedore; Boys' 75 yd. dash, 13 to 14 yrs., Maurice Bradshaw; Girls' 75 yd. dash, 10 to 14 yrs., Audrey Green; Boys' 100 yd. dash, 14 to 16 yrs., Maurice Bradshaw; Girls' 100 yd. dash, 14 to 16 yrs., Audrey Green; Boys' 220 yd. dash, Maurice Bradshaw; Boys' three-legged race, 13 to 14 yrs., Ken Carleton and Maurice Bradshaw; Girls' three-legged race, 13 to 14 yrs., Jean Sedore and Eva Gilmore; Boys' three-legged race, 14 to 16 years, J. ports in attacks on convoys attending to reach Sicily. Attacking pilots said they scored torpedo hits on two transports whose decks were burned, with fires spotted.

The Axis has been trying desperately to reinforce Sicily, the Allied communiques said, but the attempts have been frustrated to the extent of a minimum number of troops and tons of equipment which have been sent to the bottom of the Mediterranean.

Hundreds of Allied planes were reported to have been destroyed during the first nine months of the campaign, and a total of 11 Allied craft in the same period.

Report Airborne, Attacked

Cheaters reported last night that the Allies had landed airborne troops at Agrigento, four miles northwest of Porto Empedocle, on the coast road and communications that ran into the Captured Italian airfield. (Thanks Allies, thanks from the 8th Army's advance.)

Further losses brought in reports of Axis trade convoy movements, both whether they were reinforcements for new attacks against the determined or an attempt to shift enemy forces to the northeast to help the British and Canadians, we may not be sure.

In any case, enemy reserves have been agreed that Axis commanders had been out-generaled and taken completely by surprise.

The position of the Allied armies—the British and Canadians in the East, the Canadians in the centre and the Americans in the West—with a cluster of mountains between—caused the Axis a central point at which to launch their counter-attack and forced them to make a choice between the three advancing forces.

When they did strike it was against the Americans. The fourth Panzer Grenadier Division, with "not less than 45 tanks" as the official description put it, hit the American sector on the shore. A powerful barrage from Allied warships and Malta helped to break up the attack.

Heavy Fighting at Marsala

During these critical hours, the Axis radio station Palermo mentioned an Allied threat in the neighborhood of Mazara del Vallo, from the same army on the extreme western end of Sicily.

There was no official confirmation from Allied headquarters of an attack in that area, but the threat of a landing in the west may have contributed to the enemy's delay in launching an all-out attack against the Allied bridgeheads on the east.

Should the British and Canadians succeed in reaching Messina and continue to hold the coast road down to Cape Peloro, the Axis army would be cut off from Sicily and would have to cross the Messina Strait to the Italian mainland.

Eisenhower Visit Surprises

Gen. Eisenhower's visit to the invasion zone caught soldiers and correspondents completely by surprise.

John Gunther, representing the International News Press, witnessed his arrival and said that the Allied commander-in-chief stepped from the amphibious jeep that brought him ashore from the transport, walked to the nearest beach officer and said:

"Now I'm here. Do? I am Gen. Eisenhower."

His watched landing operations for a while, then held a brief conference with Maj. Gen. U.S. officers.

Later he talked with Canadian troops on the Pachino Peninsula and toured the immediate countryside before boarding the amphibious jeep again for the return to the vessel.

attempted to explain the week by Hitler's absence from the Nazi directions, from the disappearance.

When these failed the Nazis were reported to have buttressed their own home defence or certain by asking wartime defences and task barriers to forestall a Russian final attack. The Germans themselves then turned north and attempted a break-through in a narrow sector not were again repulsed, the spokesman Jerry said.

In engagements where the Russians met the invaders tank for tank, Red Star continued, the results proved that the Soviet "T-34" tank was far superior to the highly-touted German tigers.

The government newspaper said the Tigers carry four-inch armor-plate, but Russian 76-millimeter and caterpillar treads have proved not to be vulnerable to Soviet shell fire.

SOLDIER OF THE SOIL

THIS year the Canadian Farmer urgently needs help. He needs your help to produce the food so necessary for victory. Many thousands of farm workers are serving in the Forces, so that the farmer—the Soldier of the Soil—is shorthanded, but shorthanded as he is, he is called upon to produce more food than ever before. Food is one of the most powerful weapons of war. Grains, eggs, bacon, beef, fruit, vegetables —FOOD to feed our armies, our allies and our people we must have.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

You may be a school teacher, student, business or professional man, an office or store clerk—no matter what you are, if you have a few hours, days, weeks, or months of free time this summer, you can do your country and the farmer a great and patriotic service by helping out on the farm. You may be inexperienced, but you still can help. You will find work on the farm healthy and congenial. It will give you the satisfaction of feeling that you have brought Victory nearer.

What you should do NOW!

Consult any special local committee or office established to deal with farm labour placements in your city or town; or Write the Director of the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Program at the capital of your province; or Get in touch with your nearest Employment and Selective Service Office.

Eight Lodges Attend Orange Celebration at Point Anne

(Staff Reporter)

Although it failed to measure up to other celebrations in the matter of attendance, the "Invitation basket picnic" Twelfth of July celebration held at Point Anne Monday afternoon nevertheless was made up for in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers.

Attended by eight lodges from the Belleville part of the county and from Campbellford, together with a considerable number of visitors, the latest celebrants, the day was a real success. A parade of visiting lodges through the village street and back to the picnic grounds was the start of the official program, following which the basket picnic and a few of their activities enjoyed races and other sports, the latter addressed on the principles of Orangeism were heard from a platform constructed dies to conclude the afternoon program.

A feature of one attending the celebration came early and enjoyed a basket picnic lunch under the shade of the evergreens in open view of the Bay of Quinte.

Anglo-Canadian Troops Advancing Upon Catania

U.S. Seventh Army Makes 15-Mile Gain Capturing Naro and Two Airfields

SUPPORTED BY NAVY

(By DANIEL DE LUCE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 14 —(CP)—Western News Agency today recorded an Algiers radio broadcast saying that the Anglo-Canadian and American forces "are storming the walls of the city of Catania" in Sicily.

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 14 (AP)—The British 8th Army, spearheaded by Canadian 1st Division, is rushing from fallen Augusta upon Catania, Axis way up the East Sicilian coast, is meeting only rear resistance, and the American 7th Army has swung west in a 15-mile advance and seized Naro, 15 miles from Agrigento, Allied headquarters announced today.

Augusta fell Monday.

Paving the way of the land forces with a storm of bombs, British naval forces bombarded the Catania airfield and American warships on the western wing shelled Porto Empedocle and Punta Olivo, it was announced.

American troops have captured Naro after hard fighting and the airdrome and town of Comiso, west of Ragusa, Allied headquarters in Algiers announced.

Axis Forces Missing

Porto Empedocle is on the south coast about 40 miles from Agrigento, where aerial reconnaissance has discovered the Axis forces are massing for counter-attack, and Punta Olivo is about nine miles north of Sciacca.

The smash northward of the 8th Army of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery followed the entry into Augusta Thursday, 19 mile north of Syracuse and 36 miles south of Catania, by a British naval force of destroyer at 4 p.m. Monday, and occupation of that strategic port by British troops.

The communique confirmed the capture of Ragusa, inland communications centre, and said the capture of Augusta, with harbor and installations undamaged, was materially aided by time and accurate bombardment from the sea.

Naro Is Stronghold

Bolstered by a continuous stream of reserves, Allied troops have succeeded in pushing the mountains of southeastern Sicily and are engaged in fighting for Catania, along the semi-circular Licata-Augusta front, Axis reports reported today.

The German communique, broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by The Associated Press, said that "German and Italian troops are still engaged in heavy fighting in the central and coastal troops, which are trying to attack . . . our positions in the mountains and southern of Catania."

The German Transocean News Agency said fierce fighting had developed in the mountains against Allied parachutists and airborne troops landed behind the Axis Catania troops landed near Catania, midway up the east coast, have been wiped out, the news agency declared.

Italians Assist Advances

The Italian high command acknowledged that Allied forces had passed across the southern coastal strip of the island into the mountains and said the British 8th, Armys, was advancing on Catania in the drive up the east coast.

Disclosure that Allied forces are standing on the edge of the Catania plain was viewed here as an indication the first great battle of the Sicilian campaign was about to begin, as may already have started.

Many Axis airfields are concentrated in the area and the opposing armies must be fought for first time on terrain suitable for manoeuvring large and armored units.

The communique admitted that British, Canadian and United States troops have been continuously reinforced since their landings and now are in firm possession of the entire coast stretching from the Augusta naval base on the east to Licata on the western end of their salient.

German broadcasts, meanwhile, took on a less confident tone.

Altogether, the Allies captured five additional towns yesterday to bring the total to 13 and brought in more Axis captives.

(Mussolini's radio declared from Rio, dated July 13, said Canadian alone had taken some 1,000 prisoners).

Allied naval forces maintained close stranglehold on the west around Sicily which has been so effective that there have been no reports of attacks on British and American troops by enemy surface craft in four days.

(Although Catania reported earlier there were no Royal Canadian ships taking part in the Sicilian campaign, a Canadian Press London dispatch last night indicated that there were probably many Canadian officers and men, trained in such amphibious operations, now taking part in the campaign.)

German and Italian planes continued their sporadic harassment of Allied shipping, as well as Allied ships and merchantmen — the greatest invasion fleet assembled in the Mediterranean — but the Axis air attacks had an amazing lack of punch.

Twenty bombers were reported hit in the Sicily and Pantelleria, Tunisia and Sicily to avail the powerful Allied air armada for the softening food for Sicilian civilians.

Make Test Flights

Military observers said a major test has just ahead, predicting that the invasion within the next few days —perhaps within the next 24 hours —would indicate if the forces must face a desperate Axis counter-attack designed to protect the island's supply lines.

Thirty spots for shoredown battle in which the Navy will play a leading role, are the Plain of Catania, which lies below the Plain British to their northward march toward Messina, and the Plain of Licata on the southern coast of Sicily in the area of the American troops.

There has been little mention of tank activity in dispatches from the battle-front, but Berlin and Rome radio has reported the Germans and Italians had put up a strong tank defence.

Despite terrain and the absence of tanks, Allied troops have already traversed apparently account for the Allied failure to make much use of heavy equipment brought ashore.

Canadian troops, holding the centre of the line, brought along at least one unit of armor, a reconnaissance regiment. The unit apparently has been held in the landing area to protect the beachhead while operations, implicating to observers the existence of a strong line in the Catania plain.

Allied air forces have kept up the attack on the communication lines of the two-mile strait separating Sicily from the mainland of Europe. Allied parachutists and airborne troops landed behind the Axis Catania troops landed near Catania, midway up the east coast, have been wiped out, the news agency declared.

RHINELAND CITY OF AACHEN RAIDED DURING NIGHT

Vital Rail Junction And Site of Large War Industries Suffers Much Damage

20 BOMBERS LOST

London, July 14 — (AP) — The R.A.F. made a heavy night attack on the German Rhineland city of Aachen, centre of railway lines linking Germany with France and the Lowlands, it was announced today, and the attack was followed up in daylight by a flight of bombers and fighters ranging against targets in Western Europe.

R.C.A.F. squadrons flew with the R.A.F. formations to Aachen, an R.A.F. communique said, and seven Canadian bombers were lost in the operations.

During the night also, other R.A.F. bombers, the speedy Mosquitoes, attacked airfields in the Low Countries the communique said.

Twenty bombers were reported lost in the night and Fighter Command, which was accompanied by smashing assaults on airfields deep in Germany by 500 Mosquito bombers, Beaufighters and Typhoons. German ground defences and communications also were the targets of Spitfires and Hurricanes.

One German plane was reported destroyed over the Low Countries and two more were shot down during the day, the British announced.

Shuttle Targets

German U-boat bases in Northern France were believed to have been the objective of the daylight raid-ing force which made the second major parade across the channel that night, flying in from the British southeast coast towns congregated in the streets to watch them pass.

For nearly an hour the sky was filled with all types of planes, flying at high altitude and keeping behind them long trails of vapor that could be seen for miles in the quiet-ing sunlight.

The R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid on Aachen was preceded the night before by an R.A.F. raid on Turin, Italian communications centre which could be used for shifting Axis reinforcements to the Catania battlefield.

Saturday, July 14. (CP)—R.A.F. bombers made a heavy raid last night on the railway communications City of Aachen, an important centre of railway lines linking Germany with France and the low countries, the British announced today.

Twenty bombers were lost in the raid, the results of which were observed by the crews, the announcement said.

Bombers of the night raiders returned when large formations of R.A.F. bombers, escorted by squadrons of United States Flying Fortresses, made another sweep across the channel to continue the offensive by daylight.

Observers said that the Aachen west coast reported hundreds of American planes participated in the daylight attack, which penetrated thunderous overtone to the French coastal area and returned.

The German radio acknowledged the continuous attacks and declared had been destroyed in the raid on Aachen, which caused a large number of civilian casualties.

UNCONFIRMED STORY SAYS RAIDER AUXILIARY CRUISER

Canadians, British Take Over 40 Coastal Batteries Without Fight

London, July 14 — (CP Cable)— Canadian and British troops who landed at Pachino in the south-east Sicily as the invasion of that Italian island began last Saturday, captured intact more than 40 heavy and light coastal batteries, said a delayed dispatch to the Daily Mail today from its correspondent at the battle front.

There was no fighting for the guns because the Italian crews encamped without firing a shot, the dispatch said.

It added that one unit of the Canadians pushing inland was "annexed" to run into an Italian cavalry regiment.

They gave chase with jeeps and trucks and moved the enemy down with Tommy guns."

500 Canadian Naval Men Take Part in Landings; Belleville Boy in List

(Additional Names)

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent
Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 14 (CP Cable)—It was estimated today that 500 Canadian naval men took part in the Sicilian landings as a detachment of the Royal Canadian Navy, the Royal Navy and combined operations staff.

There were no casualties in the two R.C.N. flotillas which have returned to port, an R.C.N. spokesman announced today. Other flotillas have not yet returned.

Many of the Canadians seamen ferried in British troops who were part of the first wave of the invading forces to come ashore on the southeastern corner of Sicily.

Many Veterans of Dieppe

The majority of the Canadian seamen were veterans of the Dieppe and North African landings last year. Consequently they were perfectly trained for their task. They came from all parts of Canada.

Besides the 500 Royal Canadian navy flotillas there were many Canadians serving with the Royal Navy units. They were included in the 500 total.

The first picture of the part these Canadians played in the Sicilian landings was brought back from Algiers by Lt.-Cmdr. Ralph Hosmer, R.C.N., of Toronto, Press Relations Officer who was ashore briefly on Sicily.

The Canadian sailors were not actually under fire during operations for the landings a few days before the assault. Gathered informally on the decks of ships carrying them to the battle zone, they fought the time away intently while officers outlined the operation, telling them what part they would play in the landing was scheduled.

Briefing Officers

Briefing officers used a map of Sicily and the waters around it to illustrate the plan of operations. Then they went over it again with the men when they warned what was coming. The seamen listened attentively, nonchalantly on their cigarettes and pipes. But when told Canadian soldiers would be in the first landing force they "were simply delighted."

The story of Petty Officer R. H. Randall, Belleville, Ont., one of the trained these Canadians were. Although he was wounded in the leg under fire a heavy sea was running when a line tossed by the propeller, forcing him to drop his gun.

In the darkness he attempted to clear the stern but realized he would not be able to, so he decided to continue with one engine and by skilful manoeuvering was in the end able to have the engine up to at the proper time.

Shot Gunner Thrashed

Some assault craft brought back shot gunner Thrashed by the landings. A wounded British army officer had shot and killed him and thanked his crew. The coxswain was W.-O. Tiner of Victoria, B.C. Gunners.

Excellent said the morale of the men was "tremendous". Before the landing operations started, he went before decks to see what the men were doing and counted as he men card games in one mess. Others were writing letters, were dressed and ready to go ashore. They were a motley crew in khaki and navy blue, but Petty Officer Rech were the inevitable tin hat

AB. Gerald Doran Included in Naval Landing Party

First indications that a Belleville boy had taken part in the Allied landings in Sicily came through a Canadian Press story this morning from Allied Headquarters in North Africa, which listed Ab. Gerald Doran was included in the naval landing party.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, 31 Green Street, Ab. Doran, 24, enlisted with the R.C.N.V.R., two years ago and received his call-up papers in February. He, with several other Belleville boys left for the east to be boarded by the Royal Navy.

Ab. Doran's parents are now in bliss, it was learned from his parents this morning. During his training period he was stationed at Cornwall, Ontario, where he was also seen active in Algiers.

He was born in Belleville and attended St. Michael's School, a member of St. Faith's Ford of the Catholic Intelligencer.

FIRST DIVISION OF CANADIANS FIGHTS IN SICILY

Oldest Formation Of Canada's Army Now Part of Famed British 8th Army

IN FRANCE IN '40

London, July 14 — (CP) — The Canadian 1st Division, which landed in Sicily last Saturday and now is fighting as part of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army, has not more than 24 years of training experience.

The 1st Division is the veteran formation of the Canadian Army. It arrived in Britain in December, 1939, with Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. Mc-Naughton then Major-General as Divisional Commander.

For security reasons it has not yet been announced which general officer commands the division in Sicily.

The division had been on the move for several times in the earlier years of the war. Some of its units went to Scotland in the spring of 1940, on their way to Norway, where they were scheduled to land in Narvik.

But they were turned back before embarking when the British diversionary attacks further north proved fruitless. Shortly after-wards the Norwegian campaign ended.

In June, 1940, just before France fell, a brigade of the 1st division was sent to the assistance of the British plan to send a new expeditionary force to aid France. But the military situation had deteriorated there so rapidly that it was decided to recall the brigade, which had penetrated deeply into France without, however, meeting the enemy.

In 1941 the 1st Division provided the troops that occupied Spitsbergen, in the Arctic Ocean, and throughout without encountering the Nazis. The Division carried out all military objectives on the island and returned to Britain.

How the division at last in full action after its long wait.

London, July 14 (CP)—A London Daily Express Correspondent reported in a dispatch describing a cruiser off Augusta, July 13, that the Greek cruiser Averoff, flagship of the Greek destroyer, The dispatch said that Augusta, a town of 17,000, had been evacuated after a naval bombardment and was "only one man" could be found in it later.

FULL RESOURCES OF MARTINIQUE FOR ALLIED USES

Henri Hoppenot Takes Over Authority From Admiral Robert

LONG A HOLD-OUT

Washington, July 14—(AP)—Martinique, for many months the only French non-Axis-occupied territory to hold out against operations of the fight to liberate France, returned to the fold today and placed its ships and resources at the disposal of the United Nations.

It was significant to many observers that the formal transfer of allegiance comes on the 154th anniversary of the storming of the Bastille—a revolutionary act that marked the birth of French freedom.

Henri Hoppenot, delegate of the provisional French National Committee of Liberation, was due to arrive at Fort De France today by seaplane from Algiers, over from Admiral Georges Robert the authority he formerly exercised as French high commissioner of the Antilles.

The State Department last night made clear that Admiral Robert had decided on his own to transfer his authority to a representative of the French committee in Algiers.

$2,000-Ton Aircraft Carrier

In announcing arrangements for the transfer of authority, the State Department said Henri Hoppenot had assured the United States Government that the "facilities and resources" of the French islands would be mobilized to the fullest extent in the war against the Axis, and that "all presently immobilized French naval and merchant ships" in Martinique would be made available.

CORVETTE SAVES 129 SAILORS OF MERCHANT MARINE

Surprises and Attacks Enemy U-Boat, Which Probably Damaged, Off N. African Coast

STORY OF RESCUE

Ottawa, July 14 —(CP)— The navy reported today the Canadian corvette Dianthus, has given 129 torpedoed merchant seamen in the Mediterranean "a ride" on a specially refitted with "probably damaging" a U-boat off the North African supply lines.

The Germans saw and surprised the U-boat on the surface at night by the light of star shells dropped over a Mediterranean convoy by enemy torpedo bombers. She attacked with depth charges, but the crash-dived in the nick of time. Dianthus, however, kept after her at close range, is though to have damaged her badly.

"We couldn't sink," said Leading Seaman Ernest Hall, R.C.N.V.R., of Pine Falls, Man. "We laid them right over her. And we could smell and see there afterward was diesel oil and bubbles."

The Dianthus was on the sea lanes to the North African invasion ports when the U-boat attacked with torpedo bombers and submarines.

"We were zigzagging when the moon to go down, and was dropping flares on us in the pitch-black night," said the captain, Lieut. (S.) R. Pavillard, R.C.N.R., of Halifax. "Submarines and aircraft attacked at the same time. They were ready to give us a merciless drubbing for they could see us but we could clear the decks and fire back at them."

Allies have mastered in the Mediterranean would be virtual suicide, Excellent at the way the navy say the Italian fleet is now under two commanders-chief in Spezia on the Ligurian Sea, and the other at Taranto on the Gulf of Taranto.

It is almost impossible for them to be joined into a unit powerful enough to threaten Allied supply lines, observers say, since they could be united only by passing through the Straits of Messina—the two mile channel between Sicily and the mainland—or by steaming through the Sicilian Narrows between them from the north. French African coast, and the Allied air and naval bases in Sicily would be sufficient to block passage.

Two Destroyers Damaged and Two Ships Are Sunk

Allied Aircraft Also Smash 160 Trucks and Six Locomotives

7 PLANES LOST

By DANIEL De LUCE
Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 14 — (AP) — Allied bombers and fighters spread a flaming path of destruction across Sicily and its surrounding waters yesterday, sinking two merchant ships and damaging two destroyers while shooting down 43 Axis aircraft for a loss of seven of their own, an Allied communique announced today.

The battle lasted from dawn until the last flight of day and then continued after sundown when the night bombers and fighters took over.

The day's bag included 160 trucks, 6 freight cars and six locomotives destroyed in savagely efficient blows at the enemy's vital communications behind the lines.

Forked Planes Smashed

Smashing at the most important enemy fighter bases in advance of the racing British 8th Army, which includes the Canadian 1st Division, Americans wrought havoc among parked enemy fighter planes at Catania, with 95 per cent of the bombs reported hitting within the target area.

Other devastating smashes were made against the Milo airfield at Trapani on the northwest corner of Sicily, where 15 enemy planes and 15 interceptors were beaten off, and at Enna, a vital communications centre in the heart of Sicily.

Major credit for the heavy toll of Axis shipping north of Sicily and the straits between, went to the fleet Swordfish fighter-bombers of the Americans who had been assigned to the task.

Ships Two-Day Toll

The Allied airmen have sunk four enemy freighters and damaged three destroyers and two troop-carrying transports in violent attacks. The operations seriously interfered with the enemy's efforts to rush reinforcements into the island.

Three out of six Messerschmitts which rose to challenge the bombers were destroyed by bomber gunners during one flight, and the others were shot down a total of 46 out of 143 enemy warplanes.

It contained raids Monday night by R.A.F. and American bombers, and the Allied air forces were reported to be dropping all over Sicily.

The first report that the night raid was so full of our aircraft that we were falling over each other in the dark and what in the world they would she do with 940?

Not Hard to Solve Mystery Why Italian Fleet Does Not Fight

London, July 14 (CP)—The mystery of why the Italian fleet does not fight is not hard for the Allies to solve, British naval observers said today, although they did not look for any challenge from Mussolini's warships to the landing of Allied troops on the inner side of the heel on the Gulf of Taranto.

It is almost impossible for them to be joined into a unit powerful enough to threaten Allied supply lines, observers say, since they could be united only by passing through the Straits of Messina—the two mile channel between Sicily and the mainland—or by steaming through the Sicilian Narrows between them from the north. French African coast, and the Allied air and naval bases in Sicily would be sufficient to block passage.

Police were notified, but it is difficult to trace four day old ducks, especially wi calls inflating the neighborhood.

CARS IN COLLISION NEAR DESERONTO

Extensive property damage resulted to two motor cars on Highway No. 2, ten miles west of Deseronto, shortly after midnight Tuesday, when the vehicles collided, Provincial Constable Driscoll investigated and found the vehicles were driven by Leonard McDermott of Read and Annie L. Rutherford, 23 William St., Napanee. Extensive property damage resulted to front fenders, grills and left front wheels. Both drivers contended they were on their proper side of the centre line of the highway when the collision occurred, police reported. The total damage was estimated at three hundred dollars.

CHILD RUNS IN FRONT OF AUTO

Four-year-old Gloria Lisle, of 10 Chest Bridge Hill, was knocked to the street pavement in front of his mother's apartment early this day when he ran in front of a motor car driven by Wallace Salisbury, 153½ Church St. The driver of the car stopped, immediately drove the little fellow to the nearest surgery of Dr. C. S. Cronk where it was learned only superficial bruises had resulted. Police were also notified and Sergeant Arnott investigated.

Is Charged With Failure to Report

Charged with failing to report for military duty, 20-year-old Rosemary Bandy, of Carlow Township was arraigned by Cpl. Wm. Beatty of the R.C.M.P. and Provincial Constable S. Fairchild near the Bandy home Saturday. It was the second case of alleged intentions to evade compulsory military training recorded in Hastings County since the outbreak of war. Bandy claims to be a conscientious objector police say.

Today the accused man was arraigned before Miss Mary Boiler, local Justice of the Peace, and remanded in custody to face the charge in Thursday's county police court. He is officially charged with failing to report for military training on a set date, as contrary to section 3 of the National Selective Service Mobilization regulations.

Compulsory Labor Transfer Order Not As Drastic As Parents Feared

Despite parents' fears to the contrary, recent amendments to the compulsory labor transfer order now embracing youths in the 16-19 year brackets, is not so sweeping as first impressions might indicate, it was stated yesterday by Mr. H. H. Read of the National Selective Service following receipt of call from sanitorium.

Following publication of the Fourth Compulsory Labor Transfer Order parents had anxiously interviewed Mr. Read thinking their young sons may be transferred to factories or other work some distance from their homes.

"Certainly it is not the intention of the Selective Service officers to break up homes, nor is it their intention to interfere with the future education of the boys under the present order," assured Mr. Read.

Regardless of the jobs to which boys coming under the order were transferred to, they would be entirely free to return to school each fall for full semester opens, if such was their plans, he said.

Most Register

He pointed out, however, that all boys having reached the age of 16 years and not yet 18 years of age who are engaged in jobs coming under the Fourth Compulsory Employment Transfer Order must register at their nearest National Selective Service office. A penalty was order called for all boys registering when they reached their 16th birthday. Therefore all boys who are 16 years of age are not directed into essential work if they are not already working at such occupation.

Industries and jobs from which workers may expect to be transferred from are listed in the newspaper labor transfer advertisements.

As an illustration of what might occur in the transfer of youth from one job to another, Mr. Read stated a boy in the building trade with his parents may be required to go to Mines or possibly to Dockyard. Under present intentions, however, they will not be required to go such a distance that they will be unable to get home for weekends.

One possibility of the labor transfer order is that boys may be directed into district canning factories for which they may be paid by a considerable demand for such labor.

Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative leader, in a broadcast address last night said his party believed in the revision of teaching methods in schools to that vocational training may unity be combined with the training that may learn at school how to make a living.

2 Italian Airdromes Drenched With Bombs

Cairo, July 14 — (AP) — Heavy bombers from the Middle East Command dropped new tons of bombs, of high explosive and incendiaries on Crotone and Vibo Valentia airdromes in Italy yesterday, causing huge fires and "great damage," a United States communique announced today.

Fifty tons were dropped on these bases in the daylight assault at Vibo Valentia, the communique said, and 30 tons on Crotone where observers of the administration building and munitions sheds were exploded. The airfield is located near Reggio Calabria on the Italian toe.

At least eight aircraft were seen burning on the ground after the attack.

At Crotone, which is on the arch of the instep on the Gulf of Taranto, numerous oil fires were started and huge columns of black smoke were seen to rise from the airfields.

Although Crotone is supposed to be the base for enemy fighter aircraft no fighters rose to meet any of the raiding formations and all the U. S. bombers returned to their bases, the communique said.

Bancroft —(Special)— The annual Orange celebration was held here on Monday with throngs of people congregating in the village for the great event from all outlying districts. Several lodges from nearby villages formed in with the local lodge No. 624 to swell the parade which formed up at the northern end of the village and marched through on Main Street to the agricultural grounds, where the events of the day were carried out. Weather was most appropriate for the day with a somewhat overcast sky screening at least a part of the blazing heat from the throngs of people assembled at the grounds. The program during the afternoon consisted of races, softball contests and speeches. Mr. Graham, Grand Orange organizer from Kingston was present for the occasion and took part in the parade. Wor. Bro. R. M. Price of Bancroft was in charge of the local lodge No. 624, assisted by County Master F. L. Turner. China's Faith

Despite the ravages of war, China has the vision to see that her young are educated and that her schools are guarded. Though she has been facing the ruthless Japanese for years who have hungered for her territory in order to carry out a plan of ruthless expansion of Japanese authority at the expense of her neighbor, China has housed her leading schools in a village and there they are flourishing. The National Central University is said to have nearly four thousand students, National Chungking University one thousand, Nankai Middle School one thousand six hundred, National Central School of Technology one hundred and Szechuan Provincial Normal College four hundred and fifty. Other schools are said to be well attended.

China knows that her future depends a great deal upon education which means progress and her great leaders cannot help having visions of a great China, as a model of the virtues of a noble state. She can look on the great past in which her teachers taught lessons that can today bear repetition and she has the lessons taught by the history of the rest of the world. Most of these lessons intensely tragic as in the instance of the modern Axis nations led by brigands, desperadoes and loot-seekers like Hitler and Mussolini in the East she has the lesson of her degraded neighbor, Japan, who tries to rule with ruthless and selfish hand. And on the other hand she had the lessons of expanding freedom in the democratic world.

The wisdom of China is proverbial. In her trials she is the very expression of calmness. And the thoughts which she gives to such things as education through her great leaders gives the assurance that she will come to make one of the most magnificent contributions to the world ever made.

Security in Canada Bonds

At this time in Canada more people have the Canadian Government bonds and war savings certificates than ever held governmental securities before in history. It is sincerely to be hoped that they realize what wealth and security they have in these guarantees of their own country and of their individual wealth.

They have been privileged to learn this lesson in a time of peace, that the bonds of the Dominion are the highest pledge they can find for they are sound. In fact they can be said to be as sound as the heart of the Canadian people for they race is an industrious people, honest and law-abiding, who labor in shops and in fields and mines, or in offices, to produce the wealth which is Canada's. This is true wealth and with wealth of spirit the only wealth worth while in a nation.

There is not a single person in Canada or outside Canada that does not believe in the value of Canadian securities. So it is desirable that they ill never forget this lesson that they have had, of the wealth of their nation's bonds, victory bonds and war savings certificates.

Yet there are some who are unwary and experienced and who may listen to the dangerous talk of glib salesmen who may try to sell "something better" in exchange for Government bonds. But there is nothing better than Canadian Government bonds and nothing that can give the same sense of permanent security as Government bonds. Those who have through the needs of this war time invested in Government securities should preserve them against every pressure or suggestion to sell for the purpose of speculation in ventures which might turn out disastrously. Why should one give up the reality of a sound bond of one's country and especially in time of war when there is nothing to match it?

He or she who possesses a bond of Canada has something that cannot be equalled. Whatever conditions may arise it brings in a steady rate of interest and return of the face value of the bond at maturity of the period for which it was issued.

All should beware against irresponsible promoters. Nearly everyone now has bonds and hence the need of the warning which the Ottawa Better Business Bureau has seen fit to issue and that is, "If you are urged to cash in your bonds for 'investment' in an unknown proposition, watch out!" Carefully investigate. It is patriotism to keep the war bonds you buy and they are one of the best investments one can make with the guarantee of absolute security.

The Bureau says that war bonds are rapidly becoming the average family's most important savings reservoir and that such investments and securities are always primary lures for racketeers with their schemes for persuading people to cash in their bonds and turn over the money on irresponsible promises of getting rich quick. The Bureau notes that "such propositions are usually 'good' for they have to seem plausible to get our money." Some may appear to be an opportunity for one to make a good profit. But unfortunately, in too many deals, the promoter is the only one to profit.

So people are advised to keep their bonds for peace of mind as their worth while value is absolutely guaranteed.

It would be a good thing if every citizen owned such bonds and those who hold them and know their full value add to them whenever it is possible to do so.

What Public Will Want

(Monetary Times)

Reports from the United States Chamber of Commerce suggest that after the war ends there will be a demand for:

2,100,000 motor cars
1,600,000 mechanical refrigerators
1,200,000 radio sets
1,200,000 electric washing machines
900,000 electric irons
600,000 sewing machines
900,000 new homes, and household furniture for 1,200,000 families.

No statement has been offered on the satisfaction of this demand; nor on the time required for its fulfillment.

A Hen's a Hen

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick has given up its attempt to make better hens than those created by nature. For 16 months 350 hens were kept in an artificial world of 26-hour days, each of 14 hours of light and 12 of darkness.

But the experimenters learned that the hens so blessed by science did not lay any more eggs than when they scratched around in the barnyard, running from dog and cook, hearing hatchet fall.

The New Dealers who propose to make over the world and all the people in it might learn a lesson from New Brunswick's experiments, but they won't. Instead they will probably point out that subsidies and time-and-a-half for overtime weren't tried.

Depth Bomb Damage

(Pathfinder)

Sound waves in water, such as those caused by depth bombs, may kill up to eighty feet, naval medical reports show. The waves, travelling from molecule to molecule, have a speed of 4,778 feet per second, about four times that of sound in air. At distances up to 150 feet they damage the small blood vessels in the abdomen and affect the flow of blood to the viscera.

BASS ON THE LINE

Didn't remember my name or my street
Or my age or my weight or the size of my feet,
Or my troubles and cares, or the note coming due,
Or the skies overhead, were they gray, were they blue.
I had done with all thinking of me and of mine,
I was lost to the world. I'd a bass on my line!
I couldn't have told you the size of my hat;
Was the woman who passed me a thin one or fat.
I couldn't remember the faults of my foes,
'Tis strange in such moments how little one knows.
I was only aware of a thrill in my spine
And the tug and the break of a bass on my line.
Forgotten that minute were both good and bad,
The fortune I'd known and the setbacks I'd had.
The pride of achievements I'd boasted about
And fancied important were wholly snubbed out,
And that is one reason why fishing is fine,
Men drop everything else with a bass on the line.

W.I.B. OPERATION

supported by Maj.-Gen. A. D. McRae (Prog. Con., Bellechasse) and Senator B. Horner (Prog. Con. Saskatchewan.

Mr. King and Brooke Claxton, his parliamentary assistant, made most statements on W.I.B. work in the House during the afternoon, upholding the usefulness of the service.

W.I.B. Service

Mr. Claxton explained the Board did not edit news, but made material available to news agencies and other services for disseminating the information.

Mr. Claxton said:—

1. The use of Canadian news by United States publications had been "extraordinarily" increased through the Board.

2. Salaries paid Board officials were no greater than they received before they entered the government service.

3. The main purpose of the Board was to ensure the distribution of proper information in the United States.

4. The Board's work was likely to extend into the post-war period but with a different set-up.

5. The Board did not seek to suppress information by way of restribution or any newspaper work.

Board Expenses $654,000

Mr. Claxton said the sum over the $654,000 item for the Board's expenses during the current fiscal year.

Mr. King described the formation of the Board and offered, in his defence, a letter from W. R. Givens, former Kingston Whig editor, when he had been asked to make a report.

The Board was set up a year ago, Mr. Claxton said, to "do what Hitler said the Board's New York and Washington offices had achieved an undoubted success in the United States" by creased volume of Canadian news included in daily newspapers. No criticism of high salaries paid Board employees in the United States were grounded.

The W.I.B. was spending at its lower rate this year, with estimates for $654,000 for 1943-44 against $1,-945,500 for 1942-43. Its original estimate for the fiscal year 1941-42 was $1,000,000.

In Yeomanry of 1813 a troop of cavalry captured a squadron of Spanish gunboats on the Aspoque river, General Jose Pase, one of Bolivar's lieutenants and later president of Venezuela, and fifty of his men swam their horses into the stream, took the Spanish completely by surprise and captured the entire fleet without the loss of one of their men.

In connection with General Allenby's campaign in Palestine and Syria during the First World War with a troop of Arab horsemen and a small force of Australian light horse completely destroyed the Dead Sea fleet of the Turks. This fleet, consisting of several armed steamboats and motor boats, was moored at a base near the cities of ancient Sodom and Gomorrah. Izrgie and his Bedouin horsemen dashed up under cover of darkness, dismounted at the water's edge, climbed on board the vessels like pirates, overpowered the captains and crews, scuttled the vessels, remounted their horses and rode into the desert before the astonished Turks at the base realized what had been going on.

IN 1776, the first year of the American Revolution, a bunch of Maine farmers, armed with nothing but pitchforks and sword canes, routed a British gunboat that was standing at at low tide.

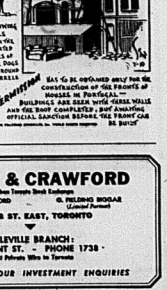
CAVALRY CAPTURE SHIPS

There are several cases in history in which naval engagements have been won by cavalry.



The most notable case of cavalry capturing a fleet occurred in the Napoleonic campaigns during the revolutionary war.

In 1794 General Charles Pichegru took command of the French army of the north operating against the British and Austrians. He invaded the low countries in the winter when travelling was easy because of the thick ice that had formed on the canals and rivers. The French entered Amsterdam January 20th. At the time the Dutch fleet was frozen in the ice near The Helder, opposite the island of Texel. Pichegru's Hussars (a cavalry unit—rode out on the ice and captured the entire fleet.

During fifteen months of campaigning in Venezuela in 1818 a force of cavalry under Jose Antonio Paez captured a squadron of Spanish gunboats on the Aspoque river. General Jose Paez, one of Bolivar's lieutenants and later president of Venezuela, and fifty of his men swam their horses into the

The paratrooper is a lonely warrior. From the time he is dropped from an invading plane, until he can join up with his comrades, he is on his own. Here a Canadian paratrooper, in invasion practice, lands on enemy territory. He may be doing the same thing in Sicily today.

Great ships of the British Navy went in with the troops and bombarded enemy defences. Here H.M.S. Durham belches smoke laying a smoke screen to cover troop landings, during a previous battle.

Paratroops are said to be used in the Allied invasion of Sicily. Here Canadian paratroopers are in rehearsal for the big push, now at hand.

Potato Flea Beetle Needs Early Attention

The first insect pest of the season that causes damage to growing plants is the potato flea beetle. These tiny, black, very active insects feed on the leaves causing numerous, shot-like holes. When flea beetles are abundant, they often do considerable damage by constantly riddling the leaves with holes. On the tubers, the larvae may tunnel along the surface and penetrate the tuber a quarter of an inch or more at right angles to the surface. This results in a type of injury commonly referred to as "pimples."

Although the flea beetle is a leaf feeder, says the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, it is difficult to control with arsenic poison alone. Therefore the regular calcium arsenate Bordeaux mixture is recommended for its control. The best results have been obtained with this material when it was applied at seven to ten day intervals throughout the growing season, either in the form of spray or dust.

Since the potato flea beetle do most of their feeding under the surface of the leaves, care should be taken that the nozzles of the sprayer or duster are adjusted so that the under surface of the leaves will be thoroughly covred with the material used.

Proper Diet Beneficial to Workers Exposed to Heat

Dr. Leonard S. Arting of Minnesota believes that people who are to be exposed to high temperatures should give attention to the diet. They should eat plenty of easily digested foods, particularly starches and sweets, with a limited quantity of fats. Plentyr of fluids, such as water, fruit juices and milk, should be included. Strong alcoholic beverages should not be used. It is better to take frequent small drinks of the fluid than to take a large amount at one time, since the latter may cause bloating and sickness to the stomach. If an ice-cold drink is taken it should be sipped slowly. Fried foods, canned meats, or highly-seasoned foods should be avoided.

It is well for persons exposed to high temperatures to avoid hurry and overwork. A cool shower before going to work, as well as after the job is done, will do much to lessen the effects of the heat. Enough time must be allowed so that the person can go to work without running or undue excitement. During his work the worker should attempt to be calm.

It has been found that salt tablets, taken about every two hours in the dose suggested by the physician, will do a great deal to ward off heat sickness. When a person sweats a great deal, salt is lost from the body and it is necessary to replace it. Sometimes it is helpful to add sugar to the salt tablet, which not only may help keep it from irritating the stomach but will also add to the person's energy. Persons who cannot take a plain salt tablet can use one which has a coating that will not dissolve until it reaches the intestines.

It is well for those who work in hot places, such as mines, rolling mills or near glass or metal furnaces to have some knowledge of heat sickness. With the proper treatment of these disorders, serious effects may be avoided.

Canners Will Require 1,350 Women, 400 Men For the Season's Pack

Although current labor needs of district canning factories are now fairly well taken care of, when the tomato canning season commences along in the first or second week in August a labor pool of approximately 1,800 workers will be needed, it was stated yesterday by Mr. H. E. Reed, manager of the local National Selective Service office.

Canning of peas and a few berries now represents the activity of canners in the district but soon tomatoes, corn and other seasonal crops will be processed with a corresponding increase in labor needs. Considerable number of workers will also be needed for picking tomatoes when the season commences, it was stated.

In the breakdown of labor requirements it was intimated that 1,350 women and approximately 400 men will be required when the canning factories are working at full capacity.

Unofficial Report Says Rommel's Plane Shot Down on Way to Sicily

London, July 14 — (CP) — A roundabout and wholly unconfirmed report said last night that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was shot down by Allied fighter pilots on his way to Sicily Tuesday. There has been no Allied claim of such an incident.

The report was said to have originated with the German underground radio station "Atlantic," which was quoted by the Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet. The Swedish report was sent to London by a Reuters news agency correspondent.

According to this version, Rommel was said to have been travelling in a transport plane under strong fighter escort en route to Sicily to take command there. He was said to have been accompanied by Col. Siegfried Westphal, Lt.-Col. Kiehl and three Italian staff officers.

Council Enjoys Cruise on Bay

An hour's discussion regarding the proposed construction of a water reservoir at the filtration plant failed to dampen the enthusiasm of city council members for a proposed boat trip down the bay Mon. evening. Following the special council meeting a number of the aldermen, with the Mayor, enjoyed a cruise down the bay in Alderman Chamberlain's "Quinlan."

Originally the moonlight cruise was intended to be taken on Alderman Jack Allin's "Skip Jack," but the boat had only been recently painted and the decks were not yet quite dry so Mr. Chamberlain's boat was used instead. After a two-hour cruise the councillors made dock about 12:15 in the morning. Mayor Rollins, with Aldermen Polwell, Allin, Potter, Pringle and Chamberlain enjoyed the cruise.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

World Still Misjudging Widows Who Show Interest in Another Man

Long before Samuel Waller was warned by his father in one of Dickens' most popular novels to beware of the widows, they were a suspect class. That she was a designing female, and not a spider, to catch the unwary fly, particularly if he's rich and considered a good sizable, was the verdict concerning the widow the world over, throughout history.

But not in everyone knows, who has given the subject passing thought, widows do not follow any stereotyped pattern. On the other hand, the widower, particularly if he's been happily married, does come under the set pattern. He's a push-over for any woman who apparently can make him comfortable. He is usually a helpless creature. The widow may look helpless and evoke sympathy, but usually she has all her faculties.

Of course, there are widows who are fascinating gay and charming everyone who comes within their orbit, just as there's the old black sheep among bombazine type of widow, immortalized as Mrs. Gummidge in one of Dickens' novels, "David Copperfield."

One thing that widows have been accused of being slowness in doing is that they have no genuine friendships with men. They don't know how to make a man comfortable, to prepare the dishes he likes when he comes to dinner, and they would try this type of magic before ratifying set in; and they don't know how to entertain him. A young girl who is on her toes to please, usually succeeds.

Widows have had experiences with men, and the technique of making a man feel at home they don't forget. Many a man would be glad to spend an evening as if they were attending a fashionable dinner party, but the widow knows how to listen to her caller as if he were the only man.

If a widow has a conscience, and most of them have, she will not take seriously the proposals of a married man. She'll have learned something that it takes several years in the man, too, to make him realize.

"Officials" Courtesy

Dear Mrs. Fairfax:

Quite recently my husband and I were guests at a party which is near a large camp. Two young men (not related) whom we had met at the camp were also guests, both second lieutenants. We would like to start a "get together" every day or two here and invite some of the men to dinner. Would it be correct for me to invite these two second lieutenants, as I have invited them several times alone) and ask them to invite four of their friends? If they are both second lieutenants, as I imagine they will be, is there any difference in rank to be noted concerning the seating at table?

—Mrs. C. O.

Since they will probably all be second lieutenants, you will not have to keep military protocol in mind as far as your seating arrangements go. But since you know two of them and they have invited you to your home, it would be best to seat the hostess's guest of honor to you and your husband.

If any of the men is of rank higher than second lieutenant, he should be given the place of honor at your right. If two are of higher rank than you are, the highest rank would be seated at your right, the other at your left.

It's Not Good Taste to Inscribe Photographs to Sweetheart

Dear Mrs. Bruckman:

A very dear friend of mine, he is in the R.C.A.F., has asked me for my photograph. What would you suggest I write on it? I certainly don't want to give him a real pal and friend and he has a lot my fiance, I would not write "With love."

—D. S.

Unless he especially asked you to write a personal note, a simple "Sincerely yours" would be better taste and more sensible not to write anything in this photograph. If you write a "pin-up girl" letter not write any more on your photograph. Even then, however, if he did ask you to inscribe it, write something conventionally friendly; for example, "Greetings from Jack Robinson" or "Best wishes" with friendly greetings and good wishes, Dora," or simply "To Bill from Doris."

No Excuse for Delay

Dear Mrs. Bruckman:

All my friends know I'm going to be married soon. I don't mind the laugh, and although the date hasn't been set, they know that plans are to be invited to the wedding. Therefore I would like them to already get their wedding presents. I'm so busy these days that I thought it would be right to wait to write my thank you notes until I write the invitations to them to my wedding, a sort of combination letter. Don't you think this will be all right?

—Eileen

No, ma'am! Postponing your acknowledgments is the height of rudeness. Write the right kind of appreciation. Your friends have been particularly kind, considering their gifts rationed at this time. For you to repay this kind-

The Marry-Go-Round

Take It From Eve

A man's best self rarely wears that surprised look, when he faces the marriage altar for the ceremony, up to the very last moment he has vaguely thought of escape.

Love is what makes a girl want to catch a man, and love is what he lets them linger too long on another girl.

These sudden marriages which are too flimsy to last more than a week, may not be a brilliant success. But the fact that two people get as far as the altar proves that, at least for a few moments, they HEART well by each other.

A "grindstone" is the stone which many a wife sometimes suspects that she got in her engagement ring, and which a husband sometimes suspects that the clergyman hung around his neck.

The modern Eve — a girl who would have laughed at the serpent and offered him an apple.

If a man has hurt your vanity by his lack of appreciation of something at him that will crush him, his forgiveness with a big gift he happens to have on his hands, and every woman knows that skin by heart.

But now the three little words that give a man the greatest thrill of joy are not "I love you!" but "Steak for dinner!"

By HELEN POLLETT

THE WORLD does change, and so do our ideas of beauty. In novels and screen with laughter. The heroine had a complexion like the lily-of-the-valley, beautifully pale. If she hero frowned, she fainted. She fainted when he didn't. Her waist could be spanned by two hands. Because of the sensible tunicated, steel riveted stays she wore, she couldn't eat more than a mouse or two at a time.

Look at our girls. See what they do to an order of steak and onions. They are health minded. No soft cushions for them. They're out and bustling. Whether or no the weather is fine, they are out. They have business to attend to, important business, the business of keeping their country to serve, fit in the manner to which it has accustomed them.

Now and then we run across a girl who doesn't like to do what she says life. She isn't happy because she is not useful; selfishness never pays. We'd like to take some of the indolent girls by the hand, and their blood streams marching, when their appetites put them in the best realm of the health-and-beauty chorus.

Daily Exercise

It should be the ambition of every woman to be fully alive, to do things, to get places.

Without daily exercises, the fibers of the body lose resiliency. Bad posture weakens muscles. Weak muscles make for poor posture; it is a vicious circle. The simple matter of breathing deeply with the arms contracted and rife extended, will tone the muscles of the throat and mid-section. With chest developed, shoulders thrown back and the muscles of the back are strong.

Good musculature means a trim, neat waist line. Surely we have time for a few minutes' exercising for. Be every day of your life, do your best to keep yourself fit. Keep the waistline, do windmill motions with your arms.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, when pop, Mr. P. must be wonderful to be a man and sit down quietly in your nice quiet home to a nice quiet meal without the faintest inkling of all the standing and waiting and struggling that it takes to assemble the meat and vegetables for even the simplest dinner in these days of rationing and shortages. It's just something you simply have no conception of, Ma said.

On the contrary, my dear, I have a very strong feeling that every housewife in these trying times ought to have a becoming uniform and a well deserved medal, pop said, and ma said, I scilare I want to 2 separate an distinct matters before I found a piece of meat fit to go into a civilized oven. And the butchers manners! They've gone with the primordial mud, and yet the butchers are perfect Lord Chesterfields compared to the vegetable men. After searching, waiting, and struggling a full hour I finely found some delablanded lettuce and some so-called fresh peas, and the vegetable man looked at my sexually raised eyebrows as much as to say, Well, if you dont like them, go and raise your own, ma said.

I assure you when I think of the indomitable will power, the spirit of never say die, and the loving patience that went into the planning that dinner will taste like something fit only for the most deserving king, pop said, and ma said, What I was referring to was yesterday's dinner, so the taste of it is just bygone water under a forgotten bridge, an if you really want to testify to your appreciation you can overcome your unreasoning prejudice against restaurants and agree to eat out tonight.

By golies I was just going to suggest it, pop said.

Meaning he would, whether he felt against it or not.

Russians Launch Series of Local Counter-Attacks

(By WILLIAM McGAFFIN)
(American War Correspondent)

Moscow, July 14 (AP) Red forces on the southern end of the Orel salient launched a series of fresh local counter attacks today to follow up their successful repulse of German attempts to enlarge the Belgorod bulge yesterday.

That the Russians were able to take the initiative after absorbing the toughest blows the Germans have been capable of delivering is taken as a healthy sign of the exhaustion of the Red army by military odds.

Field Marshal Kluge's armies, fiercely reinforced and resupplied, continued to batter violently against other sectors, but their efforts to crack through have already cost the Germans 2,722 tanks and 1,200 planes in nine days of fighting, according to Soviet official figures.

(The German communique asserted that strong Russian counter attacks in the Belgorod sector yesterday were repulsed with "the heaviest losses," and that a single sector two Russian regiments were, wiped out. More than 300 Red army tanks were destroyed, the communique said.

(North and east of Orel, the Nazi high command said, reinforced Russian formations were unable to dent the German line. German air squadrons, it was asserted, have shot down 363 Russian planes within the last five days.)

The Germans were reported in heavy fighting with Russian action when they ran into a tank ambush with the Russians well prepared under cover of night at a point where the Nazis were expected to attack. After slugging back the savage Russian counter drive, in front and on the flanks and the Germans retreated in confusion, the Russians said.

Elsewhere on the Belgorod-Orel-Kursk front the Russians said German effort at the northern end of the front which flared into action July 5 had all but died out.

The Russian midnight communique said that activity there was "limited to artillery and mortar duel with an occasional reconnaissance in force. The Russians placed the German loss in tanks at 95 with about 400 killed. At Kursk, however, artillery fire clashed five self-propelling guns, they said.

The day's losses in German tanks and planes in all sectors of the central front brought the official Russian totals to 2,722 tanks and 1,197 planes for the nine-day period.

London, July 14. (CP)— The Moscow Radio, quoting Turkish circles, said last night the Germans apparently have no intention of sending further reinforcements to Italy but instead will concentrate their forces on fronting Russia to be threatened after Italy is defeated.

Whitby, Ont., July 14.' (CP) — Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative leader, said last night Provincial Premier Harry Nixon must repudiate recent remarks on Canada-United States relations by Maj. Drew said. He spoke at a Conservative meeting at which George Hart was chosen Progressive Conservative candidate for Ontario constituency in the July 4 provincial election.

DIRECT ACTION AFTER WAR SEEN

Ontario C.C.F. Leader Calls for Public Ownership of All Key Industries

Toronto, July 14. (CP)—Direct government action will be needed to meet the post-war crisis, E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, said last night in a radio address. This action should include "vigorous development of our natural resources, public ownership of all key industries and an over-all plan for their expansion", he added in summarizing the party's 15-point platform in the Ontario election campaign.

Social ownership and control of "all the great monopolies within the jurisdiction of Ontario" was one of the aims of the organization, he said.

"The old parties "try to frighten you with a word" by describing social ownership and control of monopolies as socialism, but "it is the old parties who are frightened".

"They don't want anybody to interfere with the power of the monopolies— They want you to continue serving under the control of those giants of industry and finance who have so often regimented you into hard times.

Mr. Jolliffe said the C.C.F. would make certain "by legislation and all other necessary measures", that workers are set free from company unions, the organization to represent the workers must be free from the control of the employer.

War Correspondents Nearly Missed Boat

By ROSS MUNRO
(Can. Press War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Sicily, July 11—(Delayed)—(CP)—Dabbling in the Pont nearly missed the boat the Sicilian invasion expedition sailed from Britain.

War correspondents and officers of an army film unit had been aboard the ship for days and a few hours before sailing they were called to the headquarters ship for interview.

We came out of the interview to find that owing to a mixup and a delay there was no boat ready to take us back to our ship. For nearly an hour we stamped up and down the dock.

It looked as if we might miss the ships when Maj. Don McHee, of Chatham, Ont., member of the Canadian planning staff, came to the rescue and provided transportation.

McHee was not sailing himself but was doing last-minute liaison work with his own craft. So we piled in and sailed off for a mile-and-a-half run down the bay to our anchorage. The minutes went on padpass as smoo ne ayeaz ling and clean. The warship started to move. Finally we made our ship. Ten minutes later the anchor was shipped and we sailed.

London Letter

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 14 —(CP)— A cruise through notebooks accumulated during visits to various establishments and naval establishments or research with the army men and war correspondents, has convinced me that the Royal Canadian Navy and Navy are running a good boat for the championship stamp of shangrowing with the Canadian Army running a poor third.

It is difficult to tell exactly why this is, but the Army gets along pretty well on what Jack Canuck and Tommy Atkins used in lieu of the English language during the First Great War, while the Air Force and Navy slang is developing rapidly.

The Air Force and Navy combine quite a few slang terms, especially this is because the Italian Fleet Air Arm. Both refer to all things landing, flying or swimming as "type" and or not.

Both take "views" of everything. You take a "good view" of a new canteen or a new frigate or anything you like. On the other hand you take a "dim view" or "poor view" of anything you don't like.

A Navy seaboy may tell you he is "sentenced" to leave by it all or he is going immediately to "Nan" Or hope to get for a spot of bit. Translated that means that he is bored and is going to lie down and sleep.

He may have been "bottled" (herded out) for doing the same thing before but he knows the "Jimmy" (first lieutenant) and his buffer (petty officer who carried out the officer's orders) are both ashore so he is safe.

In navy "slope" are stories, "bung ho" means correct and "bent up" means a party. A midshipman is a "mottie," a sub-lieutenant is "subbie" and when a buffer out carries an officer's punishment order, he is "tying on the can."

In addition to the navy's "sainted" for bored, the air forces' "browned off," "brassed off" and "cheesed up" are duplicated in naval slang by "teased up."

Troops on a ship are "ship's company," adrift is "absent without leave," "corpses" are seamen. "Mick" is a hammock and "dicky dilly" are a man's best uniform.

The air force word for a bawling out is to have his "strip torn off." Anything free is "gash," and to be bored is to have the "morbs" or "blue devils."

A nail-biter is an unqualified trucksman. "Dirk" is a ground crewman. "Prangadana" is worse than to "prang" which is to crash-up. To be beaten finally in anything including the games of darts is to be "shot down in flames." To be shot down in combat is to "buy it," or "go for Burton" or it may be described as saying about "I had it."

A "sprog" is a green pilot and he is always "hot off"—meaning fresh out of the training machine.

"Jankers" is jail. "Sprog" is no good. "Prag" is high excitement and if he bomb is a "cookie." A "good box" is a direction finder, a "dicky do" is a dangerous operation and "sprogs" are unidentified aircraft.

In all three of the services "pukka gen" is information and "cuff gen" is a wrong steer or misdirection.

A list recording the slangusge in use could go on and on but the trouble with recording service slang is that it comes and goes with such rapidity that what is recalled before it can be set down for posterity.

Not Single Yankee in Line-Up As American Leaguers Score 5 to 3 Win in All-Star Game

Bobby Doerr's 2nd-Inning Three-Run Circuit Blow Settles Issue and Mort Cooper

DIMAGGIO HITS 'EM

By RED FRIEND
Associated Sports Writer

Philadelphia, July 14 — (AP)
Like the rye you don't meet nearly become he has $1,000,000 in the bank, the American League fin- ally has proved it doesn't need the National as long as it can do the Dumbos' tricks with a bat.

While manager Joe McCarthy didn't send a single member of his batting brigade in knocking off the National League's 3-2 mark in the 11th edition of the All-star shindig party, way in his noggin- set made you look quick to be sure it wasn't a Thurber putting on the crusher.

But this time it was Robert Per- shing Doerr, who has been playing a lot of infield for the Boston Red Sox, who came through. Doerr, out in front with a run in the first in- ning and work boomed it home behind Mort Cooper.

Then, in the second, before the 31,938 cash customers knew what was cooking, it was the old Yankee clout doused up in a Red Sox suit. Lou Gerard.

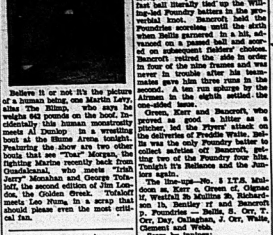
Mort's fireball lost its control for just a couple of minutes and he walked Ched Laabs, Phil Louis Brissette nimble fly-chaser, and Jake Early, Washington's catcher.

Then up stepped Robert Persh- ing Mort didn't serve ball off the finger but blistered a few hours before allowing what not to light a cigarette, Bobby shook it at the left field stands.

That was your ball game. The Americans simply ambled to their eighth win in the 11 all-star starts.

For, in the third chapter, a pair of scorching doubles, produced an other run. The only guy among the 30 Yankees in the game to homer in the All-star game was Joe McCarthy's slugging outfielder, Joe DiMaggio of Pittsburgh Pirates. He got him on one time in his third inning and promptly poled a single into left. In the seventh, he lashed and came home on Dixie Walker's grand hit. On the ninth he hit for what was sadly the hardest ball of the night, a rolling liner that landed well into the upper stands in left field.

Of course, there was a lot more going on during the proceedings.



Yander Sees Fans Fast

For instance, Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati Reds, was on hand on to take over for Cooper in the third with one run in, one on and

Believe it or not it's the picture of Lt. Randolph Churchill, son of Winston Churchill, who says he would bet pounds on his head. one out, and he proceeded to fan Rudy York and Laabs to end that inning. From there on, he fanned the next one in the next two frames and wound up with a total of 11 strike outs for his two all-star shivering appearances, thereby equalling Carl Hubbell's record.

It was a convincing American League victory. The National Lea- gue backers had only one real turn to hoot. This was in the first in- ning, after the boys got over their surprise at McCarthy's selection of Claude Passeau, the old Phillies- ton knuckleballer, to start serving 'em up for the American Leaguers. Those two all-star old-timers, Chi- cago's Stan Hack and Brooklyn's Billy Herman, started it off with consecutive singles. Stan Musial then hoisted a fly to centre and the National's had a run.

NEW PITCHER TOO GOOD FOR BELL FOUNDRIES

No. 5 I.T.S. Advance to Softball Semi - Finals With 22-1 Win in Listless Game

BANCROFT GOOD

It wasn't much of a competition when the No. 5 I.T.S. Softball team made it two straight over the Bellville Foundries in the I.T.S. Softball League semi-finals at the Pole Grounds on Monday night. Lt. Arch Green's Aleman drubbed the Foundries 22 to 1. The Flyers took the series in straight games in a best-in-three series and now advanced to the league play-off round waiting for the winner of the Maritime-Signals tilt.

Skipper Green introduced a new pitcher to the league in Bill Ban- croft, formerly of Winnipeg, whose work was the talk of the town. With lag-ged Foundry batters in the pre- vertebral knot, Bancroft had the opposition eating out of the palm when Bells garnered in a hit, ad- vanced on a passed ball error, got on subsequent fielders' choices. Bancroft, himself, was the only batter to collect safeties off Bancroft, get- ting two of the Foundries' three hits. Tonight it's Reliance and the Jun- ior again.

Box score:

	AB	R	H	PO	A	E
Aleman	4	3	2	0	0	0

Summary: Two-base hits—Bancroft, Aleman. Left on bases—I.T.S. 10; Foundries 3. Bases on balls—off Bancroft 0, off Bell 4. Struck out—by Bancroft 10, by Bell 3. Passed ball—Bell. Umpires—Barnett and Bawden.

Philadelphia, July 14 — (AP) "When you have two men on and one out and Joe DiMaggio coming up is done," remarked Billy South- worth, manager of St. Louis Car- dinals and the National League All-Stars . . . and that just about sums up last night's game in which the National Leaguers took their worst shellacking from the American Leaguers...Things are all quiet now for the baseball circuit until Mort Cooper walked a couple of guys in the second and they came Bobby (The Swinging) Doerr to bounce home. The ball game was practically over . . . But just to show you what optimists these baseball guys are, the losers came into the dressing room last night and found Manager Billy Herman hit a liner in the ninth and what might have happened if it had been a few feet higher.

More from Southworth. "This was a swell game and Senator Ilks we ought to have a few more games. I'm just getting warmed up . . . and, discussing the de- cision to yank Mort Cooper off the ball before the three-run rally, I'm glad it was one of my own pitchers who took it. Ilks him out." . . . Joe McCarthy, who was the only Pinkhurst skied pe- ing square with Southworth for what happened last fall in the world series: "Don't forget, I've got to dress and catch a train."

Before last night's game some one automatically asked: "Who's pitching for the Yankees?" . . . But there wasn't a Yankee in the ball game for the first time in all-star history . . . It looked strange to see Bill Dickey out there catching Claude Al Schacht was putting on the impressions of famous pitchers. That usually has a more important job.

Toronto, July 14 — (CP)—Lieut. Dick Maughlan, former coach and star player with Calgary Bronks in the Western Interprovincial Foot- ball Union, visualizes a post-war grid set-up in which clubs would have their own planes for inter- city transportation.

Dick now is stationed in Vancou- ver with the Canadian Army.

Subject of the United States grid- iron, he came to Canada from San- ta Barbara, California.

His post-war football ideas were expressed in an interview with Ken (Vancouver Province) McDonnell.

Maughlan approves the idea of team travel by air, they would be no necessity for leaving until just a few hours before the game. Coaching problems, such as a change in drinking water, would be overcome.

"But that would be either head- ed, said Maughlan. "Some of the guys might not want to travel by air. What do you do and how do them on ahead by train and leave them to do as they want in a strange city?"

Dick thinks says football teams of the future will have to operate "on the same basis as the Win- nipeg Rugby Blue Bombers." In his view, football clubs will have to set against professional outfits for ser- vices of high-class playing talent.

"Not a Nabob!"

Dick, who was Bill Stoneham edited the Western Canada Hockey Guide — a hobby which he gave up when his newspaper job in Saskatoon. Last winter, as Wing Cmdr. D. W. Stoneham, Bill ran the R. C. A. As far as I am concerned, it is a closed issue," said Durocher. "I have no intention of resigning."

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 116

BY SAM GORDON
THE EXPERT

How I pity the millions of bridge players who know only a somewhat nonsensical system of bidding. Their no-trump bids are usually so strained and uncertain.

Players who use the Horse Sense count for no-trump are not troubled that way at all. They can count up to 31, they can make every no-trump bid with confidence.

Each ace or king or queen is a high card. Each high card is a no-trump trick. To know how many no-trump tricks you have in any hand, merely add up your high cards at one session.

When partner tells you how many high cards he has, add them to your own. That will tell you the number of no-trump tricks your pair can take at a no-trump contract.

If you do not see enough in your pair for a game, you should not bid that high. As soon as you see enough for a game, make a one-jump bid as a signal.

An opening bid of one no-trump knows five high cards, with two aces in hand. Therefore, the responder knows at once whether his first reply is a one-jump in no-trump.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one no-trump and you have this hand:

♠K 7 3
♥Q 8 2 4
♣K 6 4

With no biddable suit for a takeout and no suit assist, your only responding bid must be in no-trump. So you count your high cards to see if you have enough for a one-jump.

You have four high cards. With partner's five, you see nine high cards in your pair. And it takes only nine no-trump tricks to make a game in no-trump.

Therefore, you give your partner the signal that says you see enough tricks for a game in no-trump. You make a one-jump response in no-trump at once. Bid three no-trump.

Do right and you can cut out the apologies.

"Reveille With Beverly" Scintillant swing and racy radio romance are the order of the day, so far as Columbia's "Reveille With Beverly" is concerned. The time-limited new hits which will open next at the McCarthy Theatre is top-flight cast of radio's foremost entertainers, is expected to attract eager attention from radio, movie and swing fans.

Filmdom's belief that the "Hepcats" will be on hand at the McCarthy Theatre early—and often—is founded on fact. The film is keyed upon an exceedingly popular radio broadcast, which first attracted attention on the West Coast and which rapidly attained nation-wide fame. The film not only describes the origin of the program, and its operation, but does so in a manner calculated to the inclusion of rhythm "in the groove", sizzling dancing and red-hot bands.

Miss Miller's tap-dancing is well-known; equally well-known are the swingy rhythm of such entertainers as: Bob Crosby and "Dixieland" band; Duke Ellington and his Orchestra, "Band of the year", Count Basie and his Orchestra, undisputed leader of Prof. Freddie Slack and his orchestra with vocalist Ella Mae Morse "cheesecake" favorites; Frank Sinatra, radio's exciting romantic vocalist; the Modernaires, hottest of all harmony teams; and the Radio Rogues, famous for their minutes.

Miss Miller is the "Beverly" of the title, a swing fan employed as a switchboard operator in a Denver radio station. Insisting that jive programs would attract plenty of attention, she "gets in the hair" of everyone at the station, from the station manager to the janitor, by a subterfuge, she manages to broadcasts an early-morning program of classical music, and promptly switches over to hotter rhythms. Her program is dedicated to the soldiers in the Army Camps, around Denver, who hear reveille at 5.30 a.m., and it immediately becomes a sensational.

Beverly's bright chatter and brighter recordings make her a subject of curious conversation in the camps. "Is she a nitwitter as she sounds?" William Wright and Dick Purcell are chiefly responsible for that question, and they undertake to find out. The romantic rivalry which follows contributes much to the motion picture's entertainment effects.

Musical numbers heard in "Reveille With Beverly" include Count Basie's "One O'Clock Jump"; Cross-fire; Basie's "Boogie Woogie" and the said "South Rampart Street Parade"; Bob Crosby and "Dixieland Band" and Duke Ellington and his Orchestra, "Band of the year". Count Basie and his Orchestra, undisputed leader of Prof. Freddie Slack and his orchestra with vocalist Ella Mae Morse "cheesecake" favorites; Frank Sinatra, radio's exciting romantic vocalist; the Modernaires, hottest of all harmony teams; and the Radio Rogues, famous for their minutes.

AT THE BELLE

"CHINA"

The movies' toughest tough guy, Alan Ladd, the lovely Loretta Young and Wild Bill Bendix, the lovable big, team up in "China," Paramount's most exciting war film on the Belle Theatre screen, directed by John Farrow, the film's cast includes 20 Chinese girls who portray university students whose college is the theme of the story. Trapped in the path of a Japanese army, the 20 students, with their American teacher, Miss Young, are attempting to reach safety when they are aided by Lady and Bendix, American oil men who have the only available means of transportation, a truck, and by a band of Chinese guerillas. Against this background of war and adventure, and amid the crash of bombs, the roar of Jap planes and the rattle of machine gun fire, "China" tells a romantic story that makes the picture one of the greatest of the season.

"Dr. Gillespie's New Assistant"

Intriguing mystery is injected into the latest of the Dr. Gillespie series of dramas, "Dr. Gillespie's New Assistant," which comes next to the Belle Theatre.

The mystery concerns the puzzling ailment which afflicts one of the doctor's patients and which baffles all efforts at a cure until one of his new assistants discovers the source of the malady. This leads to the unfolding of the unsuspected past of the patient and the happy culmination of a love story.

Lionel Barrymore will again be seen as the beloved physician. With him in the cast are Van Johnson, Richard Quine, Susan Peters and Kaye Luke. Walter Kingsford, Alma Kruger, Nat Pendleton, Marie Blake and Frank Orth.

"HARRIGAN'S KID"

Attention sports fans! The track is fast and the story of Harrigan's Kid starting next at the Belle Theatre, moves along with a clip when Jockey Bobby Reddick is in the saddle of horse in the exciting hotmest film of the turf. Bobby knows all the ropes, having been taught by one of the greatest riders of all time, Tom Harrigan, better known to film fans as William Garagan. It's the story of a jockey who refuses to go crooked, even though it means double-crossing his friend and former trainer.

"Tales of Italy," a Canada Carries On subject will complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

Laurel and Hardy

Dante the Great, the magician co-starring with Laurel and Hardy in "A-Haunting We Will Go," the latest comedy hit at the Capitol Theatre next, once went to Europe for a scheduled six-week tour and stayed on for seven years!

Indeed, to hear Dante tell it, he and his company might still have been on the continent had they not felt the cold breath of Hitler's legions once too often. Dante's original itinerary was confined to the British Isles, but, at the behest of many of the European bookers, he extended it to cover the length and breadth of the continent.

Dante had been a big favorite in Germany and was playing Berlin when Hitler took over. The fuehrer, it seems, numbers magic and magicians among his many pleasures and Dante forthwith huddled himself out of the country, abandoning many of his expensive props. Later, Dante happened to be in Norway when the Nazis arrived, and again he took the cue posthaste. This time he fled by plane, leaving behind still-good-as-new Los Angeles.

"King of the Stallions"

Some of California's most beautiful horses provide the background for "King of the Stallions," Monogram's new film at the Capitol, a story of the Mongolian plains of India, country which comes to the Capitol Theatre next with its magnificent beasts, Black Thunder, in the title role.

By a fortunate chain of circumstances however, Monogram was able to acquire the use of wild and virtually virgin territory, within a few miles of Hollywood, on the site selected for "King of the Stallions."

The cast of this sweeping motion picture includes Chief Thunder-cloud, Princess Redbird, Chief Yowlachie, Chief Many Treaties and hundreds of other Indians.

Also shown is a special Canada Carries On featurette on "Tales of Italy" stepping stone to invasion. Filled right behind the Mediterranean of Axis Europe actual shots of today's WAR OF NERVES.

A colored cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" completes the bi- double bill.

BARONS WILLING TO ACCEPT N.H.L. BERTH

Saskatoon, July 14 — (CP) — Cleveland Barons are willing to accept a National Hockey League franchise for the 1943-44 season but first must obtain approval of the N.H.L. and then they must obtain the consent of the American Hockey League, said Al Sutphin, Barons' owner, in an interview here last night.

Sutphin is making a tour of Western Canada.

Sutphin said the Barons' application will be dealt with by the N.H.L. governors at a meeting in Toronto within the next two weeks, then he will present his case to the A.H.L. a few weeks later.

The Cleveland owner emphasized that the Barons will not take an N.H.L. berth unless the A.H.L. approves of their action.

Harness Horses Renew Racing As Attorney Heads Geers Stake

(By The Canadian Press)

The two new stars of the trotting horse world, Attorney and Good Bye, renewed their duel in the $5,-000 Geers Stake on the Grand Circuit program at Cleveland yesterday, and Attorney went one up on his arch-rival.

The crack two-year-old son of Volomite had no trouble as Art Blackwell drove him in the second heat of the season for the Wilson Farms of Logansport, Ind. Attorney scored two firsts and Good Bye placed twice.

On the same program the Hambletonian threat, Worthy Boy, owned by Mrs. James Johnson, of Rochester, Mich., and driven by Sep Palin himself, made it a straight-heat triumph in the $1,000 Peninsula Farm Stake.

The time-trial at North Randall Park produced the biggest daily grabs of the trotting season — $678 for $2.

It went to bettors who coupled the 3-1 Princess Abbey with the 22-1 Topsy Guy, winner of the first heats of the 2.20 class and 2.21 class respectively.

A survey in New York shows that close to 20o United States colleges, large and small, have abandoned football for the duration. This list is expected to be increased considerably before the season—if any—gets under way.

There's a total of 324 entries on the third day of the Canadian Legion three-ring golfing circus at Chicago starting next Monday. The All-American open carries $10,000 prizes and the All-American Amateur and the Women's Open are also being played for the seven days in July 26.

Before the big game at Philadelphia last night Luke Sewell applied to be the umpire's dressing room for saying a few days ago that the thought the American league umpires were giving the breaks to the Yankees. And the joint meeting of both leagues gave Clark Griffith the long-awaited okay for unlimited night games in Washington.

The Royal Canadian Navy has another ace hockey player, Sandy Watson, it was learned at Niagara Falls that Roy Heninger had enlisted. He played for the Montreal Royals, Quebec Seniors, last season, and before that for Sudbury and St. Catharines teams. He enlisted in northern.

Harry MacPhail of Brooklyn was right in front at the All-Star ball game last night. But he was attending in an official capacity in his rank of army colonel, reserving the right to applaud, to express appreciation to the baseball pagans for their relief contributions to the armed forces.

Praises Efficiency Of Allied Navies

London, July 14. (CP)—Describing the assault on Sicily as the "largest amphibious operation ever attempted", A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, praised today the skill and determination of the Royal and United States navies in carrying Allied forces to the beaches and expressed confidence in the final task which lies ahead".

Mr. Alexander said the landings were carried out despite the "most difficult weather conditions."

"In the two months between May 8, 1942, and Jan. 8, 1943, he said 1,600,000 tons of shipping, 3,000 men and 40,000 vehicles were landed in North Africa. From July, 1942, to May, 1943, 346 enemy ships totalling 867,000 tons were sunk in the Mediterranean, he added.

CHAPTER 9

Mona, at least, was one person who did not change, she thought, as she entered the country hall not long after the ceremony. She took off her shoes with a moment's relief, and then, slipping them on, she glanced around her. She felt that she was facing a test. The thought flashed through her mind then that now more than ever, now in time of war, people should think of themselves less as individual and more as a community, but one great contrast thought: to test one friendship across the rush of years with hold strings that had had its beginning in Berlin and which was spreading to all parts of the world.

But her attention was divided when she met Mrs. Lester and Erica and a man who was obviously Mr. Lester, a tall, rangy person with thinning dark hair who looked distinctly uncomfortable. Mrs. Lester, on the other hand, wearing a black frock very decidedly in the Berlin style, showed her too blonde curls, looked muscular with bare arms bare and seemed very pleased to be where she was.

Erica, her plaid red crepe dinner frock with short sleeves very becoming, seemed to have arrived not to the wrong company and was laughing with unmistakable shout it. It looked, Meagan thought, as though she wished she knew a trick of magic to make her disappear.

Only Mrs. Lester seemed to be enjoying herself, her eyes taking brief, restless excursions to surrounding faces, her bright mouth ready to smile at anyone who should smile at her, her whole being a greeting with her. You could see her, Meagan thought, taking great pains with her dressing and sitting for an hour before her mirror so that every curl was in place and then with her powder puff smoothing the world in her hair carefully so that the pin would be invisible and it would seem that the orchid grew there. You could see her humoring Mr. Lester and see that his clothes were right, probably with that he liked and more distinguished and less a man who had not enough sleep. She would approve of the eyes-watching reserve of Miss's frock but not of the severity of its lines. She had undoubtedly left her room unlike hope and her bottles and with powder spilled on her dressing bar. She would be quite in to see her children and kissed them good night and then had left the house with great hope and good will in her capacious heart.

Both Mrs. Lester and her orchid nodded to Meagan but Mr. Lester and Erica stared, the former with the blankness of preoccupation which one regards a total stranger, the latter with the frightful wish only the tactless reserve for those they most cordially dislike. They had Erica singled her out for her attack, Meagan wondered, and the only friendly greeting Mrs. Lester had had was the smiling, the thought. I like Mrs. Lester. She makes me think of very fine things: the smell of clean clothes drying in the sun and a good dinner cooking on the stove.

But the next moment she was on guard, and Mrs. Payne sat at the round, white-clothed table and began to say things to meet her, the while making her feel that her dress had been long years old for the new and very lovely one bought for this occasion, the while noting their remarks again. But her high feeling was suddenly gone when she wondered where Clare and Toby were and if they were drinking too much and why it was that Peter Payne was the jokingest one of them.

"Clare," he said, "Clare and Toby and the others are down in the bar. This is quite a home coming for Clare. Do you want a drink for dinner?"

"No. Thank you." It was obvious that he did not want to go downstairs to the bar, a long, narrow, pine panelled room that had been "done" in her time, she sat down, picked up the glass and drank. "I'm sorry I'm late."

He smiled. "I hope you won't be sorry you danced with me. Will you?"

It was at least half an hour before Toby and Clare, Daisy and Harry Wick and two couples unknown to Meagan, came upstairs. Meanwhile she had talked, and talked, and talked, feeling more than ever the positiveness of his personality behind his slow drawl. He had little small talk; he did not pretend to answer her in embarrassment, and the questions of present day, highly accelerated, he answered in history more straight to the point. She was very glad that she had read so much history, that she could not understand how he could be both personal and impersonal at the same time and it occurred to her that he would make a first-rate diplomat. Nor did he seem in the slightest perturbed by Clare's entrance.

In fact when she came leading the others, wearing a clinging bright blue jersey dinner frock, her diamonds agitting, the only person unaware of Peter's face exhibited even a mild surprise. "Ah, Clare, you look very pretty, you darling," she said to Meagan as Toby stood at attention behind her chair.

And once more Meagan was conscious of Clare's nervousness, her startling beauty and charm, her gaiety and excitement, and of the fact that it was perfectly obvious to Toby that her dress was new. Two years old with a mend in it.

Toby left places and ordered dinner. Afterward Toby asked Meagan to dance and at the sight of Erica sitting stiffly alone she said, "Toby, see the girl in red over my shoulder now. I want you to ask her to dance."

Toby, somewhat unsteady, seemed to lean upon her. "Where? Red dress? Why, I don't feel bad. Not bad at all!"

"Erica's Erica Lester."

"Not the one Sue was telling us about?"

"Yes, I imagine she is the one Sue was telling you about."

"What am I supposed to do? Take her under my wing?" He grinned at Meagan. "Ah, you trust me. I'm improved, Peg. I'll give the little girl a whirl."

Meagan sat alone at the table in the club house and watched Toby advance across the dining room to Erica, bending low as he must have spoke to her as though she was their hostess. Erica looked relieved. At any rate she did not refuse him and as they danced, Toby and she danced well together, Toby talking and smiling, Meagan thought, with a lot of eyes for the stout old ladies with whom he occasionally danced. Erica continued to look as though she was certain he had designs on her life, but as the music stopped, Meagan saw Toby and Erica part, Toby opening a new pack of cigarettes as he went.

Meagan kept her eye on the door. She did not know how long she waited for them to return, but when she saw Toby again, Erica wasn't with him and Toby had his cigarettes replaced in his face as he walked hurriedly toward her.

"That damned Hilyer," he said.

As the handkerchief slipped a little, she saw that his face was red. Obviously Erica had slapped him hard.

"I'm going to get a drink," he said sourly, "and any more silly cats you pick up in the future you can keep to yourself."

Meagan said, her face troubled. "Oh, Toby, why did you spoil it for her? You're hostile to get you drink. I'm ashamed of you." She was afraid she was going to cry and crying was a luxury she decided herself. One fine day when everything in her life was straightened out and all the bills were paid she would indulge in a good long cry.

Toby walked away, pretending that there was something in his eye.

Canadian Soldier Has War Record That Reads Like Fiction

Dartmouth, N. S., July 14—(CP)—Reported to be the first Canadian to capture an Italian officer in battle, Cpl. Fraser P. Hutchinson, M. M., Dartmouth, N.S., has a war record that reads like fiction. He was once a prisoner of the Nazis, escaped from Germany in a way not to be awarded the Military Medal. Cpl. Hutchinson, of Stuadacona Canadian Broadcasting Corporation overseas correspondent, accompanying the invasion army, Hutchinson captured his Italian prisoner in a machine-gun equipped pill-box on the Sicilian beachhead.

In 1940, the Dartmouth soldier was in a group of Canadian troops who were captured in the early stages of that country in June. Most of the men were shot by the Nazis, but Hutchinson was wounded as he started a machine-gun on top of a ferry. He lay near the bodies of comrades.

When he recovered the Nazis forced him to transport ammunition. He escaped, however, was recaptured and after weeks of working in the salt mines, escaped to Switzerland the Spanish and Portuguese lines and finally managed to Britain.

He was later awarded the Military Medal for "a secret exploit that required persistent courage."

Where was he when he commissioned was a Sergeant-Major in an artillery regiment. Shortly after coming to Canada he was transferred to an Engineers unit as a private.

Sicilian Folk Not Deeply Interested In War's Events

But in Some Villages Signs Made to Read 'Evviva (Long Live) George VI'

By JOHN GUNTHER
Represented Associated Press Correspondent
Iron Press.

Allied Force Command Post, Sicily, July 14—(AP)—Sicilians have blotted or scrawled out "Evviva Duce" and "Evviva Mussolini" on the walls and buildings and substituted "Evviva Georgo VI" (British officers translate it that) Sicily told me today.

Other parts of the island's population seem entirely inert and apathetic to the invasion and uninterested in the Allied troops established here.

Peasants and village folk sit on the pavements as troops come in to drink wine, and when a three ton up as they ride past on their mules. Many of the men wear white quadrilloned but show a marked antipathy to the Fascist regime and especially to the Germans.

Premier Mowat's administration formed the first section of the long Liberal reign from 1872 to 1905, "the golden age of party in the saddle." Premiers Arthur S. Hardy and George W. Ross held nearly nine years to Sir Oliver's record. Mr. Hardy, Dec. 21, 1896 to Sept. 25, 1899; Mr. Ross, Oct. 26, 1899 to Sept. 25, 1914; Sir W. H. Henry, Conservative, Dec. 15, 1930 to Aug. 26, 1934; Mr. Hepburn, Liberal, July 10, 1934 to Oct. 31, 1942; G. D. Conant, Liberal, Oct. 31, 1942 to May 18, 1943; H. C. Nixon, Liberal, May 18, 1943 to the present.

The War Today—

Catania Plain, Old Battle-Ground May Be Scene of Decisive Struggle

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Sicilian invasion entered its fifth day with good fortune still gracing the hard-driving Allies, but it seemed certain that concerted opposition was impending unless the Axis did the unbelievable thing of quitting cold.

The first counter-attack of any weight was that hurled by the Germans at American forces under Gen. Patton on the west wing. There is some passing speculation whether this assault was directed at the Yankees purely because of tactical necessity, or whether the enlightened Hitlerites had in mind discrediting United States efforts for propaganda purposes. Be that as it may, the troops took the attack in stride and smashed it.

Events are milling about so swiftly that he who makes forecasts is bullying him, but it looks now as though the broad plain of Catania — one of the battle-grounds of the ages — may continue its old role and become the scene of the decisive engagement in the fight for Sicily.

The Catanian plain affords the best field for the operation of mechanized forces in this generally mountainous island, and tank divisions presumably will be used in strength by both Allies and Axis.

The port of Catania on the edge of the plain is Hitler's second biggest city, with a population of 300,000. It was some 25 years ago that venture it has been the centre of many wars. It has been 'destroyed, and has risen again from its own ruins, so often that it's hard to keep the count—and it seems the new assaults from erupting Etna and earthquakes.

Despite its varied experience of hard knocks, however, Catania probably never was hit harder than it will be if it tries to resist the march of Gen. Montgomery, with his famous British 8th Army and hard-boiled Canadians. Perhaps the already bomb-battered city will remain passive while the decision is sought on the neighboring plain. Catania is 30 miles by rail south of Messina, the all-important port which is the island's railhead for the mainland of mainland Italy. Troops are ferried across the narrow Strait of Messina, thus maintaining a vital communication.

Isolation of Sicily from the Italian peninsula demands that Messina be captured at the earliest possible moment. This will leave the Axis forces on the island cut off from supplies and reinforcements save for the few which might be moved by air.

Poultry Raisers Hear Address On Latest Scientific Methods Of Increasing Egg Production

The Swift Canadian Company, in the name of Mr. G. R. Brownell, Manager of the Belleville Branch, entertained a group of local and district hatchery flock owners at a banquet held in the club room of the Quinte Hotel Tuesday evening. A total of 48 guests attended and were privileged to hear Dr. Marcellus, principal speaker, Dr. F. N. Marcellus of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, speak on recent experiments made at the college in more scientific methods of raising poultry.

Mr. C. N. Heath performed the duties of chairman and, following his introduction by Mr. Brownell, expressed his appreciation to the present flock owners on their co-operation with the Belleville Hatchery and declared that more, and better chickens had been hatched in this district over before at the local hatchery. He expounded his hope that this number would be increased or exceeded next year.

Sliding Stan Gets "Banned"

Following the dinner cards were passed round to the guests, one envelop containing bonus payments to shippers of the Swift Canadian Co., based on the percentage of chicks hatched from eggs received, the second envelope contained a questionnaire consisting of questions dealing with the size of flocks, breeds and modes of transportation employed to deliver eggs to the hatchery, Mr. Conch of Stirling received the questionnaire with considerable grace and conscientiously passed it over to Mrs. Conch.

Throughout the program of speaking, humor, fun and banquet played musical numbers consisting of old time favorites and one or two modern selections.

Remarking that the banquet was a step in the right direction and to bring the producers together to talk over problems and work out solutions, Mr. Linn Fair, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Stirling went on to say that crop conditions for oats and hay this year would not be as high as last year due to early heavy rains but that he had confidence it would be sufficient for feeding purposes.

Low Proteins in Mash Feeds

Mr. E. R. Olson of the Toronto Feed Research Laboratories, Canadian Co., discussed the man-power shortage prevalent in rural districts, and said that many railroad men were going out to farms and working from four to six hours when off shifts and that soldiers and airmen on 48 hours leave were producing feed for the feeding competitions. He informed the flock owners that a recent government order had reduced the amount of protein contains in manufactured mash feed, that no milk powder would be used in anything but starter feeds. The use of more home-produced milk was urged as a supplement.

Look For Record Year

Following Mr. Olson's short talk, Dr. F. N. Marcellus complimented the officials of Swift Canadian Company on their foresight in bringing together groups of flock owners and recommended recurrent meetings of this nature. The speaker cited 1942 as a boom-year for poultry, in which 12 million had been hatched successfully than in any other year previously, and that an increase is recorded in the returns of Canada to July 1st over 1940 and a 15 per cent increase over 1942 was pointed out by Dr. Marcellus. He also predicted a producing 25 per cent more baby chicks than before in the area period. British Columbia and Alberta are supplying eggs to the American forces constructing the new Alaskan Highway as well as shipping to Alaska and other outlying points in the north. Newfoundland and Bermuda are also receiving Canadian produced eggs and poultry as well as these northern places, said Dr. Marcellus.

More Eggs Needed

Egg exports will be considerably more this year than in 1942. Dr. Marcellus said 62,000,000 dozen eggs are needed in 1943 as against 60,000,000 dozen used during 1942. Prices are now at a level where it is a question as to how far the Purchase Board can go in purchasing eggs for export. Dr. Marcellus referred to raising chickens and producing eggs as a patriotic duty and responsibility and said that Canadians should eat less eggs and export more. "We are eating more eggs in a single ay than Britishers people eat in a month," Dr. Marcellus said.

Going back to problems of production, Dr. Marcellus warned against overcrowding, the result rising from increasing flocks with insufficient equipment to accommodate them. He also warned against delaying the purchasing of grain until winter months and cautioned the assembled flock owners by remarking on congested and delayed traffic from Western Provinces last winter.

Likes Pasture Feeding

Dr. Marcellus extolled the merits of pasture feeding, recommending short pasture when substituting for mash feed. Continual movement of colony houses from one location to a newly sewn pasture was also recommended and it was suggested that chickens be maintained on the range until they were producing up to at least 26% and will produce to 40% before being removed to setting pens. In following this method of range feeding and centres of overcrowding less culls birds have resulted as compared with ten to twelve years ago.

Explanatory lantern slides were used by Dr. Marcellus to illustrate colony and rain-shelter protection with descriptive accompanyment. Colored slides were used to portray the productive organs of the poultry and the various processes of reproduction and seats of prevalent diseases and their effect upon the bird.

The banquet was brought to a close with the showing of an animated color cartoon film. Many expressions or appreciation to the Swift Canadian Company were extended by those present at the conclusion.

Those Present

Flock owners present were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Conch, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Carey Merrick of Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. 8TH ARMY REPULSES FIERCE COUNTER-ATTACK
MESSINA BATTERED BY OVER 200 BOMBERS

Gains 'Some Miles' Taking Two Towns North of Augusta

American Forces, 25 Miles Inland, Advance 7 Miles Capturing Airdrome

FOE SHIFTS FORCES

(By WILMAN MOSBY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 15 (AP)—The jaws of an Allied pincers closed a shorter bite on Western Sicily after a furious battle in which the Germans, Sth Army reports, buried back a powerful counter-attack by fresh armored forces, before headquarters reports said today.

The grandest victory was scored by the American 7th Army, driving inland on a line parallel with the British 8th Coast push.

Led by Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, the American 7th Army, Iron-Man-Yankee sector, moved forward some six or seven miles, captured another important airdrome and took important towns.

Italian General Surrenders

Another Italian General, commanding the 54th Napoli Division, surrendered with his staff south of Vicenti. Vicenti is about 25 miles west and slightly south of capture of Augusta, and about the same distance southeast of Gela.

Hurling itself forward against stiffer resistance from the British 8th Army of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, which includes the Canadians in the center, and the town of Brucoli, four miles north of the Port of Augusta, after weathering a crisis yesterday in which the German Armored forces mounted a powerful counter-attack and actually reached the Allied line at one time.

A British brigade in the strategic harbor city, another Allied destination since Monday evening, was isolated temporarily by the furious enemy thrust, but was "firmly counter-attacked and drove on to Brucoli."

Battle Rages at Dawn

Today's communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said the 8th Army pushed "some miles" yesterday and that Augusta "was now firmly in Allied hands."

Military sources said the battle at Augusta began at dawn when the German tanks hit the British line and broke through temporarily. But Gen. Montgomery rushed his own tanks and guns and not only had knocked the Germans back but had taken Lentini and Melilli, six miles to the southeast, as well.

This counter-attack by enemy armored forces in which the crack German armored Hermann Goering Division took part indicated that the Italian and German High Command had shifted the bulk of their forces from positions confronting the Fifth American Army in order to block the British path up the east coast.

The Italian command previously had received a mauling at the hands of the Fifth Army.

Heavy Opposition Expected

Consequently, heavy opposition is expected along the route of the 8th Army and the latest developments indicated that the Axis commanders-in-chief had decided to commit their main forces in battle to hold the British and Canadians below Catania and 36 miles from the coast from Augusta.

Italian officials, too, were reported making a more determined show of resistance.

However, new waves of British and American aerial and naval bombers and gliderborne troops had carried out what the communique called successful operations, and it was disclosed that units of the French Army in Africa were also engaged in the battle some are Goums, the terror-inspiring hill-fighting warriors who fought so effectively along the Mediterranean coast in World War I.

Concentration at Lentini

Lentini appeared destined to have concentrated considerable armor strength, including tanks and artillery, at the town of Lentini, 13 miles south of Catania and at a road junction where the Catania Plain begins.

Hard fighting can be expected before the capture of Lentini takes place, it was said, for the Axis will resistance is about five miles from the coast.

(An NBC correspondent, in a radio report from a British cruiser off Eastern Sicily, said British troops had captured both Lentini and Augusta yesterday.

(Another bombardment of Catania from the sea, after an earlier shelling the previous dawn, was carried out last night, he said, and an Italian armored train which pushed south of Catania, was forced to withdraw by naval artillery.

("It would be expected that Allied troops would be hammering the gates of Catania during the night if not actually entering the city," he said, the report was dated Wednesday evening.

(The Allied bombardment sent up a cloud of dust and smoke along 30 miles of the Sicilian coast, he reported, and four and six inch guns were wrenched from their mountain emplacements.

The Americans went forward from the western horn of the Allied front through Vittoria and in difficult country to a strategic area from Comiso to Chiaramonte and at the same time threatening the enemy's rear if he offers battle on the Catania Plain.

'Canadian Troops Have Fulfilled' Montgomery Forecast

London, July 15 — (CP Cable) — The Daily Express editorially paid tribute today to the Canadian troops fighting with the British 8th Army in Sicily.

"Men from the Americas they are sharing the hardest and most important task in the battle for control of Brucoli, four miles north of the Port of Augusta, after weathering a crisis yesterday in which the German Armored forces mounted a powerful counter-attack and actually reache dthe Allied line at one time.

A British brigade in the strategic harbor city, another Allied destination since Monday evening, was isolated temporarily by the furious enemy thrust, but was "firmly counter-attacked and drove on to Brucoli."

Battle Rages at Dawn

Today's communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said the 8th Army pushed "some miles" yesterday and that Augusta "was now firmly in Allied hands."

Military sources said the battle at Augusta began at dawn when the German tanks hit the British line and broke through temporarily. But Gen. Montgomery rushed his own tanks and guns and not only had knocked the Germans back but had taken Lentini and Melilli, six miles to the southeast, as well.

This counter-attack by enemy armored forces in which the crack German armored Hermann Goering Division took part indicated that the Italian and German High Command had shifted the bulk of their forces from positions confronting the Fifth American Army in order to block the British path up the east coast.

The Italian command previously had received a mauling at the hands of the Fifth Army.

Heavy Opposition Expected

Consequently, heavy opposition is expected along the route of the 8th Army and the latest developments indicated that the Axis commanders-in-chief had decided to commit their main forces in battle to hold the British and Canadians below Catania and 36 miles from the coast from Augusta.

Italian officials, too, were reported making a more determined show of resistance.

However, new waves of British and American aerial and naval gliderborne troops had carried out what the communique called successful operations, and it was disclosed that units of the French Army in Africa were also engaged in the battle some are Goums, the terror-inspiring hill-fighting warriors who fought so effectively along the Mediterranean coast in World War I.

Concentration at Lentini

Lentini appeared destined to have concentrated considerable armor strength, including tanks and artillery, at the town of Lentini, 13 miles south of Catania and at a road junction where the Catania Plain begins.

Hard fighting can be expected before the capture of Lentini takes place, it was said, for the Axis will resistance is about five miles from the coast.

CANADA'S RATE OF SHIPBUILDING ON PAR WITH U.K.

British Commons Told Effort Is Considered Most Remarkable in Br. Commonwealth

FUTURE DEBATED

London, July 15—(CP)—Canada's shipbuilding effort since the start of the war was described as "one of the most remarkable things in the history of the British Commonwealth" by Colonel the Rt. Hon. Sir James Grigg, Secretary of State for War, in the House of Commons yesterday on wartime and postwar merchant shipping. Replying to a backbencher, Major John Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Transport, said Canada now is building approximately the same tonnage as Britain, and ships as Great Britain, in addition to corvettes and other protective craft. Until 1939, the United States has a greater merchant shipbuilding program.

"Canada has shown an astonishing power of expansion in productive capacity to the development and production of ships, the most needed in every war sphere," said Sir Arthur, the shipbuilding effort in Canada."

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, asserted that Britain is faced with losing the supremacy of the seas to the United States after the war and that American "big business" interests finally made the move to control United States policy.

Japan, the United States' new shipbuilding program, Shinwell said: "We began the war with nearly 20,000,000 tons of shipping. We could not expect to have more than 17,000,000 tons at the close of hostilities.

Sees Wall Street Influence

"On the other hand, the United States finds herself, having regarded as a great marine nation, with about 12,000,000 tons of shipping, 000 tons of shipping, much of which is of very high quality and will have at the end of the war 24,000,000 tons, 000 tons of first class shipping."

Declaring that "we can hold our own in this race," he said that a fair chance, although unable to compete successfully with America, Shinwell said:

"We are not speaking of the Americans of President Roosevelt or of Mr. Henry Wallace. Many of us we had to contend with an American who is not necessarily one who can be comparatively easy to solve. We are dealing with the America of Wall Street, the America of those who control the policy of the Republican party and who want to control the world and to enable their capitalists to control it for their policy."

Speaking for the Government, Philip Noel-Baker, Joint Parliamentary Secretary to the Transport Ministry, said that "shipping must be an international affair."

The Atlantic effort in defence of Sicily has screened by 50 per cent the communications of the enemy up in the first two or three days of the Allied invasion, London air sources estimated today.

Time for U.S. Offensive Against Japanese on Kiska Growing Short

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 15 (AP)—The time for the United States offensive against the Japanese on Kiska, Aleutian Island in the North Pacific is growing short, responsible officials here is that if the strategic base is to be wrested from the enemy before this year weather conditions make it essential that operations begin as soon as possible.

The first serious attack on Kiska, where the Japanese have elaborate defensive installations, an unfinished airfield and a force estimated as high as 10,000 men, would be a logical follow up to the conquest of Attu Island, completed a month an' a half ago. But whether and when it will be made is a high command secret.

However, it is currently arousing interest in Oklahoma here.

Possibly the most important consideration is the weather, which in the Aleutians area is never good and this season is steadily going from bad to worse. By October gale storms and blizzards will be added to the conditions now existing, rain and 100-mile-an-hour winds. Presumably any campaign for this year would be planned with a view to smashing Japanese resistance before that time.

The battle of Attu required three weeks, beginning on May 11. The enemy force there numbered only about 2,000, but the Japanese were not nearly so well developed as on Kiska.

The alternative to an attack this year is to let the Japanese suffer the ravages of another rough Aleutians winter with few if any supplies reaching them, as already has been accomplished in part.

To leave the enemy on the island, however, would deprive American forces of a valuable base for offensive thrusts against Japan.

Canadian Troops Elated Over Success of Rapid Advance in Sicily

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(Canadian Press War Correspondent)

On the Canadian Front in Southeast Sicily, July 12 — (Delayed) — (CP) — Cable) — With Italians surrendering in droves and towns capitulating with scarcely a shot fired, these first three days of the amazing Sicilian campaign have been a sweep for the Canadians in their sector.

I finally caught up with the fast moving frontline troops yesterday afternoon in a jeep after pursuing them on foot for two days.

They are sitting on top of the world. Even the commanders are surprised at the meagre defence the Italians are making of their homeland.

The Canadians have taken every advantage of the weak stand of the enemy and American and British troops are having equal success.

It has been a victory march so far through mountains, olive groves, plantations and over the chalk dust roads of this part of Sicily. But, maybe there's trouble ahead.

With a few isolated actions and numerous skirmishes, the Canadians have pushed inland more than 30 miles from the south coast, from brother before the next phase of Allied operations.

Yesterday, the Canadians joined up with the Americans on their left and they have been keeping pace with them. It has been a fast but no small achievement, considering the battle experience of these Tommies.

Troops Are Really Tough

Every man the Canadian path has fallen without major fighting. Beyond the west coast, about 15 miles west of the beach where we landed, we overpowered by two companies.

Today, the British Sixth Armoured Division, which includes the Canadian Infantry Brigade in the town of Brucoli, four miles north of the Port of Augusta, after weathering a crisis yesterday in which the German Armored forces mounted a powerful counter-attack and actually reache dthe Allied line at one time.

"Already the Canadian troops have fulfilled Gen. Montgomery's forecast of their fighting qualities."

Situation Grave Berlin, Rome Admit

London, July 15 (AP)—Vichy radio depicted situation of Axis in Sicily today as "extremely serious" quoting Berlin and Rome reports, while Canadian sources said Allied attempts must be checked in order to avoid endangering Axis defensive positions in Eastern Sicily.

The Rome announcement called the battle "violent and close and said Axis aviation was supporting ground forces against "substantial" Allied tank units.

The Italian communique admitted Allied air raids on Palermo and Messina, but said that only had knocked the Germans back but had taken Lentini and Melilli, six miles to the southeast, as well.

This counter-attack by enemy armored forces in which the crack German armored Hermann Goering Division took part indicated that the Italian and German High Command had shifted the bulk of their forces from positions confronting the Fifth American Army in order to block the British path up the east coast.

RUSS DEFENSIVE TACTICS STALL GERMAN ATTACKS

Tank Forces on Both Sides Trade Blows in Belgorod Sector

DESTROY 158 PLANES

Moscow, July 15 — (AP) — Counter-attacking forces spearheaded by mobile artillery, traded blows with German tank and infantry forces in the Belgorod sector of the Russian front yesterday with indecisive results, front reports from Russians, frontline dispatches said today.

The Russians said they had beaten off stubborn attacks which the German High Command launched anew in some sectors around Belgorod, and had themselves attacked in others, but front reports said neither side had made a sweep for the Canadians in their sector.

I finally caught up with the fast moving frontline troops yesterday afternoon in a jeep after pursuing them on foot for two days.

They are sitting on top of the world. Even the commanders are surprised at the meagre defence the Italians are making of their homeland.

NAZIS SPEED-UP NORTHERN ITALIAN DEFENCE LINES

Todt Construction Crews Being Attached From "Atlantic Wall"

MONOPOLIZE R.R.'s

Madrid, July 15—(AP) — The railways of Southern France and Northern Italy have been practically monopolized since the invasion of Sicily by the movement of Axis military supplies toward Southern Italy and Todt organization workers to the Valley and travellers recently returned from that region declared.

The Todt was resulted in German orders to speed-up two long-planned northern defence lines—in the Northern Apennines and along the Po Valley from Ferrara to the Alps at Nice, the travellers said.

The Germans had until recently both the Po Valley and Apennines defence lines had been left to the Italy army and labor units working with Germans against the Todt organization, but that now Todt construction crews are being rushed from the Atlantic wall fortifications into Northern Italy.

Reports from Naples concerning Allied bombing intensified primarily prior to the Allied invasion of Sicily indicated the importance of the foodstuffs which the Allies are taking with them to feed the civil population.

During the heavy bombings which preceded the landings, these reports said, Allied bombers scored direct hits on the Royal Palace at Palermo which turns out most of the flour and bread for the island.

preparing to strike it, and here the Canadian captures their first Italian General—Gen. Achille D'Avet, commander of the 54th Coastal Division which was supposed to defend Augusta from the Canadian landed.

Captured Guard Trusted

I was at headquarters when the Italian general and his party arrived. A smart, soldierly and a husky chap, the Canadian general received him in his headquarters under the trees. The Italian told him a few things about his defeated division and asked if he could retain his sword as a gesture of military honor. Permission was granted—and the Canadian commander has taken away from him first.

The Italian general had been decorated with the Military Cross of the First Great War by the Duke of Connaught, then Governor-General of Canada, and his interpreter asked if he could write and inform the Canadian general of this.

After 2½ practically sleepless days the Canadians have kept up with the infantry on foot, I got hold of a jeep yesterday and sailed in it with the boys of the Lorne Scotsmen.

Along the road to Lepica, we saw smashed, horse-drawn Italian guns and bundles of shells. Bridges and road blocks were piles of rubble. Not a shot was fired against us.

But for the presence of a few snipers in the vineyards and on the hills, the countryside looked peaceful.

Canadians Everywhere

The Canadians were everywhere. Columns were marching forward and others, of Italian guns were following through the fog of dust and heat.

We are all covered by this white dust. Even the sea, which is the real desert rats of the 8th Army, to which they now belong. The dust in the sand, in the air, in the water and in our bankrolls. It is necessary for your puggies at all times on the road.

MUST BE WILLING TO BURN QUARTER BITUMINOUS COAL

Or Householders in Ontario, Quebec Can Buy Only Half Hard Coal Used Last Year

PREVENT COAL FAMINE

Ottawa, July 15 (CP) — The Munitions Department announced today that unless a Quarter of householder is willing to use high-volatile bituminous coal for one-quarter of his normal requirements, he will not be allowed to buy for next Winter more than one-half the amount of hard coal he used the year ended June 1, 1943.

The order was "designed to help prevent coal famine next Winter," and was issued by Coal Controller R. J. Brunning. It will become effective on the 1st of August, and will more fairly distribute available supplies of hard coal and anthracite, of which the principal sources are Canada's Eastern Provinces.

Only in Ontario and Quebec

Mr. Brunning said the order applies in Ontario and Quebec, "because these are the only provinces which depend almost entirely on supplies of hard coal from the United States. Labor difficulties in the United States coal mines with the losses of time in navigation season on the Great Lakes, have resulted in a serious loss of hard coal from that country.

"It is impossible to predict how much U.S. coal we shall obtain this year," he said.

Under the order, every consumer of hard coal or other high-grade fuel, will be required to make application file with his dealer a government form in which he may agree to accept high-volatile bituminous coal to the extent of one-quarter of his requirements for the year ending next June 1.

Declaration on Coal

In the form he must declare how much high-grade coal he burned on his premises in the year ended June 1, 1943, how much he has on hand, and whether he has placed before an order for next Winter's supply. He must also describe the location and kind of heating plant which he seeks the coal, and the type of furnace in which it is to be burned.

More Than 200 Tons Explosives Poured on City

75 Four-Engined Planes Attack in Three Waves in Daylight Raid

TWO TANKERS HIT

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 15 — (AP) — The full weight of the Allies' overwhelming air power was turned against Messina, when medium and heavy bombers struck one of the war's heaviest blows yesterday and the night before against that guardian of the strategic watery jump between Sicily and Italy.

More than 200 heavy bombers and medium bombers were thrown against Messina, the main enter point for Axis supplies from the Italian mainland, in operations during daylight attack. They entirely destroyed 14 enemy aircraft and probably destroyed the certain, at least damaged several others on their targets.

Two Tankers of Smoke

The crews said it was difficult to observe the results because of a billowing clouds of smoke which rose as the bombs exploded.

The Allied Headquarters said 75 four-engined bombers attacked Messina early yesterday afternoon dumping more than 400,000 pounds of high explosives on the strategic city. One of the bombers failed to return.

They also scored many direct hits on docks, wharves and started fires among oil stores in the railway yards.

Torpedo-carrying Beaufighters of the R.A.F., which hit three enemy ships off Sicily on Tuesday, also shot up a destroyer and a large cargo vessel and downed a Junkers-52 transport.

Many Vessels Damaged

The newest victories in the battle for the Mediterranean, aiding the unbroken assistance to the Axis forces in Sicily increased the toll to four destroyers sunk, one left in a sinking condition, one tanker sunk, another left burning and at least three destroyers heavily damaged.

The Beaufighters picked out the largest of three tankers escorted by Maddalena, Italian naval base in Northern Sardinia, and left it burning and listing in her side, causing the ship to explode.

Large Navy Guns and Aerial Cover Aid Progress of Invasion Forces

By PAUL KERN LEE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Almost a British Allied battleship Catania Bay, July 14 — (Delayed)— (AP) — Protected by the big guns of the British fleet plus increasing aerial cover, the invasion coast of Sicily is progressing steadily on this fifth day.

Today's immediate objective is the Catania plains, filled with airdromes. Indicative of the importance of this area to defending Axis headquarters at Rome is the German Goering Division of the Nazi army is reported now fighting to hold up the advance after leaving the earlier defence to Italian elements.

I saw many Goerings captured the first day and four days later in the middle of May, but apparently a fresh Goering unit has been withdrawn from Tunisia or never got there.

One shelborn core of resistance is around the villages of Lentini and Carcintini, both repeatedly bombed by Allied planes yesterday. New forces of parachute and glider-borne landed north of these towns during the night of July 13 and clean-up of the entire area is expected today.

The villages are a little less than 30 miles south of Catania.

The Allied push has been considerably aided by the capture of Augusta, town and naval base which is now being used as a base for Allied shipping, despite repeated Axis air attacks.

Spectacular Battle

Augusta was stormed at sundown on July 13 from the sea in one of the most spectacularly beautiful naval and land battles of the campaign war.

The situation from the start to the present follows these lines:—

The first Allied landings came Friday night, July 9, just before midnight, when more than 200 gliders and many parachutists, followed by the commandos at 2:45 a.m. July 10.

This northern and eastern speed-head of the entire invasion was led by veteran 8th Army troops. Particularly outstanding among these units performed similarly.

Throughout July 10 and 11 the Germans and Italians, mostly the Germans, made persistent air attacks against the ships and beaches but suffered heavy losses and only one merchant vessel was in this area and their only other "success" was the damaging of a destroyer by dog of a hospital ship. I witnessed this.

With the announced Allied capture of all four Sicilian airdrome fields plus German air bases, the Allied progress considerably improved July 13 and 13. Axis air installations are now definitely less bothersome in the two days past.

Tweetie Beaming

Axis air power is still sufficient however, to cause our ships to maneuver frequently, and constant barrage from all types of guns, particularly from the ships, is heard before the moon sets. These are always attack times.

With spotters ashore working, the British fleet is patrolling in great strength along the eastern coast and lobbing shells repeatedly and effectively into enemy troop, road and battleries ashore. The boom of these guns is deafening and constant.

A smaller tank was commanded and was burning fiercely when the flashlight—the only one—the searchlight which fell victim to the torpedo-carrying coastal command craft was a 7,000-ton vessel.

Prisoner Convinced Offensive Would Fail Against Russia

Moscow, July 15 — (AP) — The Soviet press quoted a captured German tank officer today as saying Hitler had issued an order at the outset of the present Nazi offensive in the Kursk sector that "there must be of decisive importance—it must be the turning point of the war — the last great battle before German victory". The press accounts said the German, a Sergeant, had surrendered because he was convinced the German offensive against Russia would fail.

Cost-of-Living Bonus For Soldiers' Dependants Now Provided For

Ottawa, July 15 (CP)—Payment of a cost-of-living bonus to all servicemen's dependants who are entitled to a marriage allowance is provided for in an Order-in-Council published today in Canadian war orders and regulations.

The regulations previously provided for payment of these allowances of the forces certain other persons are entitled to a marriage allowance, such as those who are maintaining a home for the dependants of which he is the head or a widower or those who had left him to keep house for them.

Cost of the extension is estimated at $15,000 a year, divided as follows: Navy $10,000, R.C.A.F. $20,000, and Army $70,000.

TED HALL NOW PILOT OFFICER

Ted Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hall, 99 Sinclair Ave., graduated from the No. 1 Wireless and Gunnery School, Mont Joli, and at Jarvis last Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Hall were present to see the convocation. Ted will now return to the tank of their son. Yesterday word was received by Mr. and Mrs. Hall informing them their son had been promoted to the rank of Pilot Officer. Incidentally, at the time of the graduation, Flt. Sgt. Hall was singled out for special honors in his class at Jarvis.

FIREMEN PUT OUT SMALL BLAZE

Answering their first alarm in almost two weeks, members of the Belleville Fire Department were called to Cider Street, Wednesday afternoon to extinguish a small blaze in an auto abandoned there short circuiting of the electric wiring. Damage, it is understood, was confined to the blaze, it was stated. Wednesday evening a second alarm was summoned when the sudden squall resulted in a big fire in the lower city waterfront dock. The occupants were thrown into the bay but fortunately were able to catch hold of the boat and wait for a rescue party. No one was injured on the scene. When firemen arrived the party had been brought ashore.

BRIEF RAINFALL IS WELCOMED

Missed by showers that skirted the district in the past two days, the Belleville area received a welcome rainfall of .89 inch Wednesday evening which quenched the thirst of vegetables, flowers and other growing crops. Wednesday afternoon and evening showers were received in the district of Holloway and Stockdale where .3 inch fell in the Madoc district. Last evening's shower came up suddenly following a strong wind which immediately preceded the rain.

SAILING MISHAP CAUSED BY SQUALL

A pleasant sail on the bay Wednesday night ended in something more unpleasant for Dr. A. C. Locke who ran into a heavy squall and was seven o'clock when he was making for the harbor. The sail-boat he was in came difficult to control, and finally capsized so that the wind nearly pulled out of the sails. Luckily the boat di dnot upset, but the mast broke.

A man whose name is not known who was in no panic came by, rowed out and helped to tie the boat up to a buoy just opposite the government dock. Then Mr. Keller came out in a motor boat and towed them in.

"It was nothing serious," said Dr. Locke this morning. "Just a little inconvenience and we got good and wet. We won't be able to sail today, but we might be able to manage it tomorrow."

LARGE NAVY

On the early evening of July 11 this ship shot up a shore battery on the Italian coast, silencing it and drawing no reply, but starting a black, smoky fire.

After beating off the expected and usual German fighter or dive-bomber assault during the dawn of July 12 this cruiser and three other bombarded the town of Mailili, 16 miles inland, for half an hour. Other participants included several cruisers and a monitor.

The Germans replied with shells which fell short.

At the Army's request, the cruisers bombarded Mailili with the 1,800 pound shells because of the devastating heavy shelling most of yesterday morning. That hilltop town is at a point where the coastline curves inward and the ships apparently was chosen by the enemy as the best position to hold up the advance. However, the town was captured in the afternoon by the Army, a press observer signalled us this morning:—

"Mailili defenses were worse than Lodon Bliss."

The cruisers' first shelling of Mailili was quickly followed July 12 by the Army's capture of Augusta and its airdrome.

Augusta is a naval base with batteries and then this ship pumped three rounds into the town, which was then held by British troops in Augusta Bay. This was the best shoot of the day, for the fire threw rounds the Army signalled "Cease fire" and "Excellent shooting."

The troops took up positions four miles west of Augusta and also radioed "First class shooting. Thank you."

West Hastings Liberals Nominate Col. R. Vandewater As Candidate

Marmora, July 15 (Special)—Under presidency of Byron O. Lott, West Hastings Liberal Association nominated at Marmora Town Hall on Wednesday afternoon to elect their candidate for the forthcoming Provincial election. Col. R. Vandewater nearly full upon IA. Col. Roscoe Vandewater, Deseronto, was second. Approximately two hundred delegates were present from all parts of the Riding, soon to attend the convention.

Following the filling of credentials and issue of ballots, nominations were called for with the following order:—

1. Mayor Harry Cory, Trenton. Proposer, M. McGaughey, Trenton. Seconder, S. R. Westfall, Hungerford Township.

2. Harold Weaver, Trenton. Proposer, Cliff Saragar, Belleville. Seconder, Col. Roscoe Vandewater, Sidney Township.

3. Col. Roscoe Vandewater, Proposer, Harold Weaver, Belleville. Seconder, Paul Anderson, Sidney Township.

4. W. N. Gilroy, Ox Hill, Proposer, R. J. Hendershot, Trenton. Seconder, Charles Murphy, Wollaston Township.

5. Frank Folwell, Belleville. Proposer, Dr. P. Ross, Deseronto. Seconder, Jack Johnson, Marmora.

At the close of the nomination the chairman called upon the Hon. C. D. Conant, Minister of Lands and Forests, to address the meeting. Mr. Conant was introduced by the chairman to sign a declaration that he would support the candidate chosen by the convention.

Minister Greeted Welcomed

Following the receipt of the thirty-two signatures, Mr. Conant, Deputy-General for Ontario, arrived and was given an ovation as he entered the hall.

Harry Cory speaking as first nominee, said he was there for a particular purpose which brought him to the platform. He was there for the winning of the convention. To those who knew him best, which there might be, was uppermost in his mind. He felt that whatever the result he would be returned on Aug. 4th. A united Liberal party could win the day. The Liberals will be the thing uppermost in their thoughts. He was there first, foremost and all the time and would be there after the convention election.

Gerald Weaver who followed felt it was a grand opportunity to win the riding. He thought that the time for starting into the West Hastings election favored the Liberal party. He was there to stay by the choice of the delegates.

Party Seems Unanimity

Col. Vandewater expressed thanks in his proposer and seconder. Were it normal times he would not have allowed his name to be presented. Considering the times he felt it his duty to stand but was willing to abide by the decision of the convention.

His only idea was to serve the country with interest in this time of crisis. He was not a man of means.

Norman Gilroy stated he was proud to be on the platform of the Liberals at this time. "We know," he said, "we have a great Empire and to a great colony of the Empire. . . . The Liberal Government now in power in Ottawa will go down in history as a great government, and the name of the Right Hon. Mackenzie King will be held in regard as the greatest leader of this country."

He left that there had been much that was wrong with the organization of the past. He was convinced that was put away between them.

He deplored the fact that there were hundreds of Liberals prepared to shirk participation in their duty of voting. "We have to put personalities in this sacred hour the welfare of this country," he stressed.

"There is a desire on my mind to say about the candidate you are about to elect," he continued. "So often after a candidate has been elected, he has not been duly fulfilled support. He should not be thought of as one to be left to shoulder his burden because you did him a favor. He's a representative of the people and you must back him to the limit.

"We have the duty to carry on with the fine spirit displayed by the boys are fighting for. We've got to win the war. . . . We are now the whole power of Ontario goes to the Western front for the war."

Resolutions

The third ballot resulted in the dropping out of Gerald Weaver. The chairman then read resolutions submitted by the Resolutions Committee which included a pledge of loyalty to Hon. Mackenzie King, congratulations to the Right Hon. Mackenzie King, congratulations to Hon. Eric Cross, a native son on his appointment as Attorney General, thanks to Col. Hamilton and the Marmora Liberal Executive and the pledge of wholehearted support to the all-out effort of the respective governments in the prosecution of the war. The result of the final ballot announcing that Col. Vandewater as successful candidate was made by Col. Harry Corby, who like Col. Vandewater, served overseas with the 2nd Batt, Canadian Infantry in the last war.

Upon motion of Harry Cory, seconded by Gerald Weaver, the selection of candidate was made unanimous.

Col. Vandewater in responding, called for the support of all, in that it might be possible for him to serve the Riding under the efficient leadership of Hon. Harry Nixon. The duties of secretary at this enthusiastic gathering of several hundreds of West Hastings were most capably filled by Miss Mary Blair Mills of Belleville.

Gordon Pye Victim of Fatal Seizure As He Plunges Into Muscote Bay To Recover Skiff During Gale

Stricken with a heart attack in the waters of the Muscote Bay, Gordon Pye of Hamilton, was drowned early Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Pye, the accompany of a party of Belleville people, was on his way to the island in an effort to recover a small skiff which had broken away from the yacht in which the fishing party had been cruising. Reports there was a heavy gale blowing at the time, which was the cause of loosening the smaller craft from a row rope.

Mr. Pye and Ted Smith, son of Frank Smith, of this city, dove into the swirling waters when they realized their companion was in difficulty. Apparently Mr. Pye had suffered a heart attack when he struck the water as his body floated to the surface and was soon picked aboard by Mr. Baker and Mr. Smith.

The fishing party included Reg Arnott, Mr. Baker and Mr. Smith, Ted Smith and Percy Ford of Belleville, besides Mr. Pye.

The late Gordon Pye was an employee of the Steel Company of Canada at Hamilton. Prior to retiring from active service he was in Belleville for many years and was employed at the Canada Cement Company plant here before he was transferred to Hamilton. Accompanied by his wife and Mr. Pye followed his employment to the latter city. Subsequently, Mr. Pye and family arrived in Belleville over the week end to visit friends and relatives and enjoy a holiday.

Mr. Pye was 59 years of age.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Pye joined the local fishing party for a boating trip and an unroll home when the drowning occurred. The party was in charge of Ted Smith's yatch the Joka and sail-

Ed. Brown Choice of Liberals To Contest E. Hastings Riding

Retired Hungerford Township farmer and present resident of Belleville, Mr. Brown, has a staunch party supporter, has chosen as candidate for the Provincial election in the forthcoming provincial election when nominations were made Wednesday afternoon at Madoc.

Fifty supporting party members from the riding were nominated, the first ballot resulting in Mr. Brown's election and he was afforded acclamation, securing the unanimous approval from party delegates. Mr. Brown is a former resident of Madoc and is a son of the late Dr. Harold Welsh in the Hastings village.

Nominated as possible candidates besides Mr. Brown were J. Y. Hickey, president, East Hastings Liberal Association, Madoc; Ross Foxboro; Charles Rush, reeve of Hungerford and a warden of the county; Harold Archie Harvey, reeve of Mayo Township. Mr. Harvey withdrew before the first vote was in the field, while the three others intimated they would support Mr. Brown's election if he cared to stand.

"I feel that my nomination is a great honor," declared Mr. Brown as he addressed the delegates following his nomination. He was grateful to the Liberal party of the Liberal Government for the past nine years as Queen's Park. In view of its splendid record he called to see why any elector could oppose the Hon. Mackenzie King Government.

Party Record Speaks

The record of the Liberal Government was one that Premier Hepburn, the Honorable Eric Cross, Attorney General for Ontario, who was the guest speaker in the afternoon. He told how the Government assisted the cost of old age pensions to relieve the municipalities and how the Liberal Government had saved Hastings County money.

Altogether $1,373,000 had been saved the county in the past nine years by the government assisting full cost of pensions and allowances. The highways building program and by the one mill rod subsidy, he stated.

Establishment of the Department of Municipal Affairs had helped many bankrupt municipalities onto the right road and assistance had been arranged for their re-financing without a dollar being lost to the investors thereof.

In spite of the added expenditure forced upon the Government, it announced their budget every year with a reduction in the net indebtedness in reducing the provincial debt from $112,000,000 to $87,000,000 in round dollars. "A reduction of two hundred million dollars in public debt for any province in Canada is surpassed by any province in Canada or any country in the U.S.A."

Attacks Critics of Election

The Premier made the shallowness of opposition criticism people by the Government for bringing on an election during wartime. In 1942, he declared, it had already run its full five year term, the government had voted a one-year extension, that in 1943 it had expired and when it was proposed to extend it beyond the life of parliament, the Conservative party and the C.C.F. party opposed the proposed further extension. It was claimed, the Premier declared, had no longer the right to sit without going to the people, but now the opposition is saying the Liberals are bringing an election.

"There are now ten vacancies at Queen's Park, representing approximately 400,000 voters," stated Mr. Cross. "These people have a right to be represented. If Australia, South Africa and New Zealand have had elections, why should Mr. Hepburn be exempt from the democratic system.

Reference was made to Col. Drew's 23-point Progressive Conservative platform of which the Premier gave claimed, the Liberal government was carrying out in some form or other. He cited the recent reduction in school taxes promised by Col. Drew, which Premier Hepburn criticized as "the worst kind of politics" by the speaker, "It would cost $20,000,000 to implement," Hepburn he said.

The Health program as proposed by the Progressive Conservative party, he claimed, is another twenty-five to eighty millions, which together with the promises would add from $40 to 100 per head to the tax burden.

The policy of the Liberal government is to live within its means, Premier Cross said, "without the increase taxation during wartime." Should the Liberals be returned, the speaker said opposition promises would not be carried out.

Post-War Program Planned

Post-war plans of the Liberal government include the development of highway construction and construction of hydro-electric power and other municipal services. A re-survey of the needs of municipal and planning possibilities was contemplated. Industry was assisted in the program would be set up. Reduction of Hydro rates was planned while full time employment for rehabilitated soldiers and for civilians was the aim of the government.

Speaking briefly of party leadership, Premier Cross declared he had intimated he had been in political life for more than 26 years without integrity having been questioned. That record, he said, would balance wheel of the Hepburn administration. Voters could go to the polls with the knowledge that Premier Hepburn, "and the greatest constructive statesman could be shown would be to send a Liberal representative to Queen's Park from East Hastings."

Col. Harry Hamilton

Col. Harry Hamilton, of Sault Ste. Marie, president, Ontario Liberal Association, was the first speaker. He spoke impressing upon then the importance of the organization. He declared the association could be of great benefit to party followers but intimated it should be an active organization and not confined to selling only at election time.

Publicity, he declared, was a means of bringing about representation. Politicians, he declared, served in the manner of great importance to their country and were not merely representatives which must be put up with. It was declared to be the duty of every citizen to take an active part in the government of his country. He had been in power just ten per cent of the population in accordance with making the country's laws.

Sound Principle Is Policy

"We must adhere to the point where we think it is honorable to participate in politics. We offer ourselves as representatives of the people in government."

Turning to governmental affairs he declared the Liberal party opposition claim of the Ontario Legislature "was a strong government." Still, he said, by terming the forthcoming vote a "snap election", it seems they wish it to be unopposed.

In closing, Col. Hamilton urged a wholehearted support of the com- part of industrial workers and of farmers. "Remember," he said, "on every day that we can shorten the war, just so many more of our boys overseas will be able to come back to Canada."

Candidate Speaks

A former road superintendent for Hastings county, Mr. Brown in his nomination acceptance address declared, if elected, he would devote his efforts to the betterment of road and highway conditions in the county. He spoke of the log and cheese bonuses granted by the Liberal government and of the long holes being put in by farmers of the county who are short of help.

He paid tribute to the Liberal government for its treatment of farmers indicating that if it were defeated at the polls farmers would still continue to put in long hours on their farms, but with less profit than they are now receiving.

Dr. Wesley acted as chairman for the afternoon's meeting at which Eric Cross was introduced to the audience by E. C. Jeffers, who was a life-long Liberal and close friend of the late Harold Welsh. Mr. Jeffers was introduced by Mr. Hanley.

Escaped by the Skin of HisFeet

("London Calling")

Sgt. W. O'Neill, of Western Australia, must be one of the very few soldiers in any army to have trodden on a land mine and lived to tell the tale.

Patrolling with two other men, was treeping upon a Japanese position in the Mubo area when he touched the mine with his foot. They leaped aside, he shouted warning to his mates, and the mine blew him clean down in the scrub. The mine blew off his left foot and shattered his ankle. The moist jungle air, it appeared, helped to keep down inflammation, sufficiently to delay the explosion for two days, during which time he made all the difference.

Sgt. O'Neill has since been awarded the D.C.M. — not for stepping on the mine, but "for killing, single-handed 13 Japanese" whom he met on another jungle foray.

Spirit of Overrun Europe

With an Allied invasion force steadily progressing through Sicily which means that Axis soil in Europe is now in possession of the United Nations, one can but surmise the surging emotions of the peoples of that part of Europe which Hitler overran with his blitz methods early in the war and which have been persecuted as no other peoples in history have been persecuted. To them it must be all they can do to restrain the pent-up feelings of these long-suffering nations which have had the faith that never died and was never downcast because beyond the smoke of battle, and the persecutions and tortures which they had to suffer from Hitler's minions, they saw the bright light of democracy.

While never in history was a more brutal attempt to harness the bodies and defile the souls of men and women and peoples than the Axis has tried to do, never was there such courage among the democratic peoples, never were the persecuted more strong in their souls, more fortified in their undying resolve to wipe out tyranny and the inhumanity of Hitlerism and the Hitlerites and Mussolini and the Fascists.

When the war was carried into Europe by the Allied Nations last Saturday these peoples fortunately for themselves and their cause held firm and refused to expose their souls to the wanton cruelty of the enemy but they have preserved a calm which is a proof of their spirit and their faith, in Britain, the United States and the other nations that are fighting with them the day of liberation when the shackles of the Fascist oppression will be struck off and the Hun and Fascist will be the hunted and haunted criminals.

It is remembered that a few days before the invasion of Sicily British land forces raided Crete, smashed Axis planes on the airdromes and damaged installations, the Cretans were warned by British radio broadcasts to preserve their calm and not expose themselves to the fury of a frustrated enemy until they were told that the time for action had come. They have preserved that calm so possessed are they in their souls of the something that men and women heroic against a powerful tyrant and barbarism. In this way they foil the Axis and wait until called on for help when they will be able to render the service that will further their liberation.

This is a healthy evidence of the fortitude and patience of the European peoples. Where peoples can possess themselves thus in time of great temptation to act they will prove themselves the best of help in due time.

What must be their sense of gratitude towards the nations who are fighting now to liberate them and to free from every race the nightmare of Germanic and Fascist terrorism?

What must be the pride of the overrun peoples to know that in the army that is advancing in Sicily to Italy's front door are their friends, the more powerful of the Allies, and their countrymen in units of a number of the overrun countries. Their own flesh and blood, their own kith and kin are marching with the conquering British, Canadian, American and other races on the Sicilian front, while their great Russian ally is holding with stoutness and self-reliance against the desperate fury of Hitlerism. All the great company of peoples in the free world are marching against the dark spirit of German and Italian aggression.

Where has there been seen greater courage than that of the dominated peoples all through these years of oppression? Sabotage of enemy works has been general in defiance of murderous German leaders. Justice seemed banished by the power of Hitler's edicts against these peoples but the Hun invader could do nothing against the spirit that still lives in the underground movements. With their firm resolve they could wait and smile in the face of the enemy, or openly scorn him as did the Dutch for these overgrown lads were greater and more powerful than any brutal conqueror.

What must have been the feelings of France on the great Bastille Day to hear the voice of the French Colonial Empire bringing encouragement over the broadcasts to the parent country for the French Empire is marching against the Hun and the Italian Duce? The spirit of the Marseillaise is ringing in their hearts. Vandals, Huns, Nazis and Fascists have no song of liberation.

When the time comes all free peoples will be part of the avalanche which will crush the evil-doer nations of the Axis.

Silk Stockings in Museum

Silk stockings not so long ago were the possession of almost every woman and girl but today they have gone for the duration of the war. This is one of the luxuries which has had to suffer during the war.

The modern silk stocking has accordingly taken its place with the styles of the past, shown in the Royal Ontario Museum. In the provincial building are stockings of silk that belonged to Queen Victoria with her monogram surmounted by a crown worked into the top of each stocking. There are stockings of silk in the museum which show clearly by their make that they were costly in the nineteenth century for the stockings had long cotton tops and the silk extended only a little above the ankle. A survey shows that the women sometimes made their own stockings and the museum has a pair of wedding stockings which had been hand-knitted in a fine open-work design.

Women in War

(Montreal Star)

The increasing part which the women of Canada are taking in the war services and in war industry adds interest to the testimony of Ernest Bevin that in Britain "Our women have tipped the scales of war."

This quotation forms a preface to an official booklet giving "Fifty Facts About Women at War," issued by the British Information Service. Not only are the women of Britain doing their full part to "keep the home fires burning," but nine out of ten of the single ones are in the uniformed forces, the war work, while one of every four married women is in war industry.

Women man the coastal batteries, women are in complete charge of balloon barrages, women act as spotters and plotters in the anti-aircraft batteries, women act as pilots for airplane ferry services, women act as fire-fighters, women do work hitherto done exclusively by men in shipyards, machine shops, ammunition and aircraft factories. They are businesslike, self-reliant, quick and dependable.

In other words, the great strides which Britain has made on the road to victory have been made because her women literally have "tipped the scales of war."

JUST FOLKS

"VOICE OF WISDOM"

Time was my patient father used to look to me and say
To my always gentle mother: "Will such frenzy pass away?
Must we suffer this forever? Will he ever learn to act?
If he lives, will he continue 'all our judgments to despise?
Is it possible our offspring can be wiser than a sage?
Think you every doting parent meets this 'voice of wisdom' age?"

In a tone akin to sadness, which I little understand,
Oft he said he'd like to choke me, and at times I thought he would.
"Just be patient," whispered mother.
"'Tis a phase that quickly goes.
Every growing youngster always wants to show how much he knows.
Every father has to suffer being counselled by his lad.
That's a portion of the payment which he makes to be a dad."

Then I grew to be a father, and it wasn't very long
Till my youngster started telling what is right and what is wrong.
And it seemed that there was little in this world he didn't know.
If we ventured an opinion, he would let his wisdom flow,
And I used to think, "I'll choke him!"
But I answered him instead:
"It is time the 'voice of wisdom' should be starting off to bed."

When that youngster you're so fond of gets the notion he is smart
And begins his voice in wisdom, just be patient, don't lost heart!
Though you're tempted so to choke him,
turn to memory's looking glass.
See yourself that way, old fellow, and remember, this will pass.
Just remember when he's sneering at some foolish thing you do,
You're alive because your father suffered patiently with you!

Fireflies

(From The Boston Herald)

On a warm summer night there is a wonderful display of fireworks in the dance of the fireflies through the dusk. High against the black tops of trees they are like stars tangled, and close by one will suddenly flash on his light and be a fairy messenger to call or radiation as it moves swiftly. It moves like a star, but with a purpose, harmless, a lovely adornment of the darkness that is at its strange hour few references to fireflies memory could be found. A compilation of the bugs Hoche Book of Familiar Phrases up only seven references, two of them by foreigners, and one (by Amy Lowell) is the least memorable. Of course, there are more to be found, especially in the prose of the so-called "nature writers." But the fact remains that one of our most characteristic natural charms is largely unreflected in our poetry or popular literature.

Had fireflies existed in England, would not Shakespeare and Keats have celebrated them in memorable lines? Or Herrick, who used the glow worm in a song?

How strange they are to behold! Here is a reference in Sullivan's autobiography, where he tells of a flutter there was in high his father's house who encountered the first fly of the season. "Papa exclaimed, "What a country, where they have had many early instances!" This is appreciative, in a way, but not just the way the fireflies deserve of our literature.

Children will continue to catch them and put them under a tumbler and cover a newspaper, to see if the print can be read, and sometimes will marvel at the efficiency of their illumination, which wastes no rays in heat or otherwise but is 100 per cent pure light, and on ordinary folk will sit in the warm darkness, relaxed from the day's toil, and watch the fireflies come over the lawn. They wake a poetic mood in us, if not in the poets.

Man Who Created the Fly Swater

(From the Buffalo Evening News)

In Missouri recently a man named Benjamin F. Douglas died at the age of 80. He was described as the man who organized the fly-swatter when in 1900 he took a small piece of wire screen, bound its edges with cloth and fixed it to a whittled handle. The idea was adopted by commercial manufacturers and soon similar wire swatters were being extolled without the land.

The passing of this benefactor of mankind will recall the long fight waged against the pest of the house fly. Besides swatters, fly chasers were also used. These usually consisted of strips of paper or flour sacks attached to the end of a broomstick. At regular intervals, a rounding of flies would be made throughout the home. The gradually increasing swarm would be directed to the open door which would be quickly opened and the flies swept into the open. Then the door would be slammed. The entire operation required dexterity and agility.

Various lethal weapons were employed against flies including the sticky fly paper and the poisonous tinted black poison fly paper. In spite of the battle, that went on against them, each season saw their return in great numbers. But in recent years they have been disappearing. There are still enough of them to make known their pestiferous qualities and in certain locations generally of the gratitude they owe to all who have contributed to their abatement.

Whitehall Notebook

London, July 15 —(CP)— Activities of the Free Italy Movement in Britain are gaining momentum with the liberation of North Africa by the Allies and now by the invasion of Sicily.

Members of the movement whose president is Dr. D. Petocelli, a Cambridge professor, met in London, recently to discuss the best policy for propaganda, to Italy in these crucial days.

Dr. Petocelli said there was little use talking on the Italians to the various some stimulus were offered them. After 20 years of Fascism a new generation had grown up in Italy which knew nothing else.

"Nothing higher than that for me," said Sir George. "If I were promoted to corporal I'd be saying 'Why are they putting that old doddering in charge of the lives of others?' I might get shunted off and I like the Home Guard.

Communist M.P. William Gallacher's heart is still young.

Here's why:

"I now own £10 7s 6d," he said in the House of Commons. "I began with £10 a year and my wife collared the £10 and I never saw a penny of it. I have never got a penny yet in the bank since . . . . .

Then he became virtual ruler of Egypt as head of the palace "cabinet" of King Fuad. Later he held diplomatic posts in Madrid and Teheran, was Egypt's envoy in Berlin for 10 years, then, five years ago was to London.

FREEDOM OF PRESS

The United States inherited its ideas about the freedom of the press from the British, particularly from the British Bill of Rights.

But the idea of implementing the freedom of the press by providing facilities for the press was of slow and gradual growth in the United States.

The nation was born in controversy, war and revolution and the early leaders of the nation were not much inclined to take the press into their confidence.

The Continental Congress from its beginning to and through the sessions of the first Senate several motions were made to open the doors but were lost. Oddly enough, the first time the doors of the Senate were opened during the session of 1794 was not when the Senate was debating legislative matters but when it was debating the seating of Albert Gallatin as one of its own members.

Finally however, on February 20, 1794, the Senate adopted a resolution that they shall after the end of that session the galleries should be opened while the Senate was engaged in its legislative capacity, except in cases when in the opinion of the Senate secrecy was required.

That attitude toward such things in those days is illustrated by what President Washington did when he chose not to run in 1796. He wrote his one and only copy of his famous Farewell Address to an editor and printer to be published exclusively in a Philadelphia newspaper!

The Story of the Unknown S S Man

(By GEORGE WEIDEN)
(B.B.C. Press Service)

It happened a year ago, this story, in the last week of May 1942. The scene is a grey and dreary courtyard in an ugly square of some barracks. Over the roof the main building flies a square red flag, with a white circle on it, and in the circle two zigzag, like lightning flashes: SS. We are in Brno, industrial centre of western Czechoslovakia.

It's a quarter to six in the morning, a grey dawn is breaking, cold and foggy. At the stroke of a quarter to six, the door to the courtyard opens and in marches a group of thirteen SS men, members of the Fourth Storm or the Second Stormbann, of the Third Standarte, of the SS Death-head Brigade, Command Bohemia and Moravia, headquarters Brno.

And with these thirteen are six individuals. It's very difficult to see at once whether they are men or women—they are so pallid and grey and saben, just like the morning. Actually they are five men and one woman, Czechs.

They are marched to one wall and put against it. Twelve SS men line up, position, load their rifles, and wait. The thirteenth, who wears a forage cap and calfleaves on his uniform, walks up and down. He's the Unterstumführer, commander of the Sturm, the name for an SS company. He looks at his watch. Not quite six. His hands are in his pockets and through his teeth he whistles the Lily Marlen song:

Let's have our final fling together—

Who knows, maybe goodbye forever

Farewell, Lily Marlen, Lily Marlen.

He stops in front of a huge poster. Big, giant headlines—a new appeal. Yes, it's been posted this very moment. He knows all about it: "Reinhard Heydrich, Reich Protector Böhemia and Moravia, was killed last night. Martial law in Bohemia and Moravia. . . . It is a special duty for all SS officers and men to impress anti-German demonstrations. Suspect Czech agents, incarcerated as hostages, to be shot without hesitation."

Well, he Unterstumführer Jaksha, has done his bit. Early this morning, between three and four, he has rounded up all the Czechs on his Black List. Here they are, the first batch of six. They are ready to be shot, they're . . . Good heavens: it's a minute to six.

He stops, puts into his stride, straightens himself, clear his throat and shouts: "Ready. Attention. Fire."

Twelve rifles crack, six ash-colored heaps of flesh and bone sprawl on the ground. That's the end of their story. But their memory lives: we know their names. They have reached us through other Czech patriots who have spread throughout the world the story of the six hostages of Brno.

But do we know the story of the killers? Let's see: let's go back to the courtyard in Brno, a year ago, a minute after six.

The Unterstumführer shouts: "Ready to march off—execute order—attention—by the left—march off. One remains. He is the "deathclocker"—that's a nickname, SS slang. It means the man who checks up whether the hostages are really dead. This morning our solitary SS man just looks there and waits for the half hour gang to carry the dead away. It occurs to him that he wants to go home to his barracks. He walks, breathes, lights a cigarette, whistles.

"Very odd, that. It's just a year since I joined the SS. A morning in May, at Jena. Nice little town, hilly, lovely country round there, Thuringia. Boy, was I proud to be happy. Only a week before joining, I'd been the appeal for SS volunteers. I was mad to join. But they picked out me at the university. They said I was subd, to think that they would take me. Why, I wasn't even one metre eighty, the minimum height for admission. All my colleagues laughed at me. Then some bigmade bets that they wouldn't take me. I can see them now: Alfred Koch, bovine and thumpish—a poor chap, he's now a cripple—he was a Sebaboid. Then Paul Berger—yes, they all betted against me. They were wrong. I was taken all right, and now I've been in SS for a year."

Meanwhile, the labour gang has finished its customary few words and cigarettes, a few callous remarks, jokes about the weather and the choice of the dead. Then the SS man walks off. He walks past long rows of neat and reddish workers' houses in the suburb.

"Yes, I've been in it for a year. What a different kind of May it was last year. Weeks of training in the old medieval castle, Wartenstein, Lower Austria. I suppose quite beautiful days. I guess they made you feel master of the world, after all, they told you, you, als the master among the master race; you are an SS man.

"They taught you quite a lot of other things there: racial theory; National Socialist history, political organisation and philosophy, Rosenberg, Feder, Darre, how did Darre is but after all I suppose unpersuasive stuff. And then in June —strange how it comes back to my mind so clearly—the ceremony of the Second Initiation. That's when they made you a regular SS man. I was no longer a mere SS probationer. It was a small ceremony, Captain Grimm, torchlight and echoes of angelic Hitler-Youth choirs. And then you swear your arm to take the oath on Adolf Hitler. And trumpets and organ and rifles blare out as a mighty prelude to a song, our SS song:

"When silk unirou werden, wir wahren heuer treu."

"When all around break faith, our faith we keep forever."

Or not? Perhaps I did join because I believed. Well, I don't know; the troubles with me is, I think too much. What on earth am I going now? What a question—Dachau, of course. Before I'm away from my barracks. What's the weather like? Fine, I think. Herrmann Goering Strasse? Those damned Czechs tear off all the main street names. . . . I'd better ask somebody. Now for instance, that little girl—pretty kid. Is this Herrmann Goering Strasse? She shakes her head. Doesn't understand. Don't understand German. Of course she does. Shows how sly if she understands German quite well, as I tell her. She is not more—little slut. They all do.

What was it I was whistling before—

"Let's have our final fling together,

Who knows, maybe goodbye forever,

Farewell, Lily Marlen, Lily Marlen."

They're all crazy about this song. I don't think it's funny at all, it makes me sick. I'm sick—sick with everything—your life and your job, and buildings and barracks and shot windows with frightened pairs of eyes behind and people looking at you coldly."

The SS man turns a corner. He walks for a step and suddenly stops. He hears a familiar clicking noise; he hasn't heard it with his ear; it has just missed him. His mind has a number of automotionless. Then he lights another cigarette.

"Lucky one. . . . Very lucky. I'd better look round for the chap who did it, chase him. Or shouldn't I? Can't be terribly careful. Funny last year if that had happened to me, I'd have raised hell. I'd better get back to barracks. They would have got me so easily; might have been another appeal to the public: SS man murdered 'Suspect elements earmarked as hostages to be shot without hesitation.' Good old Unterstumführer Jaksha would have had to get up tomorrow at five o'clock bimbago and all, shooting is always at six. Yes, I've been lucky. Now—I'm certain they are just a few minutes away.

"Let's have our final fling together,

Wh knows, maybe goodbye forever,

Farewell, Lily Marlen, Lily Marlen . . ."

SOLDIER OF THE SOIL

THIS year the Canadian Farmer urgently needs help. He needs your help to produce the food so necessary for victory. Many thousands of farm workers are serving in the Forces, so that the farmer—the Soldier of the Soil—is shorthanded, but shorthanded as he is, he is called upon to produce more food than ever before. Food is one of the most powerful weapons of war. Grains, eggs, bacon, beef, fruit, vegetables —FOOD to feed our armies, our allies and our people we must have.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

You may be a school teacher, student, business or professional man, an office or store clerk—no matter what you are, if you have a few hours, days, weeks, or months of free time this summer, you can do your country and the farmer a great and patriotic service by helping out on the farm. You may be inexperienced, but you still can help. You will find work on the farm healthy and congenial. It will give you the satisfaction of feeling that you have brought Victory nearer.

What you should do NOW!

Be Sure Snapshots Are Well Taken

Scarcity of Camera Films Impresses Need of Great Care in Taking Pictures

Camera fans are getting more and more worried as their supply of camera film are getting less and less. One thing is sure and that is to take care at all for some time. Lack of help and materials has of course contributed to this shortage, as well as the most important fact that every time Allied planes fly over enemy territory, pictures must be taken.

Under these conditions with candid enthusiasts trekking all over the city to try to unearth a roll of film, the picture in every drug-store window seems at first glance the subject of irony. The picture is of two helmeted soldiers, grinning over a snapshot. Below the picture reads: "Visit them every day—Buy Bobby an Egg."

This however, is still good policy. If you can't take many pictures be sure that what you do take is good and are pictures that the boys overseas would like to see. Keep every-day set of the children an afternoon of fun and frolic. For them the table was handsomely decorated with red, white and blue streamers and miniature baskets of flowers. In the centre was a beautiful birthday cake, atop of which were five lighted candles. The boys and girls really enjoyed the delightful refreshments of sandwiches, cup cakes, cheese, ice cream, lemonade and candy. Bobby spent a very happy and enjoyable day and was the recipient of some very lovely gifts from his friends.

Items of Interest For Women

Worsted and Woollen:

Many people puzzle over the difference between "worsted" and "woollen". They constitute the distinction of wool fabrics. To make worsted wool fibres must be to five inches or more in length are combed, drawn out one another before they are spun. Because the worsted surface is more closely spun wear it is an excellent clothing fabric. Worsted garments should be washed the same way as woollens, only more gently in lukewarm fine-fabric suds that won't shrink or wool, and never are woollens. Worsted fabrics are usually more closely spun and are smoother and firmer than woollens. Most flannels, broadcloths, gabardines, velours, jersey and mackinaw fabrics are woollens. Most woollen fabrics have their effect of softness in the weave, yarn construction or color, as in tweeds. Generally, woollens do not wear shiny but some get "baggy" because of the loseness of the yarn or weave.

Leg Make-up Tip!

Are you touring your stockings out of a bottle this summer? If so, here's a little tip that will help you in the wash-up job you have to do on your hands after applying your stocking make-up. Before starting dig your fingernails into a cake of laundry soap. Then the few extra minutes you use for your daily "whipped cream" lather period. This way the tips of your nails won't be filled with hard-to-get-out brown goo. Try it and see.

On broiling days, when heat blurs and blisters the skin, it is helpful to refresh you in a suffocating embrace, with nausea more than one to cope with perspiration. You redouble your toilette, bathing and using your favorite deodorant or cologne and still you feel that odor as you normally do. If you use the type of deodorant that does not stop perspiration, but only in fresh dress shields, so that no horrid stains show, you are in trouble.

But the underarms are not the only spots that cause annoyance. To quell that silver stickiness, there's nothing like a daily bath using a good deodorizing health soap following the exercise, and to prevent a bottle back shield will separate you from the back of your blouse. Then a dash of talc, and you could and comfortable if they are dusted with cologne. Stockings and lingerie are changed twice a day. To keep your feet cool and healthy, wash it often and between shampoos wipe it, strand by strand, with cotton moistened with cologne. Change your make-up often, and brush your hair handy to mop up dew from upper lip and forehead. Then you may feel hot, but you won't look it.

Fine Lather.

Sweet-smelling pine pillows which last for years and are ideal for summer cottages and sun porches, can be made very simply. Gather your needles and when they are absolutely dry, enclose them in a case made of a non-proof ticking material. For a cover choose an attractive shade of terry cloth which can be washed often. Keep-cloth that fresh the dirt away and keep the colors looking bright and gay. Terry cloth is not too closely woven to prevent the pine scent from coming through.

Martydom Is Out of Style

By HELEN FOLLETT

Rita Hayworth thinks every one sh should dress for her relaxation

In the past fond mothers loved to declare that they dressed just for their families. That playful pose has gone out of fashion though we still come in contact with one of its devotees from time to time now and then. Let her pause and listen.

If she doesn't have a little fun, if she sticks in the house day after day and she gets cross and catchy and put herrid marks upon her.

Marry a woman who waits hand and foot on every member of the family and she'll like a drudge and to look it. She 'is beset with the cup of tea habit. Her reward she is to serve in the domestic cause.She loses contact with her out neglecting the job.

what is going on in the world.

What happens? Daddy gets tired of the resigned look upon her face and may find lighter hearted and more companionable. As she is always tired she isn't good company. She doesn't play with the children, keep in touch with their activities.

Nothing wrecks good looks like monotony. One day the same as another. It is better for the domestic saint to lay off the floor mop and the dish towel now and then herself, so she will keep within hailing distance of the family.

She should read interesting books, see amusing movies, find time to call in her neighbor for a cup of tea and have little bursts of gossip. That can be done without neglecting the job.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECHMAN

She Dilemma Is: Shall She Accept Money from Soldier?

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I need your advice about whether I should accept money as a birthday gift from a soldier. I do not know him very well, have seen him only a few times, but he has very respected since he entered the Service; I have been friendly with him, and at present I have no interest in any other man. From the few meetings we have had and from here letters I feel sure that he is very much. In his birthday letter to me he enclosed a check for twenty dollars, saying that he was not able to go into town to buy a gift for me but thought me to accept the money instead as a small token of our friendship. I had decided to send the check back the first time I read it, but after thinking that this would not be the proper thing to do. What is your advice?

H.

You have a choice between making your answer a cold shoulder of embarrassed, and misleading him completely. Such a reply belittles the status of your friendship with him. Appreciation for the evidence of friendship for this soldier is extremely casual, and apparently you have his sincere regard and desire for growth of the friendship....judging by your comments. You have never been out with him, and at present you have no interest in him, so it seems.

Since you "know that he cares very much for you" I am sure you think I am sure you will be interpret your accepting it as a sign you "care more than you should." I have in honesty to him as well as to yourself, and for the preservation of your taste, I think it would be very much better to return this check.

This soldier sent his gift in the kindness and most thoughtful and generous spirit, and I certainly realize his difficulty about "shopping" for a man in a distant land. In your letter of thanks to him you should acknowledge, in part, the graceful and appreciative words, your gratitude for his kind thoughtfulness. Perhaps you could say to him what I am sure is true . . . that you are touched by his gift but not to have you accept a gift of money from a man you are not engaged to. From the few meetings you have had and from here letters I feel sure that he will understand his shopping difficulty, and will be quite pleased to learn that if he is disappointed for a short time in your return of the check, he will respect your taste and your desire to guard your friendship.

Good Taste In Letterheads

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

A friend of mine told me yesterday that I am "improper" to use colored letter-paper, and that it is "old-fashioned" to have your name and address printed on letter-paper. Will you please tell me if she is right?

F. D.

Your friend must be an extremely conservative person! And although I agree with her that the best taste in one of the many shades of white is always indicative of good and taste, there are very many delightful shades proper for the less conservative. Blue shades are very popular especially the dark rich shades. Green is also very. But in the interest of good taste, it's just as well to avoid the sickly-green shades of orchid or purple or salmon-pink or a nondescript shade of green.

It definitely isn't "old-fashioned" to have your name and address printed on letter-paper that is extremely convenient and practical for so many uses.

What you say is your account of yourself. Watch your conversation!

"eloquent listener" to make a good witty sloops. And after awhile it becomes part of a habit.

The best slogan I know is the wife of an important literary man, who has a brilliant sense of humor but is very shy. She "sizes HIM" on every occasion; she "feeds" him just the right line, and when he has finished his story or his joke or his remark, she is first to start the applause.

She has a wonderful husband—a wonderful wife. And he has. It takes two, REMAINS two, to make a good stooge to your own husband!

Don't Be Afraid of the Age of 40

FORTY HARVEST OF LIFE

Just as surely as the wheat is ripened, so the forties are an adult's life comes into fulfilment and a sense of growth.

So many people fear that approaching age—they think it is the beginning of the end of their life. In reality, it is the beginning of a fuller and richer life than ever, filled with the knowledge acquired from the younger years.

Few great men achieved their highest of praise before the forties. Handel wrote "The Messiah" when 56. Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" was at 46. Leonardo painted the "Mona Lisa" at 51.

Forty brings maturity and with maturity ability to enjoy life to a fuller degree.

Look ahead to forty. It is the age you will enjoy if you are prepared.

The 32-page booklet, written by the eminent Professor Walter B. Pitkin, points the way to activities and joys which lie ahead for those in the forties, and a new, vivid life begin at forty.

Life can surely begin then!

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control matters regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ontario.

Q.—What is the purpose of the recently announced subsidy payment upon the manufacture of flannelette garments?

A.—Principally to save material so that it may be more largely utilized for infants' and children's wear. Together, the production of two-piast sleepers, long sleeves women's pyjamas and long sleeves on 80 per cent. of women's nightgowns will save, it is estimated, 250,000 yards of flannelette a year.

Q.—How will the new ration books be distributed late, in August?

A.—No. newspaper subscription rates are exempted from the maximum prices regulations.

Q.—As a dressmaker, do I have to hold a licence of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board?

A.—If your operations are of an itinerant character, you do not need but if you operate a regular place of business, you are a Dressmaker. Dressmakers operating at home were also licensed, but the volume of their business is more than $500 a year.

Q.—It seems to me that I am still overcharged for bananas. What should I do?

A.—Present your complaint to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. If possible with sales slip. A dealer in one Ontario town was recently fined $200 for overcharging on the sale of bananas, which are definitely under the maximum prices regulations.

Q.—I live in an hotel. Is it true that I must surrender ration coupons to the management?

A.—Yes, you must deliver your ration book to the management, which will detach coupons as they fall due.

Watering Lawn

In hot dry weather such as there has been lately, the man who is interested in their bits of grass, which have managed to survive the hot and survive amid the weeds, drag out the garden hose and set to work to provide a little artificial rain. There is nothing against an action of this kind, but it might be suggested that some methods of watering a lawn are more effective than others.

For example, the lawn of a Belleville church, after parching in the sun. Some thoughtful person had decided to water it, and had fastened a hose to an outside tap, propped up the hose, turned on the tap, and left the hose playing on a fairly wide area of lawn.

But none is not equipped with any particular intelligence. It does what it is left to do and no more. This particular hose, which had seen better days, had chosen this inopportune moment to spring a leak. Right in the middle of the hot day it was making a most valiant effort to water the lawn all by itself, but without much success. It was gurgling away, soaking the spot immediately below it.

The nozzle, from which a fine spray of water should have been flying, was ejecting a faint trickle onto a spot of ground about as large as a dime. Only a few scattered drops which splashed up were managing to find their way to a larger radius of ground.

The grass still looked very hot and dry and thirsty.

NEXT SEASON you'll find a great many more fabric hats than usual and velvets and satins will be known and worn much earlier than is usually the case. Felts shown will be of the small cleverly manipulated variety and the black satin or velvet turbans with sparkling trimming and draped effects will be promoted for afternoon wear.

"Feeding" A Husband

I always thought that "stooges" was a cheap word until I looked it up, and found that it has many grownups and subtle meanings than almost any other word in Rogat's Thesaurus.

Its synonyms run all the way from henchman, colleague and yes-to henchman, servitor and valet. (Everything that the ideal wife is supposed to be, plus a thirty-five dollar word.

And if, as Alma Archer has said, "A good stooge is a social asset," then a good stooge is a marital necessity. And the happiest wives I have known have been the most perfect stooges. They were the kind who feed their husbands not the comedians say, instead of trying to grab all the laughs and limelight themselves.

"Feed the brute" was our grandmothers' slogan. And in these days, there are lots more important and effective ways of "feeding" than by stuffing him with rations. You can feed his ego, his self-confidence and his vanity, by stooging for him in a way that will cut his most brilliant side and his wittiest remarks. If he's shy, he'll be delighted to have you start a conversational ball his way, and give him a chance to show off as a big talker, he'll be delighted to have a stooge-wife, who starts him on his favorite themes and then gives him the floor.

The great feat of being a good stooge is not only knowing what to say, but when to STOP saying it and keep your mouth closed. Most women are the kind of bubblers that like the brook, too garrulous to make good stooges.

But, if women only knew it, garrulity is the first and most glaring sign of middle age. Talkativeness is the first sign of a double chin, that gray hair or a double chin. You can lose your hair and have your face lifted; but a babbling tongue, like a sense of humor, dates you as indelibly as a laundry-mark.

Besides, in these days, you can't possibly keep opening your mouth without saying the wrong thing. There are so many wrong things to say! Silence is golden these days. It's radium.

It may be a little painful, at first, to start the conversation and then lean back and function the gentle art of listening; especially, if you are bursting with opinions and brilliant, scintillating, snappy comebacks. But it takes an

BABY'S HOT LITTLE HEAD IS A DANGER SIGNAL

WHEN your Baby's head feels hot to your hand, when he's fretful, unsettling. And do it quickly! Mrs. Ernest Mills, Box 27 Kingsville writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby when he was teething and I have him a Baby's Own Tablet at night and he was well and sound."

And Mrs. Francis Carrel, of Midland, has this to say: "My little girl was so cross, I thought she was sick. A friend of Mine's advised me to give her Baby's Own Tablets. I gave her one at night and she was well and sound."

Baby's Own Tablets are sweet-tasting, easy to crush and "easy to give" even to baby of a couple of days old. Aspirin's certificate on every package. BABY DISCOVERS BUTTER IN BAG AS MOTHER SHOPS

Decorates Self and Carriage Both Inside and Out

One resident of Belleville at least is still unaware of the necessity of being very careful of rationed goods, from the incident seen on Front Street the other morning.

A mother very unwisely had left several large bags of groceries in the baby carriage along with her son when she went into a store to continue her shopping. Son, probably bored, had taken advantage of the opportunity to explore the bags. His efforts were well rewarded by a really big find in the shape of a pound of butter.

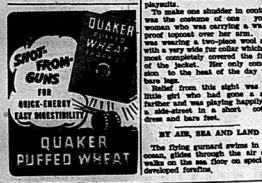
Baby immediately decided to change his role from that of child to that of butter spreader, and if appearances were not deceptive had made a very good job of his self-appointed task. The butter was well smeared both inside and outside the carriage, while an attempt to camouflage himself as well had resulted in a very buttery baby, with a yellow chin still sticky hair.

While peacefully smiled sympathetically baby seemed quite contented in his yellow paradise. Further investigation of the exciting bags had produced a cookie, to an experimental frame of mind, baby rolled the cookie in what was left of the pound of butter, and sampled it. He looked up with the air of a great discoverer, as if to say—"Mm! Butter sandwiches are good!"

What Mother said when she saw what was left of her "coupons" is best left to the imagination of the reader.

Kiddies Dress Sensibly For Hot Weather

It doesn't much matter whether it is the heat or the humidity to most people, because which ever it is it's hot, and that's that. Dressing to suit the weather is one way of fooling the weatherman, best carried out by the younger members of the community who are not hampered by conventions.



Envious glances were cast yesterday at one young lad on Front Street who looked amazingly cool clad only in a pair of trunks, as he peddled his tricycle down the street. A little girl was defying the heat in a brief bathing-dish put on next to front, and many children were dressed in scanty playsuits.

To make one shudder in contrast was the costume of one young woman who was carrying a waterproof topcoat over her arm. She was wearing a two-piece wool suit, with a very wide fur collar which almost completely covered the front of the jacket. Her only concession to the heat of the day was bare legs.

Belief from this sight was the little girl who had gone a step farther and was playing happily on a side-street in a short cotton dress and bare feet.

Bird-Bright Tailleur

De Pinna.

Bright, thin red, cheery as any bird plumage, is the color of this spun linen suit with its one-button closing flanked by other buttons purely for show. The tabbed blouse is red and white eyelet embroidery.

By PEUNELLA WOOD

Tailored suits in cool fabrics are a pet problem for many a man, for many folks are now city-bound who never saw a mermaid blow up before in their lives.

Linen, gingham, various sheer-minded rayon weaves, tailor well, and suits made from them present a smart, well-groomed city appearance while adding the extra gift of a jacket which can be removed decently if the going gets just too hot to bear. Never were more blouses offered for sale in all styles and colors, so it is easy to set up a complete suit wardrobe for hot weather.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband's Shortcomings Make Her Feel Old

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Several years ago I married a widower with a daughter of five. We now have a baby girl of our own. His only fault was drinking, and he also had been running around with another woman. I've heard since I married him that his first wife left him for these two reasons.

He's back at his old tricks again, and I've discovered lipstick on his shirt and on all his handkerchiefs as he puts them in the wash. He never takes us anywhere except to see friends, who serve him drinks. He doesn't come for meals until it is late, and then goes to bed right afterward.

I want to leave, but I have no money, and I want both girls in my custody. His daughter wants to come with me. I think it's terrible to bring children in this environment, as I too had a drunken father and know what this girl of 13 is going through.

I'm still young but feel like an 80-year-old. I could have my husband put into the Army, but if anything happened to him, I'd have that on my conscience forever. What do you think I do?

A. H. M.

A wife cannot have her husband "put in the Army." She can notify authorities he is not supporting her, when he's automatically moved up to 1-A and if physically fit inducted into the service. His habits suggest he isn't fit. Anyway, you tell me you'd have it on your conscience if anything happened to him. That alternative seems to be out.

Could you persuade him to take a course of treatment with Alcoholics Anonymous, which has worked such extraordinary cures for drink addicts?

Or why not get a job? In the city from which I write, there are thousands of jobs, with good pay, are open to women now, and the children could be put in a day nursery.

It's absurd for a woman who is "still young" to feel 80 years of age. And as this man's first wife left him on account of his faults, it seems only sensible that you put your own welfare and that of the children first.

Letters to Unknown Soldiers Discouraged

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We want to post the names and addresses of all boys in the service from our church, as a reminder to all members to write to them. But I've been told this would be unlawful and that we would be permitted to post the names only. Is that true?

Ours is a small country church and the list would include only about 25 to 30 names and addresses.

R. R.

A good many churches have posted the names of their members who have gone into the service. The suggestion that fellow-members write to them is, I believe, restricted to friends and acquaintances. Both the Army and Navy discourage letter-writing among strangers, because at the beginning of the war, unworthy persons, engaged in Fifth Column work, wrote to service men to discover the sailing of ships and the movement of troops.

I hope you will write to the young men you know, whom you may have met at church or in young peoples' societies. Letters are appreciated tremendously by service men.

Germans Are Now Learning About Hideousness of War

William L. Shirer, well known foreign correspondent and author, is at present in the East and has written the article for the New York Herald-Tribune.

"No one can say at this critical juncture of the war whether the great Anglo-American air attack on Germany alone can bring the Reich to her knees. There are some airmen, among British, British and American—who believe that it can, if every available plane is pressed into service, in the next three months. The bulk of military opinion, however, would seem to agree with the recent statement of General Marshall that 'the enemy may be hammered to his knees by bombing, but a knock-out blow cannot be struck from the air alone.'

In the meantime, Anglo-American strategy in this sector appears to be following the line which Mr. Churchill explained in a recent speech. He called the present air offensive an experiment, and it will be tried until we prove the forces are ready for the assault on the Continent. If the mass bombings do bring Hitler's Reich down before that assault is begun so much the better. But few high places in this town are counting on that.

On one aspect of the Allied bombings of Germany there is little room for doubt. They have, we estimated the very world in which the Germans, in their arrogance and in their ignorance, have been living. They have brought to the war home to the German people for the first time since the Napoleonic invasions—war, as one German commentator in describing a night attack, is "not always pretty" "in all its hideousness."

"For the last month the German people saw this aspect of the war was in 1812. The memory of it has become erased from their minds—in fact, has completely gone from the collar light-heartedness with which they sent their armies across the borders into Austria, France, Poland and Russia and to the brief interval between 1936 and today. War was fine if it could always be fought on the other fellow's land. It could even be lost, as in 1918 without a single German city of town being in the least molested. Immunity for the German homeland from the ravages of battle was the concept which came to be taken for granted in the German mind. It made conquest more pleasant.

When Hitler began his war on September 1, 1939, the people of the Reich, it is true, had some misgivings about the war. No foreign army, they were sure, ever could penetrate the German borders. But what about the planes? It was to answer them on this point that Goering made his famous statement at the beginning of the war that no enemy planes ever could break through the formidable air defences of the Luftwaffe. I was in Germany at the time and was somewhat surprised when the people accepted Goering's promise as though it were a mere statement of fact. Their confidence in immunity from bombing was utter.

Actually that confidence received a shock on the night of August 25, 1940—a date little marked by the outside world at the time. At Joseph Harach, who was in Berlin that night, wrote: "If Nazi Germany ever disintegrates internally history will trace that disintegration back to the night of August 25, 1940." That was the night that the R.A.F. bombed Berlin for the first time, the night they shattered a few houses and killed some Germans. It wasn't much of a bombing as I remember, but what it did to the minds of the Germans was immeasurable. Goering had lied to them. The century-old, dry immunity from enemy attack had ended.

They knew it much better today. In fact, in the last couple of months the people of western Germany have been jolted back to the days of the Thirty Years War. The whole terrible devastation of the German land left a deep scar on the face of it will take us—who ourselves are so far from the scene of war—a little time to realize what the once so-confident German people are going through these days as one after another of their cities is smashed to smithereens by the R.A.F.

Last week in London you could get an idea. The R.A.F. bombed Cologne heavily—for the 111th time, they say, will take us—who ourselves are so far from the scene of war—a little time to realize what the once so-confident German people are going through these days as one after another of their cities is smashed to smithereens by the R.A.F.

Last week in London you could get an idea. The R.A.F. bombed Cologne heavily—for the 111th time, they say, will take us—who ourselves are so far from the scene of war—a little time to realize what the once so-confident German people are going through these days as one after another of their cities is smashed to smithereens by the R.A.F.

"The people of Cologne have aged many years in this single night. Words fail me to describe the terrors to those who did not live through it. Entire quarters are transformed into debris. My heart failed me when I saw the damage done to our national shrine, the Cathedral of Cologne."

Incidentally, it might be said parenthetically that the people on this island were not happy over the report that the Cologne Cathedral—one of the wonders of Gothic architecture—might have been damaged, but it might be added, too, that so far as your correspondent, who was in Germany at the time, could see, neither Dr. Heinhammer nor any other German experiences the slightest heart failure when the Stukas were smashing the churches of Warsaw, Rotterdam, London, Coventry or Canterbury.

Heinz von Flatow, German radio reporter, was, if my memory serves, completely unnerved by the scientific destruction of Warsaw in December, 1939. He was in Cologne the other night, and the effect on him somehow was different. Next night you could hear him wailing on the radio. He said, in part:

"It was an hour of satanic horror. And endless, high explosive bombs and incendiary bombs rained down on us from the sky. The explosions could be heard in the depth of our shelters, and in the morning we saw the results. It is impossible to describe the destruction and the grimness—the ghastliness of the scene. We cannot give you a picture of the damage because entire streets are not passable. The voices of the people are hardly audible. Their throats are raw because of the smoke. They are sitting in the streets, some in suitcases, staring at the few belongings they were able to save from the flames.

It is obvious then, that the bombings certainly have not increased the appetite of Germans for war. As one Cologne newspaper remarked the other day: "Any one who lives in a district threatened by air raids experiences a feeling of physical disgust when he meets a comrade who today still glorifies war."

But it was the glorification of war by the Germans which made it so easy for Hitler to plunge the whole world into war. I, also from the damage to German war industries and transport, the Allied bombings shattered the German glorification of war, then not only will the end of the conflict be brought nearer, but one of the conditions for a lasting peace will have been found. For as long as war remained a glorious adventure in the German mind and soul it was very certain that the literature would be indulged in whenever Germany felt herself strong enough to carry it through successfully.

The air war as propaganda as an influence on the German mind and character, may turn out to have marked an important turning point in history.

Fliers Sail and Sailors Fly To Learn Each Others Job

A new scheme of liaison between officers of the Royal Air Force and the Merchant Navy has brought about another strange war-time switch in jobs. From planes of air convoys to ships' bridges, vessels study the tactics of airmen protecting their vessels while, on the water, airmen from the decks of merchant ships learn the routine and difficulties from the seaman's point of view. In this way each gets a realistic idea of the others work and co-operation between convoys and protecting aircraft is facilitated. In top picture an officer of a Merchant Navy vessel takes time out to talk to his two R.A.F. guests, who have been watching the line of ships stretching up the Channel. Below, two Merchant Navy officers up front with the pilot of an R.A.F. plane keep a sharp watch on other escorting aircraft.

72 Depth Charges Aim for Hastings For Month July

Each Charge Represents $90 for War Certificates in "Stamp Out U-Boat Campaign'

Seventy-two depth charges, costing $90 each, have been allotted as the objective for Hastings County in the current "Stamp Out the U-Boat" Campaign which is running for the calendar month of July.

The campaign is one inaugurated by the National War Finance Committee to raise money through the sale of War Savings Stamps for the purchase of depth charges to fight the U-Boat menace which is threatening Allied convoy routes across the Atlantic. All sales of War Savings Stamps per the month of July will be devoted to the purchase of depth charges, it has been announced by committees.

Imposing charts bearing the picture of a depth charge showing how there are 72 spaces for stickers are being placed in post offices, banks, and other public places to bring prominence to the campaign. The purchase of four stamps costing $1 entitles anyone to a sticker to place on any of the charges. The purchaser's name and address goes on the sticker and when all spaces are filled the placard goes to the War Finance Office and a depth charge has been purchased.

Employees of industrial plants or stores may get a full roll of the placards and have the name of the firm or store printed on the depth charge.

Sales of stamps for the purchase of the 72 depth charges in Hastings are intended to be additional sales not including pledged purchases of stamps, it was pointed out.

Monahan Says 'Robbery' When Beaten by 'Toar' Morgan In Main Bout That Pleases Fans

"Irish Jerry" Says He Was Victim of Ring Conspiracy Between Referee Lawson and Morgan

DUNLOP TOSSES BLIMP

I'll never wrestle in Belleville again with Phil Lawson as the referee," screamed Jerry (Irish) Monahan after being beaten by Wethur "Toar" Morgan, the fighting Marine, in the main bout of last night's Queensbury A. C. grappling show at the Hume Arena when nearly 2,000 yelling fans howled with glee when their favorite was given the nod over the pugnacious Monahan.

"I was surely given the business. Lawson counted me out twice on quick counts and aside from this actually floored me from behind as Morgan could win the deciding fall. If that is the type of refereeing the Ontario Athletic Commission and Belleville fans want, then count me out. But there's a change somewhere in the officiating picture," continued Monahan, as he remained overnight in the city to complain personally regarding what he considers a "frame up."

Plays Cowboy

Maybe Monahan has grounds for a legitimate squawk. After all Referee Lawson did "play cowboy" and match "Irish Jerry" from behind to give Morgan an edge for the third and final fall, but isn't all fair in love and wrestling? Is it?

Regardless, the patrons got a big kick out of seeing the pugnacious Monahan subdued and even you and I like to see the bully put into his place whenever possible.

With Ed "Strangler" Lewis present as his manager, Monahan tried to duplicate the five-times world champion's strong hold 'the strangle hold' on the hapless Morgan to open hostilities. Naturally the fans took a dislike and strained their vocal chords in protest. They were rewarded in a moment when Monahan tried to evade Morgan's retaliation by jumping from the ring. In the scramble gave chase and a marathon ensued before the grappler could return to the fray squared circle where Monahan pitched Morgan and won with a lightning-like press.

Morgan Chargined

Rather chargined Morgan refused to return to the dressing room and remained within the ring during the recess to be given considerable advice from sympathetic patrons as to how to beat Monahan. Apparently the advice was worthwhile because, on resuming hostilities Morgan gained a wrist hold and wound Monahan up like a clock before applying a series of flying tackles and had the patrons on their feet and then several matters with a press in exactly 11 minutes of rough-house tactics.

Came the final round. Monahan tried Ringo Lardine, Lawson, and got Monahan pugnaciously. Monahan choked Lawson, Morgan took things in his own hands. So did Monahan in a more pugnacious manner. In a picture that resembled "ride 'em cowboy", Lawson jumped Monahan from behind and hauled him off Morgan with the referee and Monahan going to the mat. Morgan hopped aboard the prostrate Monahan and before you could say "Jack Robinson" counted three and Monahan was the loser of the fall. Then the wind went out of body was happy, except Monahan and his manager Lewis. "It's robbery" screamed both losers.

Much Fun Here.

In the semi-final bout featuring wrestling's newest freak, Tiny Blimp, weighing 642 pounds, Al "Blimp" Dunlop, the Toronto mad villain, accomplished something few wrestlers ever did. He actually caught the human monstrosity with an armlock and hurled the entire 642 pounds bodily over the ropes and pinned The Blimp with a press and that's no mean trick of weightlifting. Prior to the fall, however, Dunlop must have thought he was running into a stone wall as he repeatedly rode the human from the Blimp's mid-section with little results. Twice the 642-pound giant took both Dunlop and Referee Lou Fox in submission by merely standing on their respective feet, which was not appreciated, especially by the referee.

Loses Own Bout

In the opening bout Leo Numa of Seattle was given the decision when George Vukelas, advertised as the "second Jim Londos and presentday Lou Thesz" refused to be unduly jealous and crashed through the ropes to be counted out after approximately 10 minutes on the floor. However, for 36 minutes like Mr. Dooley, Vukelas commanded the respect of Numa and the patrons, but his ring-consciousness proved his downfall, but he would be back Thursday night if said when Promoter Tumney wishes to bring him back to Belleville. Wrestling fans are looking forward to the Hume Arena next week when more surprises and thrills are to be awarded.

Bobo Newson Traded to Browns Declares Got "Dirty Deal" Threatens to Quit Baseball

Brooklyn Gets Pitchers Ostermueller and McKain in Return, but Bobo Isn't Satisfied

DUROCHER WON'T QUIT

Brooklyn, July 15 (AP). — Louis (Bobo) Newsom declared today was the cause celebre of Brooklyn Dodgers' rebellion against Manager Leo Durocher last Saturday, was traded yesterday by St. Louis Browns for Fred Ostermueller and Archie McKain, both pitchers.

Won't Be Back

Newsom promptly declared that he would not join Baltimore but he would report to the Browns, with whom he has played at two previous stages in his long and colorful career.

Newsom said he was informed of the deal by Donald Barnes, president of the St. Louis Baltimore League club, and added that he had told Barnes:

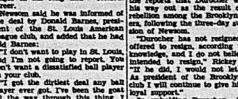
"I don't want to play in St. Louis, but I'm not going to sport. You don't want a dissatisfied ball player on your club.

"I got the direct deal any ball player ever got. I've been the goat in all the way through this thing. I guess I'll have to quit, and I will quit before reporting to St. Louis."

"I'd rather have my outright release so that I can get it from the Dodgers, but I never heard from them."

Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers, completed the deal from a sick bed at home after leaving an earlier statement avowing his "loyal support" of Durocher.

In his attempt to restore tranquility to the Dodger bonehole Rickey gave up a pitcher who has won nine games and lost four, one of the best records of the season in the National League, for a pair of aging hurlers who have been almost exclusively in relief and who cannot possibly match Newsom's prowess on the mound. Ostermueller, a southpaw, has won one game and lost one, while Ostermueller and right-hander, has won none and lost two.



Leo Won't Resign.

Durocher, from his home, where he is nursing an attack of indigestion, Rickey issued a statement, giving out the report that Durocher was on his way out as the result of a rebellion among the Brooklyn players, following the three-day suspension of Pete Reiser.

"Durocher has not resigned or offered to resign, according to my knowledge, and I do not believe he intends to resign," Rickey said. "If he did, I would not let him. As president of the Brooklyn ball club I still continue to give him my loyal support."

In upholding Durocher, Rickey said Leo was right in disciplining Reiser.

"No coaches, players or anybody else can tell a manager how to run his club," Rickey said. "That's baseball. Both he and he has my wholehearted support. Durocher threw a day suspension without pay season.

A good friend of ours (the boss) has suggested that we try a change of plate in the old routine and tell a joke or paragraph to start the column today, he suggests pasting the clippings in a scrapbook and our good readers can roll around verbally three times and see if I do it on Joe DiMaggio's fifth trip to print.

Here they are—and happy bunting!

HARY AT-EM-ALL

In the autumn the world's series in baseball is referred to as "baseball classic," so why not call the annual all-star game "baseball's glamour game?" Tuesday night saw the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio lead the all-star baseball game at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, to victory over the National League in an annual affair few remember today. But there was a time when the game was the brain-child of Arch Ward, sports editor of Chicago. When Arch conceived the idea, however, it was to bring the fans and players of the two leagues in the game, as his original plan was not to have a team of all-star baseball players in the yellow leaf of old age, but to have the public more interested in the game generally Bobby Jones' Open and Amateur Public would have the honor of selecting the all-star baseball teams of the American and National Leagues. The original idea has long since been forgotten, but Arch's team managers the selectors and public interest originally meant for the fans gone.

Looking backwards.

Let's roll back the pages and catch a glimpse of the first All-Star Stars since the game was first instituted by Arch Ward in 1933. The American League won that game, as it has done ever back in 1933. The American League team was built by Lou Gomes was the winning pitcher and drove in Jimmy Dykes with a two-run homer and Ruth hit a two-run homer and Frankie Frisch a round-tripper with the aether Cronin out.

Then the second game at the Polo Grounds in 1934 when the American scored three runs in the fifth to go on and win 9 to 7 in a free-wheeling affair. Lefty Gomez of Lefty Grove and Hubbell struck out Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx and Cronin in succession and left the mound with the Nationals leading by four runs when Joe Medwick hit a home-run homer.

In 1935 there were 69,812 fans present at Cleveland's Civic Stadium, a record attendance, when the American League made it three straight winning by a 4 to 1 score. Joe Cronin batting star with a homer and single to account for three of the Junior circuit's four runs while Gomes and Harder held the Nationals to a measly four hits.

The senior circuit won the fourth game at Boston Braves Field in 1936, their first victory, by a score count of 4 to 3. That was the day Joe DiMaggio got his first hit, two with Augie Galan and Lou Gehrig were the home run kids.

The Problem there!

In 1937 President Roosevelt was in Washington's Griffith's Stadium when each team pounded out thirteen safeties in the game, the 37 beast. Gehrig had a two-run homer as the Americans won by a score of 8 to 3.

...ot sixth game was at Cincinnati in 1938 when the National Leaguers, it Mister Durocher? ...

with Johnny Vander Meer and Bill Lee giving up one hit each in six innings of work. The Americans of the Nationals won their second all-star game 4 to 1.

In 1939, with six Yankees in the line-up, including Joe DiMaggio at the Yankee Stadium, the junior circuit bounced back to triumph 3 to 1 as Joe DiMaggio batted himself with the game's only circuit blow.

The first shutout of the series was the National League's win of 4-0 at Sportsman Field in St. Louis in 1940 when Claude Passeau, Bucky Walters, Wyatt, French and Hubbell silenced the American's while Mel West hit a three-run homer.

A three-run homer in the ninth, with two out, by Arky Vaughan in 1941 gave the junior circuit the nod at Briggs Stadium, Detroit, as Arky Vaughan's two round-trippers failed to be caught that day.

Change in Lineup.

The tenth game at the Polo Grounds in 1942 was a twilight affair that saw Ted Williams, batting before a blackout blotted Gotham, hit a home run for the Americans as Rudy York supplied the margin of victory for the American League team by a 3 to 2 score.

Tuesday, July 13th, 1943, at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, was the twelfth first night game the American and National Leagues have staged in 3 games to 2 by winning 5 to 3. Bobby Doerr, Boston Red Sox second was just about enough to wrap up the game when he connected for a rough outline of the history of baseball's All-Star Game.

Drill Sergeant Now Boss To Former Hockey Greats

Men Who Left N.H.L. to Join Ranks of Canadian Army, Show They Still Have "Will-to-Win" — Ranger, Red Wing, Boston and Canadien Stars Drilling at Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. — Across the sun-bronzed drill square of the Canadian Army's Training Centre at Lansdowne Park here, marched a platoon of heavy soldiers, arms swinging high, heads up, rifles at the slope. A drill sergeant's staccato bark sent them into a right wheel. Another order gave them their "eyes right" and they did it all over again. They were out for a session of platoon drill.

Up in front were several faces that a healthy coating of tan and Paces more familiar to thousands of hockey fans who follow the fortunes of the National Hockey League, than they appeared shouldering a rifle, and outfitted in the dress of Canada's soldier.

Only two years ago they were thrilling packed arenas in the top professional circuit. Last winter they were members of Ottawa Commandos, which team, captured the Allan Cup, emblematic of the Canadian amateur title, although three of their team mates were called for overseas duty. Today they are pounding the sun-baked parade square preparing for the grimmest game of their lives. Tomorrow they may be in it — and they're going to be ready.

O. C. Commands Them

"They're the real business and will be a credit to the Canadian Army," commented Major A. R. MacNab, officer commanding the training centre, as he stood in the centre of the Ottawa park reading a sharp eye at different platoons going up and down the parade ground.

There was a tone of pride and satisfaction to the O.C.'s comment, an apparent confidence that even the favorably military record of these "ex hockey" athletes. He was proud that all were displaying a razor-edged keenness in their training and satisfied that here was proof the cream of the athletic crop wasn't "just going along for the ride."

Major MacNab was speaking of fellows, like Neil Colville, anchor man of Ottawa Commandos, and Jimmy Henry, of Winnipeg, also of Rangers; Ken Reardon, another Edmonton product, and formerly bruising defenceman with Montreal Canadiens; Jack McGill, of Edmonton, who played with Boston Bruins; Les Douglas, of Perth, Ont., who finished the 1941 season with Detroit Red Wings; Eddie Slowinski, of Winnipeg, member of last winter's Ottawa Commandos, and Al. Barnes, of Oshawa, also with the Allan Cup champions.

Once members of opposing teams, they gave no quarter nor asked for any. They are continuing their military training on that theory but now all bodies on the same team.

Men Are Eager

"Get 'em, up!" . . . barked a pint-sized drill instructor in sterntorian voice as the platoon began to get sloppy. "Now like shoia in the arm for they swung high at the target.

"Watch your dressing!" came another sharp warning and brought an overall in shorts and sun helmets straightened their lines like veterans.

They were plainly evident they were eager to learn all about the army . . . bent on mastering brain and brawn with the best of the Boche. Later in the day when instructions were given on the Bren gun the platoon and their platoon comrades were tossing questions regarding the highly effective weapon before the instructor had time to complete the rifle.

Opinions came from all sides as to how the magazine was applied, how many rounds it contained, and a myriad of questions about its generi operation. It was the same with the rifle, the hand grenade and the art of bayonet fighting.

These former athletes, once the pampered, high-salaried stars of professional hockey are showing the first out of their bunks when the dawn order is given. They take their turns at kitchen duty with a hustle. They participate in softball and other camp games. Some of them have been earmarked for a course at Officers' Training Centre. They should be successful on the basis of their early showing.

Bought for $35,000

Newsom, 33-year-old right-hander whose greatest renown was achieved in the American League, was purchased by the Detroit Tigers from Washington last August for $35,000 and a minor league pitcher in order to help Brooklyn in its 1942 pennant scramble with St. Louis Cardinals.

His presence wasn't enough to boost the Dodgers to the championship last fall, but he was the most successful hurler on Durocher's staff; this season at the open split in the club last week.

On Friday he was suspended for three days at no pay for what Durocher subsequently declared was "unsatisfactory performance" and Saturday the other members of the club, led by Arky Vaughan, revolted against their manager. Durocher had to call for volunteers to play a scheduled game—with Pittsburgh Pirates.

Durocher offered to resign at a later meeting of the club, but the result of the uprising fostered was Newsom's banishment.

This is Bobby's 12th year in the major leagues during which he has been with Brooklyn, Boston Braves and Washington twice each and with Chicago Cubs, Detroit Red Sox and Detroit Tigers.

He led the American League in three times in defeats, but also had a stretch of three consecutive years in which he won 20 or more games. In 1940 he won 21 games and last only five less that Tigers to the American League pennant.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 15 — Pte. Lizzie Sydney Woodenson, fast approaching his nineteenth year, has run Britain's fastest mile of the war at Aldershot Army Sports in British Canada, then went on to beat the Yank's couple of days later.

Running at Manchester the bespectacled speedster hit the tape in 4 minutes 17.6 seconds to beat a British Army sergeant instructor, Harry Jones by 20 yards. The year 3.8 seconds slower than the 4:13.8 with which British Empire Champion Jack Lovelock, then a private over Woodenson.

A 20,000 crowed watched Sydney at White City Stadium recently, all set against fast running. Woodenson, who is 6 feet 1 inch tall, shot from the crack of the pistol and never left the front rank, with a quick start on the back stretch but couldn't shake off Jones' challenge.

More than 200 athletes competed in the games, which included relay events from the 100 yards to the 2 mile.

All this running revived talk of the famous mile and half duel. Apsley, Britain's greatest distance runner, against Jack Lovelock who believes it will be achieved. (Middle of the world's mile record of 4:06.2 set by Sydney Wooden Freeman now touring the United States.)

"Forget any method of training we know at present," Apsley told a London sport columnist. "Given the necessary pace, heart and speed, the problem simply boils down to the need to hold 15 to 16 quarter mile ... One quarter extra on each 110 yards would do the trick.

"I think it can be done in mere minutes. Perhaps in the middle of a 4:20 in calling for a special effort to be made. Then the mile has been exploited up to now."

SHOWS 'EM HOW

Stealing is an art taught by old artists. It applies to baseball. Clyde Milan, one of the best at the game, he is qualified to show 1943 Senators how it is done. Clyde is an apt pupil. Bob Johnson and Alex Carrasquel, record holders and veterans, rate well up among the American League bag-hoppers so far this year.

LEAFS RELEASE BROWN

Toronto, July 15—President Peter Hodgson of the Toronto Leafs has announced the recall of Outfielder Maurice Van Robays by Pittsburgh Pirates and outfielder Maurice Lloyd Brown, veteran southpaw recently.

Van Robays, a popular campaigner at Fleet, Street Flats this season, leaves, with a batting mark of .303, 31 runs batted in, 30 runs and also shares runs-batted-in honors with Al Rosberg, each with 42.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 117

By SAM GORDON
The Bibliner

Kings and queens create a chasm when the other fellow has ten. Still, with other stuff on hand, chaps may help you fill the gap.

No-trump tricks are high cards; aces, kings, queens. There are 13 of them in your bridge deal. Therefore, a 13th trick will be taken by some smaller card.

Which side is most likely to take that 13th? The pair with at least four sure tricks. And, like the high cards, those four sure tricks may be in any combined hands.

To make a game in no-trump, nine tricks are needed. But a pair with only eight high cards may take nine tricks. That is, if they have four sure tricks between them.

An opening bid or one no-trump shows five high cards with two sure tricks, with that, is required, or seen enough for a game he says so with a signal; a one-jump bid.

If he has four high cards, he knows there are nine or more tricks in the pair. If he has two sure tricks with only three high cards, he knows there is a good chance to take nine tricks at no-trump.

That tells you hasen number 31 in these Horse Sense bridge. It needs no answer to an opening bid of one no-trump, an immediate one-jump no-trump response shows any four high cards, or three high cards with two sure tricks.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one no-trump and you have this hand:

♥ 10 7 6 4
♦ A J
♣ A 7 3 2

You have no suit bid. So your only responding bid is in no-trump. Your hand contains three high cards, among which are two sure tricks.

Added to what your partner has shown, you see eight high cards with four are tricks in your pair.

That is enough for a sound try at a game in no-trump.

Your immediate response is three no-trumps, a one-jump. It is not a cinch. Neither is life.

"DR. GILLESPIE'S NEW ASSISTANT"

Comedy, drama, mystery and an engrossing love story make up the entertainment content of M-G-M's "Dr. Gillespie's New Assistant," now playing at the Belle Theatre.

Lionel Barrymore, as the kindly physician, is starred with a cast that includes Van Johnson, Richard Quine, Keye Luke, Susan Peters and Horace McNally in the principal supporting roles.

The production was directed by Willis Goldbeck, the writer of numerous "Dr. Kildare" and "Dr. Gillespie" productions.

"HARRIGAN'S KID"

The adventures of a young jockey learning to ride, and also learning the tricks of the "racing game," plus a gripping human interest story in his regeneration, after being misled by crooks, serve as the vehicle which introduces Bobby Readick, youthful Broadway star of "George Washington Slept Here" and other stage hits, to the screen in "Harrigan's Kid," the 2nd M-G-M feature on the same program.

The picture was filmed at famous horse farms and race tracks and in back lots of races, a track accident, and comic relief blended with many tense emotional moments.

Charles F. Riesner, of "Caught Short" and "Redhead," directed. Irving Starr produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Players include William Cargan, Frank Conroy, Gene Wyatt, Selmar Jackson, Douglas Croft and others.

"GATEWAY TO ITALY"

Timely, enlightening and thoroughly entertaining is the C. G. O. Feature, "Gateway to Italy" announced for presentation on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

Laurel and Hardy

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy complement each other perfectly behind the scenes, as well as on the screen, Stan is usually the creative side of the team and Ollie, the executive.

Ideas leap from below Stan's bristling tousles like pop-corn from a roaster. Then Ollie selects the most promising and incorporates them into their scripts.

Laurel and Hardy's latest frolic, "A-Haunting We Will Go," is now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

"King of the Stallions"

Many tribes of American Indians are represented in the cast of "King of the Stallions," the thrilling Monogram outdoor drama which is the added hit at the Capitol Theatre with the new Black horse, Thunder, in the title role. Many of the principal roles are played by real Indians, and much of the action of the picture takes place in an Indian village in the southwest.

"Gates of Italy"

Also shown is a special Canada Carries On featurette, "Gates of Italy," stepping stone to invasion — Allied might herded at the threshold of Axis Europe, actual shots of today's theatre of action.

A colored cartoon and Ezra Carey's "King of the Mounties" completes the big double bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Reveille With Beverly"

A sparkling ensemble of famous radio entertainers, a goodly number of soft and pleasing tune hits, a wealth of comedy and romance and a refreshingly different type of story, provide the entertainment ingredients of Columbia's delightfully new and musical show, "Reveille With Beverly," which opened yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre.

Substituant dancing star, Ann Miller heads the important featured cast, which includes William Wright, Dick Purcell, Adele Mara and Barbara Brown. Top, a long-backed narrative which finds room for specialty swing numbers by such well-known personalities as Bob Crosby and his orchestra, radio's "Freshland" band, Freddie Slack and his orchestra with vocalist Ella Mae Morse, favorites of "The Champagne Hour," Duke Ellington and his orchestra, voted "swing band of the year," Count Basie and his orchestra, the Mills Kings of Jive, Frank Sinatra, radio's exciting new romantic vocalists, the Mills Brothers, hottest of the harmony teams and the Radio Rogues, those merriest of all gadabouts.

A down-to-earth story founded on fact, "Reveille With Beverly," expertly blends music and comedy, romance and thrills in its describes the origin of one of radio's most popular programs. The program under discussion, "Reveille With Beverly," is heard in the early morning hours. Intended for the "rhythm" in the army camps, it supplies them with breezy chatter and toe-tapping tunes. That the program is popular and ever more so, is evidenced by the fact that it has been on as a Denver station and promptly attracted nation-wide attention. Today, the "Reveille With Beverly" program is broadcast on coast-to-coast hook-up and listeners-in-coast the boys in uniform are writing in for pictures of the young woman who handles the show. The film tells the story of the program and its operations.

Ann Miller effectively appears as the swing-loving switchboard operator who insists that America's listening public would like to listen to swing. When she finally convinces her wary boss running the program, at the risk of losing her job, the immediate success of the sponsor is overwhelming tribute to her "reveille" idea. Couple this semi-factual yarn with an engaging romantic triangle involving the girl and two soldiers and "Reveille With Beverly" emerges as one of the better comedies of the year.

Action melodrama devotees are promised a full quota of entertainment in Universal's "Eyes of the Underworld," the second feature attraction on the weekend program. Starring Richard Dix, the picture has a distinguished supporting cast headed by such outstanding performers as Wendy Barrie, Don Porter, Billy Lee, Lloyd Corrigan and Lon Chaney.

Mental State Called a Factor in Recurrence of Ulcers

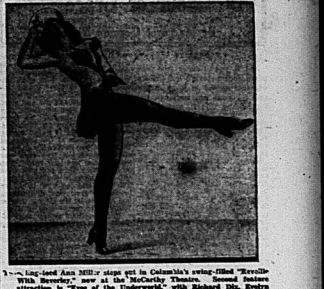
Stomach ulcers are open sores in the lining of the stomach. One cure for this condition works on the principle of calling the ulcers so that the stomach fluids do not irritate them, thus allowing them to heal.

When an ulcer has been present for a long time, operation is sometimes required, but with medical treatment, many stomach ulcers can be cured. However, there seems to be a tendency for them often to come back again.

In general, the medical treatment for stomach ulcer includes rest in bed, frequent feedings of soft, bland foods, the use of certain alkaline substances to lessen the acidity in the stomach and, reasonably, the use of the drug known as gelusil. In all instances, that the physician is under observation for about three weeks. If he is up and about, the results are likely to be less satisfactory. The patient should always be in bed if the ulcer is acute, or is bleeding from the wall of the stomach.

The patient is mental condition would seem to have much to do with ulcers, and worry often will recur. Patients who are nervous, worried and easily upset, seem to be the ones who acquire ulcers most often.

There is some dispute as to just which alkaline type of substance should be employed. A number of different types are used. For example, there are magnesium oxide, magnesium carbonate, magnesium trisilicate, calcium carbonate, and sodium bicarbonate or baking soda.



Some physicians think that calcium carbonate is the most effective single anti-acid substance. In patients who have chronic constipation, a mixture of calcium carbonate and magnesium oxide will be more satisfactory than the use of the calcium carbonate by itself.

In one type of treatment a substance known as insulin is used. This does not get rid of the acid but seems to form a coating over the ulcer and thus help to give it a chance to heal.

That's could be used should be outlined by the physician in each case. Roughage, irritating foods or highly seasoned foods, as a general rule, are unwanted.—In some cases the patient may be put on milk and cream alone for several days and then gradually egg, soft cereals and other soft foods are added.

It is probably best that the patient with ulcer try medical treatment for some time before operation is performed, except in special instances.

CHAPTER 10

And it was because she saw Payne coming toward her and she was too troubled to speak to him that she arose and went out, try-ing to seem that it was only a breath of air she wanted as she passed people and spoke to them. The coolness was good, she thought as she walked down to the bluff and there found Erica crying, not as one angry, but as one hurt.

Meegan did not hesitate. Sitting beside her, she said, "I'm terribly sorry, Toby has had too much to drink. That isn't an excuse but it is an explanation."

Erica took her hands from her face and looked at her. And Meegan thought that while her Erica's face was pretty with youth, later it would be a face of character. Unlike Clare, everything that had happened or would happen to Erica would be marked in her strong, sullen, sultry face.

"I hate this place," she said.

"Then why don't you go home?"

"I haven't any home," her voice was hoarse. Her anger, the sudden fury that had caused her to strike Toby, was gone. Her mouth was soft and as red as her frock and determined. Money don't stand us. They ignore us and that's worse They look through us as if we are not here. I always think they are hating us so. We can't go back where we came from and we don't belong here. We don't belong anywhere. That's what's happened to us.

"Perhaps you'll be surprised to know that is exactly what has happened to me. But go on . . . tell me. You'll feel better."

Erica said, "All right, I'll tell you. We were poor until Roy sold his invention. He was a machinist's helper, but he was always going down to the shop in experiment. His invention is something that has speeded up defense and he sold it to the president of the company. "I see," Meegan said. "Now you want to behind here."

"Not in the way you think. Not by showing off the way Helen does. I try to understand how she feels. She wants the best for me and the children. She's been so good to me since my mother and father died. She is good. She saved the money to send me to business school. She had a job at the factory in the office, and I was taking courses at night at school. Roy doesn't like it here. He isn't comfortable but he's enduring it because he knows it makes Helen and the children happy to be here. I don't know where we'll go from here. Probably to some place I'm known where we don't belong either."

Meegan said, "I'm funny the different things war does to people. Perhaps if they had not desperately needed time-saving devices, Roy's invention would never have been noticed. In a way, Erica, we are like the people in the conquered countries where we've been bombed out of their homes. You have the same feeling of not belonging any place to go. Nothing you see or touch is familiar to you."

"Yes, that's it. That's exactly how I feel. I couldn't explain it. I thought it was going to be a wonderful summer here. There isn't any ugliness here and the people aren't too busy to know they're well, they're alive. You don't understand any of us. You're always had it. We never lived before. We just worked and ate and slept. Leisure was a word we skipped over when we read because we didn't know what it meant and if we had, we'd have known it wasn't for us. You may drown in the market in Easter but you never grew them or cut them yourself. The clock was your dictator and your enemy. You couldn't sleep when you were tired and wake up when you were rested. The clock told you what to do. To be able to grow your own flowers and not live by the clock . . . that's more than money could do for us."

"You don't hate it here then because there is beauty in Erica here?"

"Yes. But we don't belong. Your brother made me feel cheap . . . like a girl he'd picked up. He isn't as much of a gentleman as the men I've lived with. I've got to go back in. Helen won't know what's happened to me. She knows I don't know anybody."

"You know me."

"Yes. I know you now." Rising, brushing the sand from her frock, she said, "I like you now. I wish I haven't been very nice to you. Helen said I was rude. But we don't talk the same language."

"We've probably read the same books."

She looked at Meegan. "Probably we have but we wouldn't agree on them. I know, for instance, that we'd be on different sides about the Spanish war. Aren't you going in?"

Meegan nodded and they walked back together to the verandah.

Her friend inside, Erica said, "I'm not sorry I slapped him. I'd do it again."

Meegan said, "I'm sure you would and I'd probably applaud you, Erica. But about the Spanish revolution, we are on the same side. I have very definite opinions about that."

It was the first time she had heard Erica laugh, a short, quick, hearty spurt of young laughter. Then Erica went to the table where Helen and Roy were looking anxiously and Meegan went to her table where her party had scarcely left again. Toby's face had returned to its normal healthy tan. Clare was looking down at her eyes her clear, her skin less glowing. Payne was looking at his watch.

"It's almost twelve," he said to Clare.

"Oh, is it? Oh, yes . . . "You're not leaving?" Toby asked.

Payne said with a pleasant detachment. "Yes, sorry, but we must."

"Not so early!" one of the women protested.

Toby glanced quickly at Clare. "You'll always find us home by twelve."

In a tone of irritation Clare said, "Oh, very well, let's go. It's tire-some but . . . I shall see you tomorrow all right, Toby? Come to our house for a swim and cocktails." To Meegan she said, "Good-night, dar-ling," and touched her cheek briefly.

Meegan and Toby left at once after Toby had made several visits to the bar and Meegan had danced with several young men who had been late arriving. Breckenridge leave from Fort Meade.

Toby was driving home when he said, "I can't get over that girl taking a poke at me. Such finesse." He shook his head.

"You would. Why don't you join the Salvation Army little sister of the alumni?" He shook his head as if to clear it of murky thoughts. "The trouble with a good night is the bad morning that follows. To-morrow I'll hate my guts."

Meegan let her go. But she said it any way. "Toby, don't get mixed up with Clare."

"You don't get mixed up with Clare. You get tangled up. 'Come into my parlor,' said the spider to the fly.' And there you are. You like it and you don't like it. You feel with your head, not think with it."

He put the car in the garage and they walked toward the dark house together. Inside he stumbled up the stairs, giggled and then, recovering his dignity, walked up with stiff legs.

It seemed to Meegan that she could not reach her room quickly enough to close and door, as if closing the door and being alone stayed something.

Intermittent rain, hailed by the farmers as the finished and regarded with disgust by the sun-bathers, came and went, Meegan rather closely at home. Though it interfered with her taking the children to the beach and playing tennis with Adele it did not, however, interfere in the least with Toby's social life or Father her entertainment in golf games. She wondered how Toby could drive blithely off to Clare's knowing how high the weeds were about the house and how her mother could enjoy her bridge with greasy dishes hidden in the stove. She wondered too, as she picked up the wet weeds and looked for the hidden dishes if the people who left them knew or why she was the only one who did the war.

ARMIES AFTER WAR

Liverpool — (CP) — Sir William Jowitt, Minister without Portfolio, told an audience he would expose any final scheme of demobilization to the fullest publicity and the sternest criticism. He anticipated armed forces "on a very considerable scale" for some time after the war ended.

Little Benny's Note Book

This was Nora's day off on account of being Thursday, and as made pop liver and onions in his special honor, and pop said, A perfect meal, my dear, a king might ask for better but he'd never get it, I'd like to show my appreciation by strewing priceless jewels at your feet, but I'm afraid the best I can do is to humbly invite you to pick up a penny and take you to see it, he said.

You couldn't of had a more welcome idea, William, I'm going to see Bomber Harris, ma said, I'll have these dishes cleared away and washed in a couple of shakes, she said, pop said, I'd gladly help you, but it sounds like a very refined party and I guess I had better go and shave so I'll be dressed for the part, but I'm sure money will knock a hand with his usual unwillingness and cheerful alacrity, he said.

Mm, O, I said. Only the only thing is, ma, I'm not a very fancy dish handler, so-goes to show you missed if a few manners and things kind of get away from me. Anyways ma, that goat grows they'll actually break, but just a same, just for safety sake, I might be a good idea if I didn't touch anything that hasn't got a crack in it or a chip out of it to start with, and I may not probably start drop a single thing if I move extra slow, but anyways I'll try to keep out of your hair, and you can tell me. Oh dear, I think I'll refuse your kind offer with thanks and come down mind.

Which I didn't, and I went and started in to put my best English war stamps in my album, and pop started to smoke a cigar in back of the sporting page, and ma got through quick and I went to pop, William have you shaved yet? and pop said, No, I decided against it. If I took too spoken span the blonde beauty at the ticket window might expect me to buy expensive logs and said, I go, he said.

Which they did.

Picton and District

Prisoner of War Voices Thanks To Red Cross

Picton, July 15—Mrs. E. Lillian Hogg of West Lake has received letters from her son, Sgt. Walter N. Hogg, who is a prisoner of war in Germany, stating that he is well. Letters dated Feb. 11, March 30, April 8, were all received on July 12.

In the February letter, he says: "The last time I received a box from the Canadian Red Cross and were really glad, though not one also very tasty. We surely have many appreciations for the Red Cross Society and the Red Cross Society foremost place. They sure deserve it. Also the parcels for exercise consists mainly of walks about the compound deck tennis and football. It enables us to develop pretty ravenous appetites and also to further us in getting rid of the main idea." At the time of writing he had received no mail.

In March, he reported receipt of the Red Cross box, and in the letter earlier than he had expected. "I am more than grateful to the Canadian people for responsible for the word getting through so rapidly that I was told I was asked to be remembered to friends at home."

In April, he wrote a letter on two letter forms, this being the maximum allowed. "Wives are lounging on their beds or as we call them, Hitler beds. My course also has been completed some little time. I am duty stooge for the month of April. Consists mainly of getting meals, probably better known as mind your own bloody washer. We have a reasonably good library, supplied by the Red Cross and other noble associations. There has been a great deal of reading in fact it was warm enough yesterday, (April 8) to go outside.

"I am O.K. for blankets but collid us a pair of shoes and low runners. Have received rear blades and razor and a shaving brush, also toothpaste. Books and cigarettes are the only other things...... I'll be glad to dire need."

Walter's address is, Sgt. W. N. Hogg, No. 1 Canadian Repat. Unit 1, via Stalag Luft 3, Germany. Letters from friends are welcome but should be carefully worded, avoiding mention of the facts which might be of value to the enemy.

Fall Military Honors

Picton, July 15—Fall military honors were accorded Sgt. Pilot Raymond Cecil Evans Brown, a member of the R.A.F., whose body was recovered from the waters of Lake Ontario, yesterday afternoon. The service at the R.A.F. chapel, Trenton, was conducted by Sq. Ldr. Leader R. Hooper, padre, assisted by Flight Lieut. J. Creegan of the Anglican Church. The flag-draped coffin was carried on a tender to the Glenwood cemetery, with interment being made on a slope just below the air station where Sgt. Brown lived.

Sgt. Brown and Sgt. William Craig Rodger lost their lives when their plane crashed into the lake in Lake Ontario, off Waupoos. The body of Rodger was recovered after the crash but that of Brown was not located, until yesterday when Edward Vaughan noticed it on the Crossy shore, some miles from the scene of the crash. Hope of finding it was believed slight, and a memorial service was held Monday at the station chapel after the body had been placed on the spot where the plane crashed. Brown was a native of Morden, Surrey, England.

Kiwanians Enjoy Outing As Guests Of Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company

The weekly Kiwanis meeting was postponed from Tuesday at the Quinte Tennis Club to Wednesday, forty-six members and their guests were present at the 6.30 p.m. luncheon and proceeded by cars to the lumber camp of the Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company at Lake Massanoga in the northern part of Hastings county. A shuttle outing was held in July last year but several members who had been unable to make the trip at that time were able to get there this year and had many things of interest.

Unfortunately the real spirit of the day was sadly dampened by the demise of the wife of one of the mill workers and the Kiwanians graciously sacrificed their pleasure with flitting respect to this small group of men and women who had been associated and attached to one another that the loss of one of their number is felt deeply by all.

Program Curtailed

Mr. W. J. Johnston, general manager, had arranged a program of interest for the visitors but decided to follow supper and further explanations of log-rolling and log-barking. The sorrowful circumstance made this impossible but the Kiwanians arranged to amuse themselves. There is something in the make-up of a lumber camp, in the right environment, the opportunity and the encouragement, to get back to nature and after what was a sane and wholesome meal into something closely resembling man's primeval forebears. The sight of a tree, whether standing, felled, trimmed, commands and the man proceeds to agree from tree to tree, to prove himself. There is something in the log that is bound to kindle a response from the incarceration of civilized surroundings and Harry Ruthers and Fred Lewis are no exceptions and performed dexterous feats, up to a point, on several logs and bobbing logs in the lake and, eventually, Bees-Cook and bobbing in the lake themselves.

Looking at the outing from another point of view, George Wallbridge had taxed the tires of his car to the limit but he and Ross reached yesterday in the form of three separate and distinct blow-returned to Belleville.

Pressure Used To Announce Canadians in News

Ottawa, July 15. (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced today in the House of Commons that President Roosevelt, in a letter to quest, had instructed that Canadian troops be mentioned in early communiques of the Allied attack on Sicily last week.

Mr. King said it was the opinion of military authorities in Great Britain that no announcement be made to Canadians participating in the assault.

Immediately the draft of communiques to be issued after the assault became known—before the attack—Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. King said representations were made to military authorities in Great Britain that Canadians should be specifically mentioned.

These suggestions were made on Thursday, two days before the first announcement of the attack. He could obtain "no satisfaction" in replies from the military authorities.

Appeals to F.D.R.

Realizing the seriousness of the situation, Mr. King said, he got in direct touch with President Roosevelt Thursday "and pointed out that I thought it was an extraordinary thing that a communication should go from the Canadian Government to Dwight Eisenhower commander-in-chief of the Allied Forces" an American and very properly because of the participation of Canadian troops".

The President said he agreed and would see Gen. Eisenhower was instructed to mention the Canadians.

"I am strictly neutral," said Lt. Prime Minister, "I am not criticizing the British or the French for releasing the news the Canadians were participating in the attack. I think they did right."

Puzzled by Attitude

Mr. King said he could not understand why, at the last moment, he could not get authority to make any statement and he had been bound to hold his hand in silence.

Mr. King said that before the attack was announced early Saturday morning he had been informed of planned announcements of the action "which spoke of the British and American Force", without mention of the Canadians.

The Canadian 1st Division is engaged in the Sicilian fighting.

The initial announcement had, in fact, mentioned the British and American force, and the first mention of Canadian participation came from United States headquarters.

Many Cases Brought Before Police Court

Rosemary Beadle, 35, of Carlow Township, appeared before Magistrate A. J. Madden, K.C., in the county court and remanded until July 19 on a charge of theft with Jailure to report for military duty.

This man appeared before Magistrate Madden on June 21 and was fined $10 and costs on a charge of careless driving brought by Constable George Arthur, Trenton, and Police Sergt. Shannonville, while Chaute Orchard, Trenton, paid $5.00 for failing to observe a stop sign when driving into a boulevard stop.

Norman Pitndall, Belleville, paid costs of $17.30 when charged with speeding charges preferred under the War Measures Act, while Frank Ireland of Belleville, paid the same amount for his folly of speeding across a railway crossing. Both these charges were preferred by Officers Mitchell and Hall.

Stoker T. J. Dobroski of the H.C.M.Y.S., Belleville, paid $5.00 costs faced a charge of careless driving and a charge of aid and abet in admitting the charge. "He drove a motorcar off the road near Deseronto yesterday about 4.30 p.m.," the guard rail posts and that will cost him ten dollars and costs," said Provincial Constable Robt. Duncan who preferred the charge. A second count of leaving the scene of an accident was withdrawn by the prosecution of Crown Attorney Donman.

Dobroski's car was driven by a guest without leave and he will have to be detained until an escort arrives from Belleville to take him to Stalag Luft 3, Germany.

Dobroski was in the custody of Sergt. Major Bert Hall, Sergt. Major J. R. Blake, of Ottawa, and owner of the car, Lieutenant Colonel Dobroski was in the court and was questioned by Crown Attorney Donman, carried property damages insurance sufficient to cover the damage to the guard rail posts broken.

Alexander Asaph and John De-Clarke, Toronto, appeared on nominal charges of vagrancy and were remanded until July 19 at the request of Mr. Donman. "We wish to have them under the War Measurement psychiatrist," explained Mr. Donman. Asaph is Russian and Peter Baptiste, both of Shannonville, paid minimum fines after being convicted of minor breaches of the L.C.A., namely being found in the possession of liquor. The court recessed after conviction for nearly two hours.

British Destroyer Comes to Rescue

By LOUIS Y. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent
Allied Air Force Headquarters, North Africa, July 15 — (CP) — A British destroyer recently arrived the sinking of one of the few Italian boats not of the giant Sicilian invasion armada. They were rescued in the Mediterranean.

The vessel was torpedoed on a recent misadventure in the Mediterranean. It sank in about 15 minutes.

There was no panic. Most of the troops aboard, including some British, safely left the ship.

(This was the first shipping loss reported since the Allied vast combining operation in which 2,000 vessels were used in the landing of troops on Sicily.

(Previous reports from officials accounted for all transportations accompanying the British, Canadian and United States troops in the face of a single torpedoing in the Atlantic or Mediterranean.)

Trinity Settlement Destroyed by Fire

St. John's, Nfld., July 15—(CP Cable) — Trinity Settlement, in the Indian Bay area of Eastern Newfoundland, was destroyed by a forest fire and a similar fate threatened Heart's Content and Ware-ham — today.

Loss of life occurred. Trinity's population of 250 was evacuated by motor boats and the fire then threatened more points along the coast.

Latest reports from Wareham stated that the village already had been destroyed in that community, Heart's Content, 12 miles away, was in danger.

Loss at Trinity included two stores, a hotel, a fish processing plant, a shop, lodge, school and 20 homes. The fire has raged for several days.

Attempts to fight the fire in a thick area of spruce trees, the most valuable in Newfoundland — were hampered by high winds. Newfoundland's government was rushing food, clothing and other supplies to the stricken district.

It was believed that only rain could extinguish the raging flames.

Mr. McArthur was introduced to the meeting by Rotarian Norman Banfield and the appreciation of the Club was extended to him by Rotarian Jim Holmes.

Police Court

A local lad just returned from overseas came before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Police Court Tuesday afternoon charged with indecent assault and after a severe reprimand by the Magistrate was given three months in the common Jail. Only for the screams of the woman he attacked being heard by neighbors in the district who came to her rescue, the case might have been far more serious. Fortunately they were able to catch the accused and detain him until the police arrived. In view of his war record he was leniently dealt with.

Anthony Mulroy charged with being intoxicated paid $10 and costs, while Antony Roma paid a similar fine for having.

Westerners Assist Farmers

Boys of Air Force Station are helping farmers in the district by pitching hay and working in the fields in their off-duty hours. Some who are farmers' sons from the prairies and the east are glad to have the opportunity of getting back to their former occupations, especially when they realize how badly their assistance is needed. They are being paid hourly wages and given their meals as well as being taken to and from the barracks by the farmers. Any farmers in need of this valuable assistance may obtain same by putting their application through the Selective Service Office at Trenton.

Reports from the British Isles have signified their desire to spend their vacation on farms in this district, thereby gaining first hand experience of how farming is done in this country.

This service to the farmer is not limited to boys in the forces and any citizen willing to help the farmers will be very welcome.

The War Today—

What Will Be Next Allied Move? United Nations Keep Axis in Doubt

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Increased Axis resistance is reported from Sicily today but the incubation of the Allied invasion has proceeded far enough so that we can do no harm by counting that chicken and looking about for other fields to conquer.

There seems to be a widespread public expectation that the next major venture of the beautifully-synchronized United Nations fighting machine will be occupation of the Italian mainland. Indeed, a Madrid despatch this morning says the Germans believe this will be the program if experience in Sicily leads the Allies to think Italy is ripe for the plucking. The Nazis are said to be rushing preparation of defence in Northern Italy.

A drive into Italy could happen, of course, but so could one or more of several other things. As a matter of fact, this uncertainty in itself represents a tactical triumph for the Allies. They're so cleverly mixed the pieces of the jig-saw puzzle of invasion that the Axis has been wholly unable to fit it together thus far. Even after it was perfectly clear that Sicily was to be one of the first points of attack, Berlin and Rome were fooled as to the exact time and place of landing.

And in the heat of operations in Sicily the hocus-pocus has been continued. The great Montgomery, Cromwellian leader of the famous British 8th Army, issued an order of the day to his troops declaring that "The time has now come to carry the war into Italy and into the continent of Europe."

Many military experts incline to the view that the Allies are likely to finish cleaning up some more strategic islands when Sicily has been dealt with. One would expect big Sardinia to follow, and perhaps Corsica. Then there are Crete and some of the Dodecanese Islands at the other end of the Mediterranean.

HOUSE HASTENS TO ADJOURNMENT, SITS SATURDAY

J. G. Diefenbaker Urges Lumber Producer be Allowed to Sell to Consumer

COMMUNIST PARTY BAN

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 16 — (CP) — Mindful hasty inkards adjournment, the House of Commons approved more than $30,000,000 in war supportation estimates, and today will turn to the consideration of government bills standing on the order paper.

The bill-of-fare yesterday dealt of pensions, shipping, wheat shipments, scientific research, postal affairs and the civil service.

In committee, the house completed consideration of pensions and national health estimates of $15,-229,136; trade and commerce, $7,-390,855; post office $183,000; civil service commission $297,645 and Secretary of State $44,850. It then continued with a minor, and revenue estimate totalling $10,308,-136 which still awaits approval.

Without comment, the members approved a motion to abandon their usual Saturday holiday, and tomorrow they will sit morning, afternoon and evening. The passage of this motion usually forecasts an early close to a session. The present sitting began in January.

Subsidies of Wheat at Ports

Trade Minister MacKinnon said he understood there was space in Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Churchill for 70,000,000 bushels of grain. Within the period 24 hours, permission had been granted to increase the pay of men engaged in unloading operations there.

It was hoped additional labor would be obtained from terminal elevators in the west.

He replied the situation was serious as all accommodation was required with another crop coming on in the west. Officials were hopeful that all the grain to be delivered under the quota up to July 31 could be handled, "though they are not too definite." While there had been some space available in Eastern elevators, he expected it would be used up shortly.

J. R. MacNicol (Prog. Con. Toronto Davenport) said he regretted that labor disturbances at Montreal had not undertaken recent tests of the Athabasca sands in North-western Alberta, and Resources Minister Crerar said present work on the tar sands was being undertaken by the Abasand Co., under an agreement with his department.

Mr. MacKinnon said demand for lumber made it necessary to halt exports to the United States.

Defenbaker's View

Answering a question by J. G. Diefenbaker (Prog. Con. Lake Centre), Mr. MacKinnon said producers who previously sold lumber in the higher-priced United States market were being assisted by a bonus system. He did not think there had been misunderstanding in the United States because of the cut-off of Canadian exports, as the war needs of the Dominion were recognized.

Mr. Diefenbaker said prairie lumber producers had not been able to meet American contracts, at prices higher than those prevailing in adjacent prices, although they had paid higher wages on the basis of selling in the United States.

To eliminate production of lumber, the producer should be enabled to sell direct to the consumer if he desired, as he does in the product pass through wholesalers, retailers to the purchaser should have assured a reasonable profit, which it did not at present in many producers.

Mr. MacKinnon said he would be surprised if any lumber-producing firm had any advantage over others in the present system.

Counted Ban

During the afternoon sitting, Justice Minister St. Laurent said in a discussion of justice department estimates that to lift the ban of Hitlerism from the Communist Party and from the sect of Jehovah's Witnesses would provide them with a basis for claiming the government recognized their legality.

Even if the ban were lifted there remained laws against organizations advocating the overthrow of existing government by force.

Mrs. Dorise W. Nielsen (Unity North Battleford) said the minister should either have the Communist Party arrest him and that it was a stern test even for them.

Being Pilot of Glider Flying Atlantic No Job for Weaklings

BY DOUG MOW

London, July 15. — (CP) — On the say-so of a Canadian whose flying experience ranges from the Stables of the 3Rs to the Spitfires of today the long-distance glider is the toughest of them all.

The comparison comes from Sgdn. Ldr. F. M. Gobeil of Montreal, shortly after London's newspapers had headlined the historic first soaring of the Atlantic by a freighter-type glider of which he was co-pilot.

The implications of the 36 hours of constant vigil which nursed the craft through its 1,200-mile journey stirred even a public whose sense of news values has been blunted by the astounding events of war. As a spectacular preliminary to a possible Atlantic air train service the feat surged into a brief and brilliant prominence.

Enthusiasm Tempered

Observers tempered their enthusiasm with the considerations that the voyage was that of crack, veteran airmen and that it was a stern test even for them.

Sgdn. Ldr. Gobeil, an R.C.A.F. pilot since 1939, spoke of it in an interview with the Air Ministry, said he:

"In a power plane you can loosen up some of the time and let the pilot relax and the automatic pilot do the job. In a glider you are watching all the time for every deviation of the two ropes—connecting the craft with the twin-engine Dakota transport which towed it across.

"That begins as soon as you are off the ground. First the glider is airborne then you see the tug plane come up below and ahead of you. Thereafter that rope has got to be pulling away in a specific curve right in front of your nose. But it never is.

"One time you may be going to one side, then to another. Then you are going away up and you sit waiting for the jerk when the rope tightens up and the next second, if the weather is very bad, you are dropping in a heavy swing from maybe 50 to 100 feet above the tug to 50 feet below it.

"At the end of our first leg I asked a Canadian pilot what he returned from Belleville hospital and is recovering nicely after her recent operation.

Next Winter's Coal Supply

Consumers of coal will do much thinking over the problem of fuel supply for next winter season. Yesterday announcement was made that unless Ontario and Quebec householders agree to accept one quarter of the amount of hard coal they burned last year in high volatile bituminous coal, they will not be allowed to buy for next winter more than fifty per cent of the hard coal they used last winter.

The Munitions Department order to this effect issued on Thursday shows the seriousness of the coal supply and people will wisely take measures to conserve as far as they possibly can the use of hard coal fuel by sparing consumption, by protecting their homes against cold and also as was suggested by a speaker of the department to the plumbers last Wednesday by the use of warmer clothing in houses the coming winter.

Coal Controller E. J. Brunning said yesterday that the order of the Munitions Department divides coal into two classes, high-volatile bituminous and Class "A" fuel.

High volatile bituminous means any soft coal which shows a content of more than 24 per cent of volatile matter.

Class "A" fuel is anthracite, hard coal, larger than buckwheat size or low-volatile bituminous coal (excluding mine run and screenings), briquettes or coke or a combination of any of these. Low volatile bituminous includes pocahontas and similar coal.

Consumers who agree to accept high volatile bituminous for 25 per cent of their proven requirements for the last year will be permitted to purchase class "A" fuel for the remaining 75 per cent.

"Delivery may then be made as soon as the dealer finds it possible, but there can be no guarantee that supplies will be available," the department statement explains.

The consumer who does not agree to this plan and who has half a year's supply on hand will not be allowed to buy any class "A" coal. And if his stock is less than sufficient for half a year he will be allowed either a maximum of two tons or enough to make up half a year's supply. And besides it is provided in the order that no person may order class "A" fuel from one dealer until all such orders placed with other dealers are cancelled.

Canadians With Montgomery

Canadians are part of the force under command of Sir Bernard Montgomery, whose name is in household words in every Allied world for his brilliant campaign from El Alamein to Tunisia and is linked forever with the famous 8th (Desert) Army. This battle which he won over the German Marshal Erwin Rommel will be remembered for generations to come for it gave a great demonstration of the rising might of democracy in that we forced on the world in this hatred and envy which Hitler and the Nazis and Mussolini and the Fascists cultivated in their mad ambition to enslave the world.

General Montgomery's remarkable victory showed how freemen can fight and win against a foe however brutal, savage and uncouth. It is the longest pursuit in all history and culminated in the collapse of the Hun and the Italian forces in Tunisia.

That battle has had another result, the development we see today on the island of Sicily where Italian territory is now in British, Canadian and American hands. So the victory of El Alamein and the consequent successes in North Africa bear fruit today in Sicily and give promise of victory after victory.

So Canadian troops must be proud of the fact that they are under so renowned a leader, who knows how to strike and when and whose flows when they fall, strike down the foe because he strikes when he is ready. The young men of Canada so closely associated with General Montgomery and the famed 8th Army fight under one of the outstanding commanders of this age, who knows how to prepare for successful assaults and win with a minimum of loss. A London paper yesterday praised the Canadians for their part in deepening the invasion bridgehead in Sicily and declared "already the Canadian troops have fulfilled General Montgomery's forecast of their fighting qualities."

Fall of Oppression

The fall of the Bastille since its fall 154 years ago has signified to Frenchmen everywhere the fall of tyranny and oppression. Today there is a bastille which Hitler has set up by the most atrocious crimes against human beings, and that bastille must and will fall for it has only tyranny to bolster it — the brutal Axis sway over the unconquered peoples of overrun Europe.

On Wednesday of this week France's people received messages of cheer from the French colonies in North Africa—colonies already freed from the Hun and the Italian by the great achievement of the North African campaign.

That voice by broadcast from North Africa was one of confidence that the day of liberation is coming near. Sicily is more and more coming into the hands of the United Nations' invasion army while Hitler and Mussolini idly try to predict where the next blows will fall.

Not all the Himmlers in Germany if everyone were a Himmler could prevent Frenchmen from learning the story of Sicily's invasion. This must put in their minds the though of the words of their national anthem, the great revolutionary song of French freedom, the "Marseillaise" which sings of "the day of glory" as arriving.

The bastille which Hitler set up is the most pernicious and vicious creation of the minds of madmen who ignore the moral order of the world. But it cannot endure against freemen who are now threatening Hitler's "fortress." Honor, truth, justice, all the virtues of ordered democracy fight against Hitler's weakening military and economic tyranny, which is built on all the evils and sins of which mankind knows—envy, spite, blood-lust, power-lust, hatred, brutal strength, dishonor, deception.

Bathing Suit Life Preserver

(Montreal Star)

How often, for instance, do we find those who try to swim ashore drown while non-swimmers clinging to a cap-sized boat are saved?

The question arises as to whether science cannot take a hand in this matter. There are now many gadgets for keeping people afloat, but they are all awkward and bulky. If the bathing suit itself could be made a life preserver innumerable lives would be saved. It ought not to be beyond the powers of science to evolve a fabric for the manufacture of bathing suits that would keep the wearers afloat without in any way impeding their movements. The law compels the wearing of bathing suits. If a practical bathing suit of non-sinkable material sufficient to keep the wearer afloat were available, why not a law to make the manufacturer of bathing suits from that material compulsory? However, the first thing to do is to produce the suit.

Repayment to Norwegian

(From "This Week" Mgazine)

Recently, in Norway, a farmer was arrested by the Nazis for contributing to a fund raised to help families of imprisoned Norwegians. When he was brought before the German court he said he did not know it was wrong to help those in distress; after the last war he had taken four undernourished German children and given them a home, food, clothing. The Norwegian farmer is now in prison.

When you think he ought to be
On a vessel far at sea,
In a tropic fort below damp
Or an army training camp,
Just remember ere you speak
It may be his eyes are weak.
It may be he has applied
Time and time and been denied,
For there's nothing given to show
Why he's not allowed to go.

Don't be hasty! It may be
There's a cause you cannot see.
Many a sickly youngster tries
To get by the doctors when
Works required health to gain
To be taken, all in vain;
Would in uniform be proud
But his pleas are disregarded.
Don't say things that sting and smart;
That boy has a heavy heart.

Reasons doctors come to know
Into strangers never show.
All the times a boy has been
Begging service can't be seen.
Neither badge nor band displays
Why at home this youngster stays.
So, although your son has gone
And some lad still tarries on,
Just remember, there may be
Some good cause you cannot see.

POCKET CLOCKS

Watches are mechanical timepieces designed to be carried on the person and used to be known as pocket clocks.

Long before watches were worn by careful people used to carry pocket sundials made of gold, silver and other metals.

It is supposed that the original "watches" were small pendulum night clocks for ascertaining the number of the "watch of the night."

Peter Henlein of Nuremburg, Bavaria, is credited with having been the first maker of mechanical pocket clocks. His watches, known as "Nuremburg live eggs," were first made about 1497. They were made of iron, egg-shaped, with only one hand, about the size of a modern alarm clock and were often suspended on a heavy chain about the neck.

Watches did not become trustworthy timepieces until the invention of the balance spring in the 17th century.

It is an interesting fact that stop watches, in connection with checking horse races, are mentioned as early as 1727.

The next decided improvement in watches was in the early 19th century when the stem was first used for winding and setting instead of the earlier key.

All watches were made by hand until 1850, when a factory for making watches by machinery was established in Massachusetts.

The modern watch is simpler in construction than the watch of a century ago and is composed of belast 150 and 200 separate parts.

Contrary to a popular notion, it makes no difference whether the hands of a watch are turned forward or backward in setting it.

Watches carried by railroad men, who have anything whatever to do with transportation, are not supposed to vary more than thirty seconds a week from perfect time.

A watch maker is very satisfactory to his employer if you know how to use it for that purpose.

Watchmakers say that women are harder than men on their watches.

Jewels in watches may be for actual service or merely for display and ornament.

The average watch ticks 432,000 times in 24 hours. Its balance wheel vibrates about five times a second and 157,680,000 times a year.

It is not true, as some people believe, that a watch is affected by the "personal magnetism" of the person who carries it; but the activity of the person carrying a watch may affect the accuracy of the mechanism.

Simplified Operation Aid Gland Disease

Difficulty with the prostate gland is common among men past middle age. It often causes serious illness and in many instances demands treatment by surgery. Enlargement of the prostate gland produces a number of symptoms. This gland, when it is enlarged, presses on the neck of the bladder which, of course, obstructs the flow of the urine. Sooner or later, as the prostate increases in size, it may be impossible for the patient to empty the bladder at all. This, of course, will require immediate treatment by the physician.

If bladder obstruction begins to develop a careful study by the physician should be made and if the prostate gland is found enlarged some operative treatment is usually necessary. In recent times an operation known as endoscopic resection is employed. When this operation is used, it is necessary to open the bladder. Part of the gland is cut away. This operation, being much less serious than a more extended one, produces less shock and does not require long the patient stay in the hospital for such a long period of time.

Of course, with such an operation there are certain complications that may occur. For example, bleeding is not unusual. For this reason, following the operation the patient must be carefully watched. In about three cases of every 100 patients there may be some recurrence of the symptoms but in almost all of the prostate gland is removed. The part that is left may continue to enlarge in occasional cases. However, a second operation is easy to carry out in these few instances.

This operation can be carried out with only slight risk even to aged persons. It has been responsible for the saving of many lives and the prevention of much disability.

Bristol Evens Series Beating Marines 4 to 3 for Force Third and Final Struggle

Harris Beats Hunter in Sterling Pitchers' Battle to Fire Strong Clutch Ball

ALWAYS IN LEAD

It's all even in the Bristol "Bomber"-SACO "Marine" play-off in the City Softball League round-up with each team winning a game in a best-in-three series. Last night at the Fair Grounds the Bombers won a clean cut 4 to 3 win over the Marines to knot the series count and force a third and final struggle.

After dropping the first game it is the Bombers' boomerang back to lead from the barrier to the wire with an impressive victory last night. Connie Harris bested Jim Hunter in a straight pitchers' duel that saw Harris scatter eight hits in a masterful manner to keep the Marines' scoring threat down to a single run. In the meantime the Barrage-led Bombers made their hits count into runs and scored a three on five hits collected off Hunter.

The Scoring

The Bombers scored two in the first inning and were never headed as they added a brace more in the third after the Marines pushed across a singleton in the second. Tomaso, the first batter of the game, walked and later was safe on Pirtle's bobble. Tomaso taking third and both scored on successive outs. The Marines bounced back with one in the second when Hook scored with-out the resemblance of a hit. The Bombers then proceeded to put the game on ice with a brace more of counters in the third when Tomaso hit, moved up on Moy's fly out and scored on Sager's hit. The latter going around to third on the throw and scoring on Lansbergy's fly ball. Parks and Moher hit for the Bombers in the eighth but no runs resulted. Hunter, the loser, was kept off the scory sheet by Harris from the second to the eighth when Hunter strolled and scored on Hook's double, the only extra base clout of the night. In the ninth Frahn hit and scored on Pardoley's single, but Harris made Ehler foul out to win.

Harris struck out two and walked five while Hunter whiffed six and walked three, but the walks issued by Hunter resulted in runs while Harris pitched strong ball in the clutches. This evening the Reliance and Army and Navy lines clash in a sectional play-off.

The line-ups: SACO "Marines"—Hunter, p, Fleischer cf, Partridge rf, Ehler 3b, Peoples 2b, Hook, lb, Pardoley ss, Ehler c, Ward rf. Pirtle.

Bristol Bombers — Tomaso 2b, Moy ss, Sager lb, Lalchford c, Flindall 3b, Finkle cf, Tuttan lf, Moher rf and Harris p.

HAMLIN TOSSES FOUR-HITTER AS LEAFS WIN

Down Bisons 3-1 to Lead League by Six and One-Half Game Margin

MONTREAL WINS

Old "Hot Potato" Luke Hamlin seems to be back in his early season pitching form. The Toronto Maple Leafs have little need to worry about their International League lead.

The former hurler in the Brooklyn Dodger system came back in the mid-season this year after a long but not particularly successful 1942 season with Pittsburgh Pirates. And Luke has got off to a flying start in relation to the big time, winning his first five games to give the Leafs a five-game start in the pennant chase.

Toward the end of May Hamlin began to falter but now has another five-game winning streak to his credit.

Last night he turned the first Montreal Royals fiasco for the last time in four games he has faced them and beat out young Hank Gentry in a pitching duel, 3-1. Hamlin allowed only four hits and not a single waik against Gentry's five-hitter.

Victory gave Toronto a 6½ game margin over the Newark Bears who won the 4-1 victory over Baltimore Orioles broke out of a batting streak that had cost them seven defeats in eight games. Buffalo Bisons, second place club, lost the 16th victory, holding the Bears to seven hits.

Montreal Royals, who trounced Rochester 9-6, just reached the .500 mark in the percentage table. Buffalo moved up in a fourth-place tie with Syracuse Chiefs, who have blanked 3-0 by Jersey City.

Ike Hunt, Syracuse's Al Evans and Jersey City's Bill Voiselle took credit for these two whitewashings. Sherry Smith of the Red Wings is four singles and a rewapped Montreal first baseman, Frank Colman.

Voiselle, registering his first victory as a starting pitcher in more than a month, held the Chiefs to six singles.

Toronto, July 16 — (CP) — Play in the second round of the Miller Trophy competition for professional golfers opened today at the golf course at nearby Islington after Stanley Kertes, Toronto professional at Islington, provided the sensation of first-round play in the tournament yesterday by giving Gordon Bryden of Minaigoasga a 3-and-2 beating.

Five down starting the 11th hole, Kertes won the next three played with a set of borrowed clubs, won the 14th and 15th holes to be all squared the other and was only one down going to the 16th. They halved at the 17th to give Bryden the victory, two and one.

Housecleaning Among Dodgers Continues, Medwick Left Behind Pirates Beat Cardinals 4-3

Rickey Trying to Peddle Catcher-Outfielder Ever Since in Office

PHILLIES WIN

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Bums rush is on in Brooklyn for fair and the latest to feel the axe is about to go to Joseph Michael (Ducky) Medwick, the once great Detroit outfielder whose usefulness in the Dodgers' scheme of things Norman (Bubo) Newsom, apparently has come to an end.

When the Bums left New York last night for a three-weeks trip through the West, Ducky was not.

Although the manouvre was described as merely a routine affair, as no natives were needed to see behind the scenes, Medwick smelled a home-cleaning.

Nothing seemed to wipe out the rebellion against the Manager Leo Durocher by trading Newsom to the St. Louis Browns, pushing the players on his roster, one over the head of the comptroller, to get rid of another man.

Wheat to Trade

His choice of Medwick was connected only indirectly with the re-building. Rickey had been trying to dispose of him ever since becoming President of the Dodgers last November. He didn't like the temperament of the former slugger, who never had batted less than .300 in 10 seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn and who had been the National League's batting champion in 1937 with a .374 mark.

Rickey's chances of making a deal for Medwick have faded with the passing of the months and now that Al present his batting average is .272 and he has been in a hit longer than a doubt.

Last night Durocher simply announced that Ducky had been given "permission" to remain at home.

Yesterday's doubleheader with Stan Musial, who was batting .351 before the game, extended his batting average to .372

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 118

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You may be a wizard. But don't be an Ox. No matter how clever you are, don't go at bridge the hard way. That was all right only for those who didn't know any better.

To decide how many no-trump tricks they can take, some players size off a real hunk of work. They go through all sorts of mental accomanistics. They get themselves into a brainy knot.

They use hocus tricks and winners with halves and pluses and half-pluses. They mix freakery with exceptions and distribution and compensating values. Woila life.

If you follow the Horse Sense method, you don't go through any of that agony. For no-trump-tricks just count one trick for each ace or king or queen. There is nothing easier nor safer.

A queen is a kimona-clad gal without makeup or. A kig is a gent with marcelled whiskers, wearing a bathrobe. A ace is a spot, surrounded by a lot of nothing.

Recognize such cards and your no-trump bids are easy. You just tell your partner how many you have of the aces and kings and queens. He does the same by you. And you know how high to bid in the no-trump.

Whenever you or he sees enough no-trump tricks to make a game, a signal is given. The signal is a one-jump bid in no-trumps.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one no-trump. That says he has at least five aces or kings, queens. What do you bid if you have this hand?

♠ A K
♥ 9 8 6
♣ Q 8 4 3

Your immediate response is three no-trumps, a one-jump. By that you tell your partner you see enough no-trump tricks to make a game with the both of you.

You hand contains four aces, kings, and queens. With partner's five, you see nine no-trump tricks; enough for a game in no-trumps.

The Horse Sense method makes you feel like a wizard.

"King of The Stallions"

Once in a while a "different" type of motion picture comes along to charm the average theatregoer wi-- a fresh and vigorous treatment of a subject which is enough off the beaten track to be classified as a novelty.

Such a picture is "King of the Stallions", the Monogram drama which opened at midnight shows at the Capitol Theatre last night. While the film partakes in a measure of the qualities of the always-popular "western", it is better described as a story of the great outdoors. Centre of interest, and much of the action is the magnificent black horse Thunder, which is not only a beautiful animal but qualities as a highly trained actor. Its relations with other horses, as well as with the human actors in the drama, become a matter of real interest to the audience.

"Gallant Hardy"

Stan Laurel and, Oliver. Hardy are the only actors in Hollywood who call 'out on their own screen. That's because they work with a great deal of improvisation and are not always able to capture the same spirits in a retake. Their gags are currently capering in "A-Haunting We Will Go", a 20th Century-Fox funfest, now at the Capitol Theatre.

"Gates of Italy"

Also shown is a special Canada Carries On featurette "Gates of Italy" stepping stone to invasion—Allied might from Africa. Narration of Axis Europe actual shots of today's theatre of action.

A colored cartoon and Zane Grey's "Gallant of the Mounties" complete the big double bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Reveille With Beverly"

With one of the biggest radio personality parades in recent screen history, Columbia's "Reveille With Beverly" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with Ann Miller, that scintillating dancing star, heading the featured cast of the new film.

Others in the cast, in addition to William Wright, Dick Purcell, Adele Mara and Barbara Brown are:

Bob Crosby and his orchestra, the "Dixieland" band of the air; Frances Freddie Black and his orchestra, with vocalist Ella Mae Morse, America's favorites of the "champagne hour"; Duke Ellington and his orchestra, noted "swing" king of the year; Count Basie and his orchestra, undisputed king of jive; Freddie Slack, radio's exciting romantic vocalist; the Mills Brothers, hottest of country swing and the Radio Rogues merried of melody.

"Reveille with Beverly" is based on the popular early-morning radio "jam session" of the same name, broadcast from Station CBS over a coast-to-coast network. Miss Miller appears as a top-dancing newspaper girl who persistently tries to "sell" a radio station on such a program, only to obtain her chance by accident.

Musical numbers in the film include, "Ooo O'Clock Jump", as presented by Basie and his boys; "Big Noise from Winnetka" and "South Rampart Street Parade", Bob Crosby specialities; Duke Ellington's "Take The A Train" and Freddie Slack's specialty, "Cow-cow-boogie". The Mills Brothers harmonize on "Paper Doll" and Miss Mara sings "Night and Day", one of the year's best-loved numbers.

Second feature stars Richard Dix in one of the most colorful roles of his long screen career, in Eyes of the Underworld. Other outstanding players are Wendy Barrie, who shares the romantic interest with Dix; Billy Lee, Dix's offspring; Don Porter, as an investigator; Lloyd Corrigan, as the city council president and tool of the crooks; and Lon Chaney, as the chief's stir-crazy chauffeur.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr Gillespie's New Assistant"

A baffling case of amnesia occupies the attentions of Lionel Barrymore, as Dr. Gillespie, in M-G-M's "Dr. Gillespie's New Assistant", now playing at the Belle Theatre.

Supporting the star and assisting him in the task of unravelling what seems to be an impenetrable mystery are Van Johnson, Richard Quine, Keye Luke and Susan Peters in addition to the players who regularly appear in these interesting Dr. Gillespie films.

Rose Thrills in "Harrigan's Kid"

A new female star is introduced in M-G-M's dramatic and moving tale of the heart, "Harrigan's Kid", the 2nd feature attraction. He is Bobby Jordick, sensation of the Broadway stage, who plays the title role in the original screen story.

The story deals with the career of a young jockey, played by Jordick, and the tangled tribes of riding by a former star jockey, played by William Gargan. But Gargan is not only teaching the cocky youngster to ride. He teaches him all the ways and means of throwing races so that he and his unscrupulous partner, J. Carrol Nash, will reap the profits of crooked bookmaking.

"Gates of Italy," a timely and enlightening C.G.O. featurette completes the program.

"Eyes of the Underworld," in Color

When it comes to making musical pictures there is no organization in Hollywood that tops them all. Now the word is that 20th Century-Fox, makers of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "My Gal Sal" and "Springtime in the Rockies," have done it again with "Belle, Prince, Hello" the film, which is slated to open this weekend at the Belle theatre, rates right alongside the greatest musicals of—those other famed filmusicals.

It's little wonder the studio is preeminent in the field, when one sees what they have to work with. "Hello, Prince, Hello" is produced in sumptuous Technicolor and boasts a dazzling cast of headliners of the finest production numbers ever conceived.

The star? "Hello, Prince, Hello" marks Alice Faye's first film appearance in over a year—which is welcome news indeed. With her is handsome John Payne in a tailor-made role, and rotund Jack Oakie pops for laughs. Completing the list of stars is luscious Lynn Bari, who doesn't sing or dance—and brother, she doesn't have to.

The story simply told, is set on San Francisco's Barbary Coast. Four entertainers are trying to get on in the show world. The comedian of the outfit is Payne, but the real drawing card is Faye. Faye whose dulcet voice and "purty figger" packs 'em in. With Jack Oakie and Lyne Havoc, their struggle in the top provides a neat background for the stirring musical production numbers.

The songs perhaps the most vetated of any recent musical. For instance, there are such old favorites as "Oee, But It's Great to Meet a Friend From Your Home Town," "Lindy Lou" and "Ragtime Cowboy Joe" coupled with the tune, "Hello

Dave O'Brien, Chief Thundercloud and Hollywood "heroine" portrayer, admire outdoor drama in Monogram Pictures' new season hit, "King of the Stallions," now showing at the Capitol. The added comedy, "A-Haunting We Will Go," stars Laurel and Hardy.

"Eyes of the Underworld," now at the McCarthy Theatre, has Wendy Barrie, Lon Chaney and Richard Dix starring. Ann Miller and four great bands are also on the same program in "Reveille with Beverly."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 16 — (AP) — A recent author on the dress precincts was Mrs. Violet Jean McClatchey, of Bartlesville, Okla., who put up in a few good words for the common copper cent . . . she says that when Bill Corcoran hustles to start constituting coppers, they mount up, and that's important to the War Bonds Committee of the Women's International Bowling Congress, which opens its 1943 tournament, in Last year the W.I.B.C. bought a bomber plane for the air forces, and "adopted" its crew . . . the girls found they had some money left over, so they bought an anbulance which will be presented to the army soon, probably at Columbus, O., . . . They expect to pay for "one or more" ambulance planes at $60,000 each.

Impressive as these figures look, what really gets the bowling enthusiasts is the fact that a large part of the money raised and spares dropped in the "kitty" for misses, splits, etc., during bowling games.

Changing the subject as far as possible, the boys who came down to Florida for the spring training baseball game say that Sen. Jim Mead is really going to town in the matter of having the army and navy play baseball games in communities where a lot of people would pay to see it . . . wonder if he might be thinking of that big Buffalo stadium that never has been clear full?

Canadian Pilots Using Sicilian Airdrome Now

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(Canadian Press War Correspondent)

Somewhere in Sicily, July 13 (Delayed) — (C.P. Cable) — Canadian pilots now are flying off a former Sicilian airdrome which captured by Canadian infantry and brought in operation by a British airfield construction group soon after the landing last Saturday.

The Italians had plowed up this airfield before the invasion and the airfield construction group, including Sappers, engineers and support- who came in with the Canadians, went to work with fine rapidity. Before dusk more parts were two feet deep.

It was not long before fighter planes flown by Canadians landed on the smooth stone, throwing up great clouds of chalky dust as they taxied to a standstill.

At this airfield this morning I met an Canadian officer of an R.A.F. fighter squadron.

They were Pilot Officer Gordon Wilson of Regina; FO. Red Probert of Moose Jaw, Sask.; FO. Fred Wilson of Melville, Sask.; F.O. Bob Hazel of Ottawa; FO. Milt Jowsey, Ottawa, a former Rough Rider football player and Flt. Sgt. Mike Askey of Winnipeg, whose father is a padre of a Canadian division in England.

Hazel told me that Tony Golab, also a former Rough Rider, now is flying out of Malta and has been on operations over Sicily.

LOOK FOR WITHDRAWAL

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 16. (AP)—Allied observers said today that the enemy in Sicily, with limited and double-tail forces at his disposal, might soon begin action to a rearguard defence hereafter while a withdrawal from the island is carried out.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself after dinner and the telephone rang and ma quick answered it and came back, saying, Ma, I wish people would learn to take No for an answer.

That depends on circumstances, pop said. You know the old story, if a diplomat says No, he's jo diplomat, and if a lady says No, no gentleman, if he's a man of the world, believes a word of it, at least the first few times, he said, and said, I'm referring to Maud Hews.

She may be a lady, but she's no diplomat, judging by the way she turned down Mr. Lavigne at the horse bridge table, pop said, and ma said, That's the very reason Mr. Hews, I mean bridge. That was Maud on the game just now, for the 2nd time today, she said.

Nothing doing, pop said, and ma said, That's what I told her this afternoon, when she called up, dont worry, I told her proudly. They played bridge 3 times this week, which constitutes the world's record as far as you are concerned. I told her that you had served notice that your bridge quota was exhausted for the week, and considering that you have already been so obliging I gave her to understand that I certainly won't going to try to badger and pester you into making another immoral selfish act, when was this afternoon, ma said.

And what did you tell her just now when she called? pop said, and ma said, Do you mean what did I I say to her in so many words?

I mean it's a women's world, let's go, pop said.

Listening to the Hewses on account of ma probably having told them what she thought would come over.

Which she probably did.

CHAPTER 11

For Toby was always with Clara, but not alone with her. The stream of house guests came and went, filling the town with their cars and making the lights in the house burning bits. It was an endless party and to Toby whistling, wise-cracking, happy again, it was the possible way of life. Meagan had not been to the house since her first visit despite her mother's insistence that she was not being very friendly toward Clara. She could not tell her that she had a dread of the place and that even looking at it from her bedroom window it was changed, along the color and excitement there, as a house haunted to her. She could not forget the faded face of Miss Willoughby nor Payne's diplomatic pretense that he did not know what existed between his wife and Toby.

One wet morning she was driving to the mainland for groceries and saw Jimmy, one of the caddies and a farmer's son, walking along the road sensitively oblivious of the downpour. Knowing him since he had been scarcely as high as a golf bag, she opened the car and called to him get in.

"Gee, thanks," he said, scurrying for shelter, his brown eyes smiling from his wet face. "I thought it was gonna clear up this morning and then we'd be folks out to play, and there's one stop rainin'!"

Ain't it ever gonna stop rainin'?"

"You'll get a cold," Meagan said.

"Why didn't you wait for it to stop?"

"Aw, I got things to do for my pigeons."

As the car approached Clara's house, Jimmy turned a serious face to her.

"Say, is somebody in there nuts?"

"Where?"

"In there," he said, pointing to Clara's house. "One day last week I was walkin' up here and I heard screamin' and yellin' . . . a lady screamin' and yellin' . . . made my blood run cold. I thought maybe somebody was fightin' but it didn't keep up and I didn't hear no more. Gee, it sounded like somebody was gettin' killed."

"What day was it?"

"I don't know. I don't remember."

"Was it on Saturday or Sunday?" Payne was home on weekends.

"No, m'am. I know it wasn't Saturday or Sunday."

"What time was it?"

"Well, must have been around nine. That's the time I go by on week days. On Saturdays and Sundays I go by earlier."

"It couldn't have been anything, Jimmy." But she wondered. A woman's piercing scream. Perhaps it had been one of the maids. Miss Willoughby had endured too much pain to cry out against it but she would suffer with clenched teeth, not with a cry. It could have been only one of the maids or Clara.

"No kiddin' I think somebody in there is nuts," Jimmy said.

She smiled him about his pigeons and they talked very earnestly about pigeons until she dropped him at the doorstep where his mother met him with a warm coat.

Later driving back to the island the rain stopped and the sun came out and she drew him out of his slacks cutting flowers in the garden. Meagan waved and Erica straightening waved also and though Meagan did not smile as she drove off, Meagan's heart lifted. Erica, standing among the flowers, her face half falling, almost like a face, was happy because at last Meagan had waved and smiled at her. That was one of the little things that, so simply and thoughtlessly overlook, Meagan thought, that the little things you can do for other people to lift their hearts and color their whole day.

She was learning," she thought. By being poor and lonely she was learning a great many things and making astounding discoveries about herself and other people. Perhaps the compensations for being poor and lonely were increased appreciation and your habit of projecting yourself into another person so as to understand him better and the growth of your spirit. Oh. On the other hand, you were neither poor nor lonely when you knew love appreciation and understanding and when you were the occasion of spiritual lift. Actually you had been incredibly poor and lonely without them.

Driving along the muddy road, her hair blowing, her brown legs bare, yellow sweater clinging to her moist body, she felt an immense peace and content. The sun was shining and the wet grass was lifting its face to it; the dark clouds were scattering. There was no accounting for the way people like this. There need be no accounting. It was simply the wonder and joy of being alive in green, rolling country slowly emerging from the rain.

She was alone in the house that night. They never explained where he was going but her mother had gone to a late movie in a nearby village with a woman friend. Adele had had her room, kind voice suggesting tennis the next morning but if it did not, Meagan said that she would love to play and Adele did not mention Clara. Perhaps she was "saving it up" for the game she was "saving it up" for the morrow when there would be no listening ears on the telephone.

She had gone downstairs to look for a book when the telephone rang again and she was startled to hear Toby's voice ask excitedly and sharply, "Meagan?"

"Yes, Toby."

"Is Mother there?"

"No. She went to a movie with Irene."

"Good. Now listen to me, listen carefully. I'm calling from a store, the connection is bad and I can't be very explicit, but there's something you've got to do for me. I want you to go down to Clara's and get Payne out of the house for an hour or so. I don't care where you get him but keep him out of the house for an hour or more. That's all I can tell you now."

"Clara is with you . . ."

He said in an annoyed tone. "Sure, sure. Now please don't ask questions. This is important. Do you know the circumstances, you're perfectly free to."

"I do know, Toby. I have to save your face again, I won't do it. I don't care what you do but I won't help you do it."

"But you don't understand! But if you don't do it, I won't come home. I mean it. Meagan, I won't come home."

And if Toby did not come home her mother would simply cease to live and he knew it. He was using his best weapon to hit her in the most vulnerable spot. But the lies, the intrigues!

She said, "All right. For an hour."

"Try to make it longer. I've got to have time to get Clara home." Then he said, obviously relieved, "Thanks . . . thanks. That's all. You're a good kid. Good-bye."

She continued to stand in the hall beside the telephone, aware that time was passing and that she was doing nothing except remembering the desperation in Toby's voice. It had been almost panicky. But why? Why could not Toby drive off Clara at her house and then come home? Payne need not see Toby or know with whom Clara had been. Besides, it was perfectly obvious that Payne was accustomed to Clara's freedom and her gaiety, about with other men. That's why was Payne at home on Wednesday evening.

But she could not stand here asking questions of a silent house. She had to get her coat, her old camel hair coat and walk down to Payne and get him out of his house. And she was no good at acting and her imagination failed her completely.

She put on her coat over the pyjamas and her feet in flats and left the house, locking the door and dropping the key in her coat pocket.

Reaching the Christopher's house Meagan walked through the rear garden to the garage. Her footsteps were loud as she stepped up the brick steps to the porch and saw Payne, wearing a lounging suit, sitting in a deep chair under a floor lamp with a book in hand. He was up in an instant and opening the door for her.

"Hello, Meagan. Glad to see you. Come in."

And the next moment with trepidation she was stepping into the old-fashioned, tastefully furnished room and Payne was saying, "I'm pleased you did not leave and share? How could it be that if she followed her true feelings it would be perfectly natural to go to him now and put her arm around him and say, Toby and Clara are in some kind of jam. I don't know what it is. But please, put your arms around me and kiss me. Kiss me hard. Dear Heaven, what was she thinking?

U.S. Parachute Troops Complete Tough Mission in Taking Airdrome

By JOHN THOMPSON
(Representing the Combined United States Press)

With American Air Borne Troops in Sicily, (Delayed)—Spearheading the invasion of Sicily, an American parachute troop combat team has completed a brilliant mid - night mission in the largest airborne combat operation ever attempted by the U.S. army.

Since late Friday night, when they landed in the light of a waning moon, they have been fighting crack German parachute troops, killing and capturing hundreds. They have fought as small guerilla bands, attacking pillboxes and strong points with grenades, and salt-tank weapons and knives and they have fought as a small fighting team against the Herman Goering grenadiers and tanks.

Success Gave Greatest

They have taken rather heavy losses but they never gave ground and it was largely through their slashing attacks at strategically important enemy positions that the advance of the British Eighth army was forced coming in behind them was accomplished in the area around Vittoria.

"It will be days before all details of the operation are learned. But this much at least can be told of the conversation which jumped with them to make his second combat jump and that night.

We had been standing for several minutes in our heavy parachutes, the soldier weighted down with loads of ammunition, rations and demolitions and this reporter sagging under his own load of combat equipment.

The red light meant we would be over our objective in a few minutes.

Off Into Space

They passed quickly. The green jump light flickered, there was a rush down the skids toward the door and in a moment we were hurtling through space. Then there was the snap of shoulders as the chute opened.

A brilliant glare illuminated the ground revealing an olive green island of the expected wheat fields. For a moment many of us thought ground troops had sent up flares and were opening fire. Then the sickening realization came that the fire was from one of our transports which had broken in two and had burst into flames.

The next moment we were landing.

Your correspondent emerged from his tangled shroud with a wrenched knee, silenced machine gun, assault tank weapons and knives and they have fought as a small fighting team against the Herman Goering grenadiers and tanks.

Fought in Groups

That night we went prowling about in small groups, trying to reach some gathering point could recognized we had landed in the wrong vicinity and we had to check it fix out in what part of southern Sicily we were. We were under the general movement to the northwest toward our original objective.

Many men jumped into the fight right away, fighting as machine-gun nests or pillboxes. Others soon found their bearings as they ran into Italian strong points along the coast or further inland along Highway 115.

But the troopers had come to kill and they did. Rifle and anti-tank weapons and grenades down the throats of the crews of the pill-boxes to be rushed. Well-aimed Garand rifle fire mowed down those who escaped the same purpose and within a short while every man surrendered in a flood of Italians or a few Germans.

There was along the beaches. Inland the fighting continued throughout the day.

8TH ARMY DRIVES ON AT ENVIRONS OF CATANIA

RUSSIANS GAIN 6 TO 10 MILES IN THRUST

Allied Front Line Sweeps Forward In General Advance

Canadian, American As Well As British Forces Push on— More Towns Taken

ADVANCE CONTINUES

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 17 — (AP) — The British 8th Army of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, the winner in the most decisive battle yet fought in Sicily, was smashing on at the savage rate of Catania today in a drive to strangle the resistance of the Axis defenders.

An Allied headquarters communique, announcing the capture of four more towns in a general advance all along the curving front, by Canadian and American as well as British, said the Montgomery men had captured Leni on Mt. Etna and Scordia, at the entrance to the Catania plain. Previous headquarters advices said German armored resistance was smashed all along the advance by counter-attacks.

A "The advance is continuing," says the communique.

Lentini is about 15 miles below Catania and 8 miles due north from the west.

On the American 7th Army front, Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's troops shoved into a new area of difficult mountain terrain, capturing Caltagirone on an important lateral highway linking the Axis southern and western wings.

It is 28 miles from Gela.

This placed them 30 miles inland from Gela Beachhead and 6 miles and about 28 miles west of Montgomery's forces at Lentini.

Six miles to the east of Caltagirone, Allied forces also captured Grammichele, a communications hub midway between Caltagirone and Vizzini, previously announced as in Allied hands.

(The London Daily Express said Canadian and American troops also were pushing onto the plain from Vizzini to the southwest in a flanking attack. The report had no confirmation however, and official announcements said yesterday that Vizzini, about 25 miles inland, had been captured by the British and Canadians.

(Louis Hunter, Canadian Press War Correspondent, at Allied Headquarters in North Africa, reported today the British and Canadians were already at least four miles north of Gela, and on the road to Augusta, pushing forward along a front stretching 112 miles in conjunction with the Americans.

(He said the Allies also had succeed in taking Catania the morale of Axis troops in the west end of the island was said to be rather shaky chance of escaping to the European mainland was the lessening.

Almost all the German defenders of Sicily were reported massing on the Catania plain, which lies across the big plain's northward drive to Catania and Messina and extends down to Gerbini, around which the Axis still holds eight Satellite airports.

Georing's Armor Hurled Back

The 8th Army encountered units of the crack German Goering armored division north of Lentini yesterday and hurled it back, although the Nazis, unsupported by their units, were reported to have fought stoutly. The 15th German armored division, said to be a unit of crack troops originally destined for Tunisia, was reported held in reserve on the plain.

Observers were confident the Allied attack was sufficient to overcome any opposition.

Other communiques announced the developing battle as the heaviest the Allies might face in Sicily, because the opposition will be mostly German.

Report Some Millitia Troops Go Over to Them

Indicative of the slump in Italian morale were reports that some Italian soldiers were donning civilian clothes and returning to their homes. Young men have been sent frequently in Sicilian towns dressed in civilian clothes but wearing gray boots.

As the ground conflicts grew in intensity, Allied airmen including R.C.A.F. units, were roving with increasing freedom over Sicily and the Italian mainland.

50 Hits Are Scored By Allied Bombers Against Ferry Line To Sicily

HEAVY BOMB LOADS

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 17 (AP) — The main Axis supply artery into Sicily by way of the Messina-San Giovanni ferry again was hit by crushing round-the-clock attacks from powerful formations of Allied bombers yesterday, Allied air headquarters announced today.

Wellingtons and Flying Fortresses plotted devastating loads of explosives on the docks and sidings of the ferry line itself and photographs showed 51 direct hits were scored.

In a raid on Bari Airdrome Americans swooped into the teeth of opposition, destroying 11 enemy planes, probably downing seven others and damaging two more. Three bombers were lost.

Allied air units operating from "North African" and "Inland" bases meanwhile accounted for 13 enemy planes, four of them downed by night fighters, destroyed on the ground.

Other Allied units also crossed the Messina Strait to strike at Reggio Calabria and Villa San Giovanni on the toe of the Italian boot.

It was declared officially that Field Marshal Baron Von Richthofen, cousin of the German First World War ace, is directing the defence of the Axis in Sicily.

The same announcement said the first week of the Allied invasion was that Axis planes destroyed against the loss of 69 by the Allies.

In addition, the Allies said, 70 merchant ships have been sunk and one tanker and four destroyers damaged.

HARD ON CATS

San Francisco, July 17 —(AP)— Mrs. Bertha Lawrence accuses Lawrence Portine, 70, of planting her cat, Tiger, under an Axis victory garden. She told Municipal Judge Michael Roche Portine spread crumbs in his yard to entice the animal. Then, she said, he and his son and Portine then stalked the kitten and threw it into the bay. Judge postponed action until Aug. 5. In the meantime he ordered Portine arrested for dead cat's Fortine's garden.

Weak Italian Resistance Disappoints Canadians Spoiling for a Fight

(Associated Press War Correspondent)

With Allied Forces in Southern Sicily, July 16—(Delayed)—(AP)—The most unhappy soldiers in Sicily are not the defeated Axis troops but the victorious Canadians, disappointed because they are unable to force the fleeing enemy to stand and fight.

These cocky lads, immensely proud members of the Canadian Army, thumbed their way hundreds of miles from their positions on the southeast corner of the island.

In a triumphant march through light—and they still have it. They had a bit cheated because they think Sicily is only a sideshow to the main battle.

A group of these husky, bloodthirsty neighbors of the United States who were assigned to the task of keeping the source of their discontent while munching oranges on a street corner said:

"It's too slow for us here," said Cpl. William Purves of Grand Prairie, Alta. "We want to fight—we want to get at the enemy." Lcpl. Ray Hall of Regina echoed soon," said Pte. William Korbett, of Edmonton. "Then Germans!"

The Canadians complained the Italian "Vino" only made them thirsty.

20 Prisoners Without a Shot

"I just had my first orange in three days," said Pte. Jack Hamilton Saville of Edmonton, who was one of 20 prisoners taken by his unit. The lads did not afford sufficient comment.

"We floated in on Sunday morning with very little opposition," he said. "Then, 18 of us rolled into Spica and the whole Italian garrison came out carrying out of work and holes to surrender. They had fought—and they still have, even for a whole fortnes—and if they really wanted to fight they could have made it miserable for us. But there's no damn thing they don't seem to care what happens. We took 200 prisoners without losing a man and without firing a single shot. Our greatest risk was being crushed to death by people trying to buy cigarettes."

GENERAL SIMONDS LEADS CANADIAN FIRST DIVISION

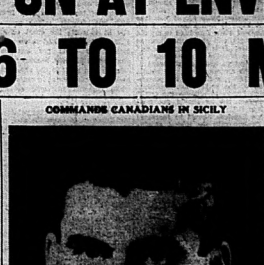
Identity of Leader Of Canadians in Sicily Has Been Hitherto Withheld

NATIVE OF ENGLAND

London, July 17 (CP Cable) — Word from the Sicilian front today indicated that Maj.-Gen. Guy G. Simonds is commanding the Canadian 1st Division as it fights as part of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British 8th Army.

It has previously been made clear that the Canadian 1st Division is engaged in the island action which began a week ago today, but the commander's name was withheld.

Yesterday Ross Munro, Canadian Press War correspondent with the Division, was permitted to say that Gen. Simonds was commanding by a 45-year-old General from Kingston, Ont. This was virtual identification, but at that time Simonds' name was censored from copy by military censors.



Today Peter Stursburg of New York, American Broadcasting Corporation correspondent in talking by radio to New York, described D. Eisenhower, Allied Commander-in-Chief, as having delivered a message to Gen. Simonds saying the General hoped to see him soon".

SIGNS OF LIFE IN ETNA

London, July 17 — (CP) — Volcanic Mount Etna, which lovers more than 10,000 feet above the eastern coast of Sicily, is one of the Axis forces are now locked in combat, has begun to throw heavy smoke from a vent created by a long period of inactivity, Reuters reported today in a dispatch from Sicily.

TELEPHONE WIRE SAVES TAXIMAN

Fort Erie, Ont., July 17 —(CP)— Motorists in the Fort Erie district driver, narrowly escaped injury when a telephone wire dropping wire held his cab from plunging into the Niagara River. Both men, severed to avoid a passing truck, left the road, and careened through a field before the cab's hood was torn from its engine.

COMMANDS CANADIANS IN SICILY

Allied Military Gov't Accompanies Army, Will Govern Sicily

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 17 (AP)—The first combined Anglo-American military government of its kind accompanied the Allied invasion army to govern Sicily, it was announced today.

Hundreds of British and United States officers and men, who were trained secretly for months to govern conquered enemy territory, quickly established headquarters.

Canadian personnel is included in the new military government, presumably in its positions in which British and American officers alternate.

No further information about Canadians was available here but it was believed they were officers who are experts in law, finance, public health, public safety, and general governmental administration.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower designated Gen. Sir Harold Alexander as military governor with supreme authority in Sicily.

The Allied military government organization chart is headed by Maj.-Gen. Lord Rennell of Rodd as Chief of Civil Affairs Officer. Brig. Gen. Frank J. McSherry of the United States is Deputy Chief.

It was understood that the establishment of the Allied military government was "no political implications of any kind."

The action was authorized by Washington and London through a directive from the combined chiefs of staff in Washington to Gen. Eisenhower.

"Amgot — Allied military government occupation — officers are responsible for the obedience of British civilians to proclamations of the military governor.

Although the administration of Sicily is to be "benevolent so far as the civilian population is concerned, the influence of Fascism will be destroyed," it was officially stated.

"The Fascist party will be abolished and the ringleaders of Fascism will be removed from office. Fascist militia and so-called Fascist youth organizations will be abolished. No political activity of any kind will be permitted by Amgot.

"There will be no negotiations with exiles or refugees.

"No local politicians will be given preferential treatment.

"Amgot will attempt to govern the people of occupied provinces and cities through their own officials who are not active members of the Fascist party.

"Rationing will be supervised by Amgot."

It talked of merchant mariners, the Trade Act law that protects them; of Indians and the protection of their rights on reserves; of the search for strategic minerals among the distant rocks.

And through it all, the House made swift progress towards adjournment. Today, the traditional Saturday-holiday will be abandoned and the House, it is believed, will go forward as it did yesterday.

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, July 17 (AP) — Bunda in New Guinea was the destination of Eighty-two more tons of bombs from Private squadron planes on base whose defenders, from their foxholes, have seen the central Solomons' skies darkened by bombers from the first day of the Allied invasion on June 30.

More than 100 of these planes delivered the latest of these low level attacks which in a short while have showered in excess of 300 tons of bombs on Munda.

R.A.F. BLASTS ITALIAN POWER INSTALLATIONS

Heavy Blow Struck At Duce's Electric Railways Using Power From Alps

RAID ON CONTINENT

London, July 17—(CP)—Britain-based R.A.F. bombers smashed at Italy's transportation system with a second straight night assault across the Alps last night by blasting the power facilities which feed Mussolini's electrified railways while Mosquito bombers battered Munich on the German-Italian Brenner line.

Last night's targets, a day after the case the night before, were transformer and switching stations through which flow the current generated in the Alps to keep Italian rail supplies moving.

The strength of the raiding force was not given immediately, but the fact R.A.F. bombers set alarms which in two nights added to their experience as an observer at the battles of the Mareth Line and Sfax in North Africa. He is only 36 years old and his home is in Winnipeg, Man.

Allied Leaflets Dropped Over Rome

London, July 17. (CP)—Allied planes flew over Rome last night dropping leaflets, the Italian communique reported today.

The communique was broadcast from Rome and recorded here.

Presumably the leaflets contained the Churchill-Roosevelt proclamation issued yesterday demanding that Italians capitulate or suffer the consequences.

The Rome radio unexpectedly went off the air last night, suggesting that an air raid alarm had been sounded.

10 Nazi Divisions Reported Routed With Heavy Losses

11 Counter-Attacks Hurled Back by Russians in Drive On Orel

DESTROY 129 TANKS

Moscow, July 17 — (AP) — The Russian midnight communique reported gains of from six to 10 miles in the new Soviet thrust in the Orel sector and said its counter-attacking army had hurled back 11 German counter-attacks, inflicting heavy losses.

Southward along the Orel-Kursk-Belgorod bulge, against which the Nazis hurled a heavy offensive 12 days ago, fighting now has died down to artillery operations.

The war bulletin says the day's bag as 129 German tanks and 78 planes, making the total for the 12 days 2,181 tanks and 1,782 planes. German losses in personnel also continued to mount, the communique said, listing the total at 63,000.

The Nazi High Command was reported in western Germany shifting transport to rush reserves to the threatened front.

The three-pronged Russian drive converging on Orel had been reported yesterday to have carried the Red Army 12 to 48 miles into enemy-occupied territory.

There was every indication from the Russian communique that the Red Army had bitten deeply into German defences.

Russian heavy artillery smashed the first gaps in the German lines, the communique said, while heavy tank units followed.

Five Enemy Divisions Routed

Russian reports said that in some sectors the Germans were in some what "disorderly" retreat. Of 10 divisions facing the Red Army, five were reported routed while the remainder formed a "defensive belt." Four of the 10 divisions were armored, the communique said.

The Russians said the advance was heavily opposed by the German air arm, but that the air army had flown 1,500 sorties in a single day. Heavily mined areas over which the Soviet tank divisions were advancing also slowed down the attack.

Whitby Away German Wedge

At the southern end of the Kursk salient, where the Germans in the first few days of the battle made their only gains, the Russians said, they are slowly whittling the wedge which the Nazis have held for the last 15 days.

The southern islands are under Italian command and largely garrisoned with Italian troops. Large troopships have left Salonika with between 9,000 and 10,000 German land guards, artillerymen and special corps troops intended to stiffen the Italian defence.

Next only to Crete as an outer defence bastion for Greece and the Balkans is Rhodes, 50 miles long, 20 wide, about 300 miles from Cyprus and within rowboat range of Turkey. Italy's Fascist Black Shirt has sandy beaches with deep water approaches almost all the way around. Some observers would make an ideal landing spot for Allied troops.

The Rhodes garrison is principally Italian and large. Estimates place it in the neighborhood of 30,000, inclusive of recent German reinforcements.

The Germans evacuated all women and children from the island almost two months ago.

Lerros, a small, independent Dodecanese Island in Leros, a few miles northwest of Patmos, reports parts rate it the most important. It is a natural submarine base and a large number Italian submarines are based there.

Refugees reaching neutral territory from the Dodecanese say the morale of Italian troops there is low, due to Mussolini's fear over low confinement. But they emphasize the Axis means to fight hard to keep this outer ring of defenses intact.

Casualties Were Very Light Says Premier King

Ottawa, July 17 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King said today in the House of Commons that if the Canadian people stand against optimism, they "have every reason to rejoice at the results so far achieved in the first major operations in which the Canadian Army has taken part."

During his statement, made a week after the landing on Sicily, the Prime Minister revealed that Gen. Guy Simonds, native of Kingston, Ont., is in command of the Canadian forces in the Mediterranean, including Sicily.

Mr. King said Canada had reason to be thankful the landings on Sicily were completed "with very little casualties," and that reinforcements to replace the first casualties had been comparatively slight.

City Police Solve Mystery of Many Bicycle Thefts

At long last Belleville police believe they have solved the mystery of so many bicycles being stolen in the city. Earlier in the week police apprehended a lad who was on parole from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School, and he admitted he had stolen two bikes in Belleville and another in Trenton. Yesterday city police apprehended another lad who was on parole from the same institution and who admitted the same offense as the boy mentioned a few days previous.

However, to their satisfaction, because when C.N.R. explanation came when C.N.R. authorities apprehended still a third lad at the Canadian National station here after he had actually sold a bicycle to a couple employes. City police were notified and today both of these lads are in custody.

These lads are paroled out to district farmers, and it is hoped to keep check on their actions, but we have a suspicion, we believe, that we have at last discovered the cause of so many bicycle thefts in the city with the apprehension of these lads," stated Chief Probert today.

COMMONS HEARS

nesday — morning, afternoon and evening — with government bills being discussed.

In addition to clearing the order paper of eight government bills during the week, the government's proclamation of transport department was authorization to spend a total of $2,284,973 and made further progress with mines and resources department estimates of $16,-388,136.

Something to be dealt with when the House rose was an amendment that items of $378,000 for the employment of conscientious objectors under the mines and resources department be cut to $1.

Transport Minister Michaud told the House that all Canadian merchant officers and men in schools established for them, Gravenhurst and how Canadians probably will be commissioned in August, with the aid of officers and other specialists from the United Kingdom.

A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni) said a committee of two war, representing the naval services and R.C.M.P., could have a seaman set ashore on the grounds he was "likely" to hinder shipping operations.

This authority reminded him of the Indian Act which will be an offence for an Indian to even attempt to hold an illegal potlatch, an Indian ceremony banned by the government.

Mr. Michaud said the regulations under which, the committees were set up were not necessarily designed to prevent delays in sailing. Such bodies might be called upon because of crew members seeking to cause trouble.

Justice minister St. Laurent said he had been contacted over the week-end by some orders, "drawn by men who have recently come into the navy" and that the orders were as stringent as the English language can be put and, that he had several refrafted and had indicated that those making such regulations should use them only when the safety or the security of the state was at stake.

He had heard of no cases of Dutch treatment, but even that, he admitted, would not justify some of the orders which have been issued. If there were any case where a man's rights were interfered with he would hear of it.

Mr. Michaud said an advance of $400,000 was being made to the Canadian National Railways to make possible the building of a spur line to the Steep Rock Iron Mines property, the cost of providing facilities by the railway, totalling $2,000,000 in Canada, would be refunded to the railway by the company when it is in operation, by a payment on shipments at the rate of 30 cents a ton.

E. B. Jolliffe Outlines C.C.F. Program For Post-War Rehabilitation

Speaking in the city on Friday night, Provincial C.C.F. Leader Hugh Edward Jolliffe addressed an audience of about 130 persons, opening his address: Mr. Jolliffe outlined the C.C.F. policy on Canadian unity, dwelling upon democratic principles. He said: "The duty of the Government is to see that Canada is prepared for the change back to conditions of unemployment", declaring that "no progress is ashamed when I go back to my old constituency and see conditions as they are. It is becoming more and more a preserve of the wealthy. It is dangerous and I do not want it. Millions are spent on the results and very, very little on the prevention of the results. Dr. McArthur as it liberty to criticize the C.C.F. program but he should not misquote it."

Says Pensions Should be Increased

Dealing with the subject of old age pensions, Mr. Jolliffe said: "Old-age pensioners should be increased immediately to $30 a month and the mothers' allowance should be increased. Every child under 16 pensions to $30 a month it would only cost $75,000,000 and would be better security to all the old men and women and every child. We know this can be done at once, the Provincial Treasurer has a large surplus fund at Queen's Park of $27,000,000, and the old people should be looked after."

Following Mr. Jolliffe's address, the West Hastings riding, appealed to the audience to support the party, tribute "not less, and more than a dollar", declaring "a dollar is cheap here." The sum of $94.41 was realized from the C.C.F. meeting here.

Mr. John McNinch, C.C.F. candidate for the provincial election, addressed the meeting before Mr. Jolliffe's speech but did not touch on topics dealt with by the convener and with his own district.

Local Coal Dealers Have Had No Official Notice on Latest Ruling

Belleville coal dealers have had no official notice of restrictions concerning the order of Coal Controller E. J. Brunning to the effect that coal users may not buy more than except 30 per cent of bituminous coal they used during the first 20 days of hard coal used formerly.

The only information which this that they have is what they have read in the newspapers and are therefore at present entitled to continue the policy which they have been carrying all summer.

Questioned as to how they thought the situation was going to be for the coming winter, they stated that the order should relieve mainly alleviate some of the difficulties, but that it will be very hard for certain just how bad things might be. They also said that they thought there would be a fair supply of coal, and that the public were sympathetic with the situation they won't be left cold.

Still Some Orders

Dealers are continuing to take orders, but are not accepting them. The best they can do is to promise to supply the coal when they can. In the same manner they are not taking any orders, and only promise to do their best for the dealers.

One dealer said that orders are coming in so fast that even if the coal were available there would be a problem in delivering it, because of lack of help. This of course is because everyone is getting worried and is ordering coal which formerly some people waited until fall, and others got part of their coal at a time, putting in a rest during the winter months. Now said, the Government asked people to order early, and he has been kept busy all day long. Winter's fuel since the fifteenth of April.

Allied Co-operation Big Factor in Success

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Divers elements go to make up the victory which the United Nations are forging from white-hot steel, and the masterful manner in which Sicily has been invaded emphasizes the fact that successfully operating Allied co-operation is the ranking reason for success.

Taking it by and large, there exists between the Allies a cordiality —and in many cases a warm friendship—which wasn't even dreamed of in the last war.

Looking back at the last conflict, I shall not soon forget the consternation caused when some Americans, British, French, and other Allies all contributing their bit, came to the mess. The feeling ran from the lowest to the highest places, even resulting in shocking out in Sicily.

jealousies as to which ally should have supreme command in combined operations.

What a change now! We are swapping our resources and our hopes, planning and striking in the exchange; the lid is off. On the battlefields of Sicily, on the Russian front, and the greatest soldiers of the United Nations are submitting themselves to the command of a colleague from another nationality, and they are doing it willingly and with good grace.

The reason for this remarkable state of affairs is simple. Just as a horse-sense truism.

Probably the most potent factor in drawing us together was the mortal danger that faced us in '41. We found ourselves fighting for our very existence against a barbaric enemy who had the initial advantage. Then, too, we had been smacked enough for the past few years and bickerings of the last war.

It was that willing unity which gave the Allies their victory in North Africa. It's the mainspring of the campaign against the Axis powers in Sicily is being carried on.

Twenty-eight tons of 1,000 and 2,000 pound bombs rained on Monday's guns and men on July 3; 70 tons on July 10; 33 tons on July 10; 33 tons on July 11; 21 tons on July 12; 70 tons on July 13. Attacks made without the communique-disclosing bomb weights, but in each case the raiders are dive bombers and torpedo bombers.

The Japanese plantation positions of the Japanese two miles east of Munda airfield on New Georgia Island were yesterday's targets. The communique announced that reinforces to Allied jungle fighters have been landed during the night. Heavy rains swept the fighting sector.

In the northeast New Guinea, where Australian and American conquerors of Salamaua and Lae are preparing against Komiatum, within seven miles of Finschhafen, and Salamaua, Japanese air base, Douglas Allied Liberators and strike forces in support of the ground troops.

ALLIED FRONT

Messina, chief Sicilian port of entry for reinforcements and supplies from the mainland, was besieged by Allied troops on land and Allied bombers which gouged out a strip two miles wide and a mile long from the heart of its harbor section.

Naples, Italy's chief mainland port, was raided by Liberator and Marauder bombers by thousands of explosives and incendiaries from heavy bombers which shattered the Royal Armory and gutted scores of harbor and industrial installations. The daylight blow fell while five were still blazing from a night attack by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers.

The German air force was reported making virtually no attempt to protect Italy's mainland from this overwhelming onslaught.

In the Russian central sector, on the Canadian army flank, the Americans, under Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton, continued its drive seven northward and drew within a few miles of Agrigento, Sicily's third largest city and one of the principal communications centre linking the eastern and western sections of the island. Agrigento is 35 miles from Licata.

The Allies were credited with nearly 30,000 Axis prisoners taken since the start of the invasion.

WEAK ITALIAN

"We've been carrying this damn ammunition for 3½ years and if we can get the Italians to stop long enough to fight we could have something out of it," observed Lieut. Al-Ian C. Merriman of Winnipeg, Man.

"But sending us here certainly is a step in the right direction," he added philosophically.

Lieut. Merriman, formerly of Winnipeg, said his outfit threw 186 mortar bombs and mounds of shells at the Germans in a single attack. The Italians replied with a few shells, but nobody stays behind to pull the trigger.

"Yes," broke in Capt. George Street of Welland, Ont., "they certainly can keep up with them they surrender. That's the main trouble with Italy's good to be here—we are afraid we'll be stuck with fighting England for the rest of the war—but we want some real opposition."

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Forces at Home and Abroad

Everything is all fever pitch at the Armories these nights as the Argyll Light Infantry Battalion is preparing for annual camp to Connaught Ranges in Ottawa for their summer training camp. Several new recruits were received in the local reserve battalion this week, all of whom are looking keenly forward to their first military training camp.

The Argyll Light Infantry (tank) will undergo the same type of training at Ottawa as it gives this boys on active service and this alone should be inducement enough for every member of the unit to put in a special effort to attend the military camp. It is not too late to enlist in the Argyll Battalion and enjoy two weeks' vacation, at the expense of the government, even yet.

Enquiries have been made at the Armories as to the fate of the absent-boys going to the Argyll camp at Ottawa. Proud it is and 18 years ago may join our unit and proceed to the training camp at Connaught but they must first get the consent of their parents before they can be accepted into the strength of the Battalion," said Lieut.-Col. R. C. Dennis, officer commanding the unit.

Major R. Alford and Captain P. Douglas, formerly attached to the Argyll, have been posted to the Corps Reserve of Officers, and are no longer attached to the A.L.I.

Sergeant George Lancaster, caretaker of the Armouries, returned home following a well-earned vacation period in Detroit. Mrs. Lancaster and son, Buddy, remained behind, but are expected home this weekend.

WO1. Charlie Holmes had "C" Squadron of the Argyll ranges to north of Jones' Creek on Tuesday night. The boys in "C" Squadron did themselves proud on their first outside scrapping of the trigger. "They brought home about 75 marksmy good targets," commented Sgt.-Instr.-Mai. Herb Wilkinson in praise of the boys' rifle shooting.

It's but Sergt.-Maj.-Bill these days. "Smilin' Bill" received his most recent promotion recently and "set 'em up" for the boys in the Sergeants' Mess in celebration of his advancement.

Bevvie!

A concerted man joined a Kentish regiment. The recruit boasted so much of what he could do to the sergeant that his chum decided to take a rise out of him.

One morning the recruit received a note from a famous general: "Heartiest congratulations. We have him yet!"

He showed the telegram to everyone, and pinned it up where all could read it.

The next day he got another, even more important, message. This first: "Thanks and compliments. Retain the proud of you for country R. I."

Still unsuspicious, he showed his second wire round the barracks. But he smelt a rat when the third arrived: "Gloating says he will retain you as long as you remain to remain neutral? — Hitler."

"EYETIES" COMPLAIN OF TREATMENT

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 17 —(AP)— Italian prisoners are complaining bitterly of the system of defence in Sicily by which they were put in the front line while the Germans installed laid at their backs.

They said the Germans refused to tell them where the mines were located and remained well to the rear while the Italians had to bear the first shock of the Allied attack.

The Italians suffered many casualties when they had to retreat through the minefields.

THE LIFE STORY OF HARRY NIXON, PREMIER OF ONTARIO

Harry Nixon's parents were United Empire Loyalists. His farm was conquered by his grandfather over 100 years ago.

Ontario's premier was born on the farm in April, 1891. He was christened Harry Corwin Nixon and is always called just plain Harry.

He attended the little red school house down the road. Here he learned the three R's and helped to keep up the farm.

High School in Brantford was an exciting experience for young Nixon, but he worked hard and did well.

Four years of more hard work at Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, proved Harry Nixon a student and debater of merit and earned him the B.A. degree.

He returned to the farm, his chosen life work. On October 20, 1914, he married Alice Jackson, a Guelph girl who had graduated from Macdonald Hall.

Those who knew Harry Nixon well, knew him to be a man of sound business judgment as well as a successful "dirt farmer".

Working in his own quiet way, Nixon's qualities of leadership earned him a seat on the Ontario house of assembly in 1919.

At 28, Harry Nixon was the youngest Cabinet Minister in Canada.

The Nixon family are church-goers. They joined the United Church at St. George.

Harry Nixon has been a member of the legislature for three consecutive terms since 1919, but farming is his occupation and he works at it.

Equally at home in a neighbor's drawing room or in his barn, it is said he has reached many important decisions while milking a cow by hand.

Whether at the farm or at the Parliament Buildings, he likes to relax in his shirt sleeves at the end of a busy day.

Nixon's quietly efficient ways and original thinking earned him a high place in the province's councils. At 43 he was many times Acting Prime Minister.

On April 30, 1942, an enthusiastic Liberal Convention made Harry Nixon leader of the party. He was then sworn in as Prime Minister of Ontario. Now he wants his opposition confirmed by the people.

The Nixon family is "in uniform". Son Jackson, R.C.A.F., was killed in action over Germany. Katherine, R.C.A.F., W.D., is overseas. Son-in-law Bruce Macdonald is also at Overseas. Both daughters married service men. Bob (14) is working on the farm.

Mrs. Nixon is a friendly, motherly woman, a gracious hostess and a sympathetic counsel. She is well liked wherever she goes.

Premier Nixon is a steady-driving democrat, a conscientious worker who has the confidence of the people. His long administrative experience and level-headedness will ensure Progress and Unity in Government for Ontario.

Italy and Ultimatum

The ultimatum of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt will render more unpleasant and bitter the position Mussolini occupies. Italy has seen the loss of her newly acquired empire under Fascism and her older colonies fall away into Allied hands, and now she sees Sicily slipping through her grasp.

She scarcely needs to be told that she is doomed if she carries on resistance, for the Allied might on land, sea and air stands ready to go through to victory across Italy if Italy continues to stand by the side of Hitler and his henchman Mussolini. She must know what is in store. For the Allied armies are not many miles from the toe of the Italian boot, and are marching through Sicily and fighting their way through the Italian possessions.

There has long been a general feeling that Italians have not had their hearts in the war. Italy was taken in by Mussolini when he turned against France as he thought Hitler had won the war. As back as far as the Munich Conference it was Mussolini was beginning to sniff the Hitlerian heels, following Mussolini's analysis of the situation. He said: "I found in Italy a widespread feeling of abhorrence for the Nazi leader and his works. The average Italian had no desire for war and decided on the intention of going to war to support him. Even then there was a great undercurrent of unrest and resentment at the repression of the dictatorship. This lived in constant fear—so much so that they were afraid to speak their minds openly and suffered in silence. Their trouble was they had no champion to lead them in revolt against Mussolini."

Since that time there is said by Mackenzie to have been a change in Italy "the royal house seems to have made a recovery in the esteem of the public and the old king has been asserting himself."

Further evidence of this is seen in the spectacle of the staff officers coolly surrendering en bloc in Sicily to be followed by their soldiers acting likewise. Mr. Mackenzie sees many of the Roman troops in Sicily only having no intention of resisting the invasion but on the contrary as welcoming it. The reason he sees is not that they are unwilling to fight for the Italy they clearly see they are merely providing cannon fodder for Hitler.

On the wave of the advance of the United Nations forces through Sicily comes the ultimatum from the Allied leaders of the West pointing out that only unconditional capitulation can save Italy. Leaflets dropped by bombers over Italy informed the people of the tragic state in which they have found themselves through Italy's having become involved in the war. This message of the leaders pointed out to the people that the Fascist leaders had tried to help Germany in her plan to conquer England, Russia and the world.

One of the outstanding statements was that which declared that the association of Italy with the Nazi controlled Germany was "unworthy of Italy's ancient tradition of liberty and culture" to which the people of America and Great Britain owe so much."

Mackenzie realizes Hitler's power in Italy is extensive through his troops and Gestapo but that writer's opinion is, while this is calculated to have a restraining influence on many, "there can be no question that a large percentage of the people are ready for revolt and only need a strong leader to set them marching."

Yesterday in Ottawa General Giraud, here from North Africa, stated that Italy was already collapsing.

In the words of the leaflet distributed Friday over Italy it was said that "every moment that you resist the combined forces of the United Nations you add to the list of blood that you sacrifice — can serve only one purpose; to give the Fascist and Nazi leaders a little more time to escape from the inevitable consequences of their own crimes."

Victory Over U-Boat

War on the U-boats is going very much against the Germans. The menace has not only decreased but in some areas has almost entirely disappeared. Stories in the papers Friday told of the successful shepherding of convoys over the Atlantic by the carrier ships whose planes have made life miserable for the enemy submarine crews, routing submarine packs and destroying and crippling U-boats.

The Allied sentiment is one of the great victories of the struggle.

Officers All

Daily Mail (London)

We recommend to the earnest consideration of Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Air Minister, the announcement made by Mr. C. G. Fower, Canadian Air Minister, that he hopes that in the near future nearly all Royal Canadian Air Force crews will hold commissioned rank. This is already the practice with United States air crews, and very strong public feeling has been expressed in Australia for its adoption in the case of Australian airmen. In our own Royal Air Force the position remains anomalous. Planes on the most important operational flights, bombing Berlin and other enemy objectives, are often flown by pilots who are sergeants, while among their crew, as gunners or navigators or in other subordinate capacities, are commissioned officers. We do not suggest for a moment that this detracts from the efficiency of an operation when success and safety both depend on an achieved camaraderie and co-operation irrespective of rank. Those, however, who are capable of undertaking the higher responsibilities in flight should be regarded also as competent to hold commissioned rank. Such, indeed, is their due.

It is Time Well Invested

(Chatham News)

It can at once be admitted that children are careless, very careless. The pursuit of a ball which rolls out on the road is to the child more important than anything else. The idea of danger being there does not register in the mind of the child. That is a known quantity and drivers of cars are aware of it. If they are careful they will cut down the speed of the car on streets where there are children; they will even move along at a snail's pace, but by so doing they will save lives. It may be, this idea of saving the four minutes to reach their destination, but what of it? It is time well invested.

Traffic Victims

(British Municipal Journal)

More people are killed or maimed by the enemy's bombs. The figures for March are as follows: Killed on the roads, 529; killed in air raids, 293; injured on the roads, 9,238; in air raids, 439. Thus, nearly twice as many people die as the result of road accidents as were killed by the Luftwaffe, and the number of road injuries was 21 times the number of air raid injuries.

No Time for Non-Essentials

(Ottawa Journal)

Holding that the time is ripe to raise an issue over Canada's flag, Prime Minister King is right. Too many people in this country are assuming that the war is as good as over, and if we are going back to our old business of arguing we are going to delay its getting over . . .. The future of this country isn't going to be determined by what we do or say at this time about a Canadian flag. It may very well be determined, certainly greatly influenced, by what we do at this time about this war.

That's What Debates Are For

(Chatham News)

Members of Parliament are being "charged" with changing their viewpoints during debates in the Canadian House. Well, what are debates for, if not to cause men to change their viewpoints? The trouble in this country is that there are too many politicians who stubbornly refuse to change their political minds under any circumstances.

ACHIEVEMENT

Along about this time of year
On bush and vine and tree
All lovely growing things appear
Much as they ought to be.

In spite of every backward spring
Or season dry or wet,
At proper time to blossoming
Come rose and mignonette.

And not withstanding countless foes
Which undermine and prey,
The blue delphinium lovely grows
And smiles its cares away.

If flower and fruit can conquer care
And winds that blast and chill,
Should man, encountering strife, despair
Lose faith and heart and will?

Americans Outwit Wily Japanese At Jungle Game

By MURLIN SPENCER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, July 17 — (AP)—Outwitting the wily Japanese at his own jungle game and stealing up from behind, Australian and American fighters possessed the Munda gateway in Salamaua Friday after wiping out 950 surprised defenders in a brilliant New Guinea manoeuvre.

The abrupt collapse of hill positions bestride which the Japanese for months barred the way along the jungle track leading to their Salamaua air base, 13 miles to the north, was announced in a communique which also recorded a spectacular air victory.

Over Rendova Island in the central Solomons, 14 Japanese planes were shot down out of a formation of approximately 80 while on hand by New Georgia Allied jungle fighters pressed close to the enemy's key air base of Munda.

GEN. GIRAUD SAYS THAT 'GERMANY IS DEFEATED'

"All That is Left for Her to Admit Defeat" He Tells Press at Ottawa

By GUY BEAUDRY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 17 — (CP) — General Henri Giraud, Commander-in-Chief of the French Army in North and West Africa and joint chairman of the French Committee for national liberation, said Friday at a press conference here that "Germany is defeated; all that is left, is for her to admit defeat."

Speaking in French throughout his long meeting with correspondents in the parliament building, he said:

"I want a strong French Army, as strong as possible, to march into France with our American, British and Canadian friends to liberate my country; and then go on into Germany to free all French prisoners of war and civilians drafted for work."

Paraphrasing the words of Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Gen. Giraud said:

"Canadians: Remember that your frontier is not at the mountains of St. Lawrence. Your frontier is on the Rhine."

"The situation at the present is good," the General said.

"I predict that 1943 is going to be a serious setback for the Germans. But Sicily, which is now under her, is only the first part of the first act of the play in which Canadians will have a still greater part to play. "I cannot predict when the war will be over. I know it will end with the total collapse of Germany and Japan.

Italy Already Collapsing

"I can say that already Italy is already collapsing."

The General said he had seen orders given by the German High Command in Russia to withdraw again. The Germans were to have taken Russia in six weeks. Three weeks after the start of the campaign, they had expected, there would be a collapse of the military regime in Russia.

"Declaimer, the (Russian) campaign started June 22, 1941, and today is July 16."

"I have been an eye-witness of the lowering of German morale, following the Russian campaign. From my prison at Koenigstein, in Germany, every day I saw three trains of 50 cars each passing, bringing back to Germany soldiers practically frozen to death.

"I was told that they, with a little daring and a great deal of luck, I escaped back to France and to Africa. The Germans everywhere would still have great successes but that she would be unable to hold such a vast front.

"I was called a visionary.

"Then came the decisive turning point of the war — the landing of Americans in Africa.

"I had been approached, and did not hesitate, for I knew that it was the crucial moment for the destiny of France. November 8, 1942, was the hour of France."

U.S. May End Coffee Rationing Before Aug. 11

Washington, July 16—(AP)—Office of Price Administration officials predicted today that coffee rationing in the United States will end on or before Aug. 11, and supplies of coffee will be ample to provide all the brew that Americans can drink.

Coffee supplies appear to justify cancellation of all restrictions, they said and only some totally unpredictable event—such as a new outbreak of submarine warfare in the Caribbean—could block dropping of rationing.

The new policy, it was understood, was reached at a special meeting between representatives of the O. P. A. and the Agriculture Department.

President Roosevelt said recently that improvement in the battle against U-boats gave promise of removing consumer restrictions on coffee and sugar.

However, in the case of sugar, the O.P.A. thinks the President was a little premature.

Coffee rationing started out at the rate of one pound a person every five weeks. As submarine warfare intensified, the same period was increased to six-week period, but in recent months the improving supply situation has permitted increasing the ration. The last change allows one pound of coffee in the three weeks of July 26 to Aug. 11.

Ottawa, July 16—(CP)—A Prices Board spokesman said last night no change in the Canadian coffee ration is intended, the same period as previously is contemplated and stocks are being built up now to maintain the ration at that level.

Assigned to Invasion .

Only volunteers go to war for The Canadian Press—and the waiting list is long.

Qualifications: Good health, sound experience and that intangible something—keenness, enthusiasm, dependability, even luck—that makes a newspaperman.

The war reporter's job is never soft. The anxious reader may picture him living a grand life in the open among happy-go-lucky comrades with battle only a nebulous background. Swell idea, of course—but it's a fantasy.

The war reporter must be tough. He trains with the Canadians—hard, body-punishing drill that toughens him as well as the boys with the Sten guns. He must go anywhere, anytime: sizzling heat or freezing cold. As part of an invasion army, he faces illness, injury, death. He may be dive-bombed, torpedoed or machine-gunned.

The war reporter has his types' write-ups in the shells burst and the bullets zing. You won't find him in a tent far behind the battle-lines writing flowery copy second-hand.

You remember Ross Munro: The CP ace went with the Canadians to wreck the coal mines of Bleak Spitsbergen; He landed with them under a hail of fire on the beaches at Dieppe. He went with the group that gained battle experience in North Africa.

Eleven others in the CP London Bureau await action. They're home-grown Canadian boys. Put your finger anywhere on a map of Canada and you won't be far from a CP war reporter's home town.

They know what faces them: danger, privation, suffering.

Do they still want to go? You bet your life!

They're betting theirs!

How Hitler And His Police Keep Iron Control

Here's a story giving some authentic particulars about Hitler's headquarters and incidentally explaining how Hitler's State Secret Police keep in order all the Nazi and other officials who are inclined to revolt.

(By GEORGE WEIDEN
In London Calling)

"This is the Fuehrer's Headquarters". . . Over the past three and a half years reports ending with these words have found their way into millions of homes, factories and barracks, from Dunkirk to Dnepropetrovsk, from the North Cape to Naples. Millions of lives have been affected by communiques, emergency regulations, mobilizations, measures, promulgations, and abrogations of constitutions, and conscription decrees, all with the data line: "This is the Fuehrer's Headquarters."

Technically the Fuehrer's Headquarters can be anywhere. Usually it happens to be. It can be in any place between Brest and Byelgorod, in Berlin, Berchtesgaden, or on the Brenner. It has changed its appearance several times. It has been a maze of buildings in a Belgian town. In the Balkan campaign it was a group of tents. And since Hitler's non-stop intuition has led them east-ward it is this amazing railway train. The train also accommodates a personnel of several hundreds.

Let's take a look at the first carriage in the train. It has got three shining letters inscribed on it and even in the dark the design of the Third Reich, colored black, white and red. The three letters are O.K.H., or Oberkommando des Heeres—High Command of the Army. Outside guardsmen in grey underwear are standing guard.

Inside the railway carriage lives an oily, plump and self-important Individual—General Keitzler, Chief of Staff of the German Army. His is not an enviable position, because his immediate chief, the Commander-in-chief, is Hitler himself, who is as erratic as he is exacting. The carriage of the O.K.H. is the busiest spot in the Fuehrer's Headquarters. Commanders of many sectors and zones of long Russian front, intransit inspectors of military preparations against invasion and unholy complaining Italian, Rumanian and Hungarian Staff Officers, all of them find their way sooner or later to General Keitzler's carriage.

The O.K.M., the Command of the German Navy, also has a carriage in the Fuehrer's Headquarters. But it is not so busy there. At one time the German Admiralty thought it would be able to use the Black Sea, and the Baltic, and so their naval personnel came along. They are still coming, merely because it would look bad to send them back. But their presence stands for little while the visitors stream past to the O.K.H., or, to Goering's carriage, O.K.L., headquarters of the Luftwaffe on the eastern front.

Next we are going to visit the largest and, perhaps, the most important railway carriage in Europe. Most the O.K.W., the Oberkommando der Wehrmacht, the Supreme Command of the German Armed Forces. This is the Berlin Train of Generalissimo Wilhelm Keitel in Hitler. Headquarters, and unquestionable, he co-ordinates Army, Navy and Air Force. Quite a different type is his Chief of Staff, General Jodl, a quiet, intellectual person, a personal friend of Hitler.

Day and night, telephone and teletype operators of the High Command are busy sending through their messages to Berlin. And the daily military communique is put through from the High Command carriage to the huge reception station of the German News Agency.

Each department of the tremendous German war machine has a branch in the Fuehrer's Headquarters. And each visit another one for a moment—the all-important supply and armament department, the tall, skinny Individual paces up and down, with his small compartment, dictating and shouting, answering telephone calls all at the same time. He is General von Loeb, who is in charge of equipping the front-line troops. He has also to go-between with the Industrialists and Manufacturers in the Ruhr and Saxony. They quite often come to see him, and submit their grievances to him—about intrusion from the Party, about labor shortage, about ill-will of foreign workers, and many other things.

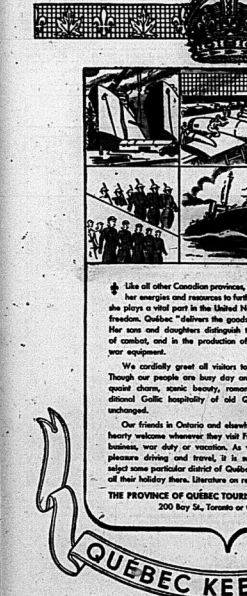
In another carriage there are elaborate emergency arrangements. At a moment's notice an important piece of news from Hitler can be broadcast to the German people, study, and if it is so important that the German people should learn it without delay, Goebbels by pressing a button, switches off interrupts every German radio programme with the news.

We have now visited the greater part of the Fuehrer's impressive headquarters. But we have not met Hitler himself fit in? Hitler's movements are so secret and extraordinarily difficult that it is quite impossible to say where he will be in two months. He is there, but that is about all you can say. He is everywhere, and nowhere.

For he is eminently suited to be a master of surprises and tactics. Hitler's chief enemy is boredom. He is bored with Berlin, he is bored with Munich, he is bored with Berchtesgaden, he is bored with the Fuehrer's Headquarters. It is sometimes whispered that his eyes in Berchtesgaden are directed more than his H.Q.

Hitler is the man of the work is done by his airforce and technicians, by his Party and by leaders and tanks it must often seem to them that it would be worth while to get rid of the temperamental and inscrutable Hitler and to take over the command of the German Armed Forces himself.

Let's take a typical Army leader—shall we call him General Schmidt? General Schmidt is in command in a rebellious mood. He distrusts the Party and its leaders and its Nazi party, and he loathes the Gestapo. Everything is going well and that is why, now gauleiters who come to H.Q. in Berlin, General Schmidt has been to wage war.



Suddenly Schmidt dislikes Hitler, his moods, his arbitrary likes and dislikes, his irritated orders of promotions and dismissals. General Schmidt hates all this, and he hates it more, he can read the signs of the times. He knows that Hitler is going well and that to vote against Hitler might be a way of Germany.

But General Schmidt hesitates. Why? The answer is a small railway carriage in Hitler's headquarters. Outside railway carriage there are two snacks, symbols of the two lightning wars of Hitler. If you see from them you can see that these signs are two letters SS and SD, the initials of Chief Headquarters of Himmler, the Reichsführer SS.

The men in that carriage, the Gestapo lawyers of the Secret Police, know quite well how to deal with General Schmidt. If General Schmidt knows that they know it, and knows that they know too much about him. They know, for instance, that he has a daughter who works in an underground in Dusseldorf, and a son Rudolf, who is in the Army. The Big Brother, and nowadays industrial accidents happen very swiftly—and so for dive-bombers, well, you know how frequently they can crash.

Like all other Canadian provinces, Québec has loyally gnawed her energies and resources to furthering Canada's war effort; she plays a vital part in the United Nations' monstrous fight for freedom. Québec "delivers the goods," in quality and quantity. Her sons and daughters distinguish themselves in all branches of endeavour in the production of munitions, foodstuffs and war equipment.

We cordially greet all visitors to the Province of Québec. Though our people are busy day and night on war work, the quaint charm, scenic beauty, romantic atmosphere and traditional Gallic hospitality of old Québec to visitors remain unchanged.

Our friends in Ontario and elsewhere in Canada will find a hearty welcome whenever they visit French Canada, whether on business, war duty or vacation. As wartime restrictions curtail pleasure driving and travel, it is suggested that vacationists select some particular district of Québec Province and spend a part, or all of their holiday there. Foot Ailments Start With Tired Muscles.

Prolonged and unaccustomed standing can cause a foot strain or swollen ills. Long flesh and rapid gain in weight may also be contributing factors. Pain is one of other symptoms.

Experts believe that the symptoms develop because these various conditions weaken muscles and tissues of the muscles. This causes the bones of the feet and ankles to turns outward so that most of the body weight is carried on the inner edge of the foot. Then the bones of the feet together and this causes the arches to flatten. The weight of the body is carried on the inner edge of the foot, a feeling of tiredness and aching in the feet will begin. Usually in the start there is no great amount of pain but when the ligaments are affected, and the arches flatten, the feet may be painful only while the weight is being borne, but acute chronic inflammation of the ligaments and muscles of the feet and legs may develop and the movements of the feet become painful. It can be seen that early treatment of flat feet is important to prevent this inflammation.

In treating the chronic condition, the object is to restore normal activity to the muscles of the feet. Manipulation of the foot usually will bring the desired results. In addition, exercises to strengthen the muscles are advisable to keep the feet from relapsing. Correct wearing of arch supports is not a cure-all, but may be necessary only in those cases in which there is a severe strain or inflammation of foot action. All that arch supports do is to help to support arches of the foot and keep the weight of the body from being placed on the inner edge.

Of course, every effort should be made to keep the foot strain from developing. By wearing properly fitting shoes and avoiding excessive use of the feet until the muscles have been strengthened by exercises and other methods, foot strain may be kept from occurring.

Fashion Flashes

AMONG THE CHANGES in the compact made entirely of plastic are high heels. Polished wood makes an interesting pancake compact. Wooden beads, made of wooden hinge, inside a circular frame. Plastic pulls out to reveal a powder compartment beneath.

WOOLENS WANT long periods of good leather with very little trimmings. Have glowed designed to give the most for many seasons. One model, in dark brown suede, has a shawl collar that is also a shallow point where it is fastened with a brown leather button.

VERY INTERESTING...fashions appear for next season. Evidently shortages and restrictions have produced a design. A smart dinner dress consists of a high, roundnecked bodice, trimmed with black wooden oversized buttons. It has a skirt made from a small, neat shawl foldar of black Persian lamb.

THERE'S PLENTY of color in the new fall hats. A narrow turban, forward-posed, is of red silk jersey, with a giant sweep of bright green feathers.

The Marry-Go-Round

Sniping at Eros

Some girls can do lots for a uniform—but there never yet lived a girl so beautiful that she could do much for a pair of slacks.

A man fancies he's a philanthropist when he goes about making love to every girl he thinks he can take him seriously; but, in reality, he's a fatalist, because that is how most men are jockeyed to the altar.

At this time of year, you can tell fast by the inflection in a girl's voice over the telephone whether she has found a heart-throb or not. Spring is the magic that turns every "possible" man into a possible lover.

It isn't until after the honeymoon is over that a girl starts to wonder "whose big idea it was to get married, anyway."

Never judge by appearances. A girl who looks like something the bride ate for breakfast may turn out to be the big matrimonial prize of the year.

Those Arabs we see in the movies wrong one.

these days look interesting. Wonder what an arab does when he isn't fighting, courting, riding or writing Arabian love-songs. Does he just sit around and look picturesque?

The informality of these hasty war-time weddings is really a great relief to all concerned. Sometimes, it used to take nearly all the honeymoon for a bridegroom to get over his headache caused by a fashionable wedding and the bride to relax from the nervous tension of a mad shopping jag.

No matter how often love or the postman may pass her by, a girl always hears there will be something thrilling in the "next mail."

Bad luncheons and new parlor games have come into popularity along with dim-outs and gas-rationing; and the popular cry of beans from your war-garden makes a lavish prize about as unromantic as sniff at. It's wonderful what this war has done to our social tastes and stabilize our sense of values.

The ambition of such a girl can be to "save all her kisses for the right man" and then marry the

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Philandering Soldier

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have been married eight months. He is a soldier. It was in the army before the birth of us. A few months after our marriage he started to drink and be late. At first I said nothing, but when I did mention it he appeared not to have heard and changed the subject.

Lately he has been staying at the base and I know it isn't work, for I pay quite by chance that he is running around with a woman he used to know before we were married. I love him and I believe he still loves me, but I am afraid of divorce. I wish I knew how I failed. I can cook and keep the house as well as the next person. I try to make myself attractive as well.

It seems as if everyone knows of this affair and I'm really ashamed to go out because they all pity me. If I want to win him back. Can you give me the needed advice?

—H. B.

As a corrective of loose morals, public opinion works miracles. If people pity you, it's more than likely they regard your husband as pretty weak sort of an individual. It's also more than likely, since gossip flies fast around an army post, that his commanding officer will give him a good talking to.

Meanwhile, it's sensible not to ance.

Wanta Their Marriage Secret

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A few months ago I married a soldier instead of although he claims he loves me, he wants our marriage kept a secret for the present. He says he is to inherit a large sum of money from his uncle and has provided he does not marry until then.

He will not make an allowance to me and has been correspondingly nice to me since. I don't think he makes me wonder if he really does love me. He wants me to come to him and live near camp. Please tell me what to do.

—Worried Wife

Before joining the soldier husband in camp, I think it might be well to find out a little more about him. Claiming he will not inherit a fortune if it is known he has married may merely be a ruse to me. Do you know anything about this fortune? Also, whether or not he has left him this fortune with the anti-matrimonial string tied to it? You are certainly entitled to know these facts as a wife with whom you have gone through a marriage ceremony, and you appear to know, also, as a soldier's wife, you are entitled to a government allow-

Believe Axis Basing Plans On Belief Italy Will Be Knocked Out

(By THOMAS F. HAWKINS)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berne Switzerland, July 17 (AP) — Rome has left no room for doubt that the battle of Sicily is Germany's fight.

On top of the continued pessimistic tone of the Fascist press, preparing the people for further setbacks, Minister of Culture Alessandro Pavolini added an appeal to Berlin which implied both confusion and a lack of Italian ability or will to master the struggle alone.

Germany is "defending her own soil in Sicily," Pavolini in the newspaper Il Messaggero, said.

Dispatches from Rome further hinted, for the first time since the invasion of Sicily, to the reaction of the Italian people against pro-Axis agenda. Some newspapers, trying to lighten the gloom, have published frivolous articles like the one that somehow troops were not far ahead to locate good tennis courts for the relaxation of advancing Allied troops.

Has Adverse Reaction

"This does not react well on the people," said a Rome report to the Neue Zuercher Zeitung. This was the first published confirmation of private information in foreign dispatches that when the theory of invasion became a reality, the propagandist-inspired optimism turned into quick gloom and apathetic resignation.

Guido Sarzel in Il Popolo Di Roma told the people that they must realize that the situation in the Eastern (Russian) front is such that Italy could count only on her present fighting resources plus what might come from Germany proper as other more Axis troops can not be withdrawn from the Balkans, France or other points that Berlin is busily trying to guard.

Although Germany was reported to be sending reinforcements to Italy, editorial comment tended to support reliable private information that from Berlin that the Nazis are basing their present plans of strategy on the supposition that Italy can be put out of the war.

'Everything Went Poof' Says Italian General Commenting on Invasion

London, July 17 (C.P. Cable) — A hulky 56-year-old Italian general, Achille D'Avet, sat in the warroom of his command post in the Mediterranean and said: "suddenly everything went poof."

It was the classic description of the Canadian landings on Sicily, on the beaches and inland, which began his 303rd. Coastal Division was supposed to defend. He had defied it in a desultory sort of way until, finally, he and his whole staff surrendered to the Lincoln and Monks, 15 miles northwest of Ispica.

This story of Gen. D'Avet, who was decorated in the last war by the Duke of Connaught, and by Governor-General of Canada, with the Military Cross, has been pieced together from cabled reports by Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent with the Canadians in Sicily, and Noel Monks, a correspondent for the London Daily Mail.

Munro was at Canadian headquarters in southern Sicily when the Italian general was brought in, a prisoner. Monks interviewed him later aboard the Allied destroyer when his wish was granted "not to be convince everyone that "I fight like da gentleman."

Canadian Night Raided Defenders

The story starts with the landing of parachute troops in D'Avet's command area on a nice moonlight night which the Italian general had decided was no night for the Allies to start their invasion of Sicily. He decided it was merely ammunition was confiscated.

sabotage raid.

But it was the real thing, an invasion. Night behind the parachute troops came the Canadians and "suddenly everything went poof."

Daylight revealed 1,000 ships anchored along the coast, discharging troops and guns "and we 'fel ter-rible."

The Canadians, once landed, had a penchant for reluctance from D'Avet's division, town after town falling to them without major fighting. Finally the Canada prepared to take Modica, a small town of 50 houses, which was the key to imposing looking square with the headquarters of Piazza Gen. Lanza.

Just before the Canadians were ready to rush the town, the general sent word he was prepared to surrender and asked for terms.

"Unconditional surrender," replied the commander of the Canadian Division.

Accepted Terms Quickly

D'Avet accepted with dignity and Major Dick Malone of Winnipeg, one of the Canadian officers, received the capitulation. He returned with the general and his whole staff, including the general's wife, later, kept moaning of the uselessness of a "naval liaison officer without a navy at his back."

One thing the Italian general asked—he would like to keep his revolver as a return of military honor. Permission was granted by the Canadian Army, but his ammunition was confiscated.

'Alex Is the Gun, Monty the Shell' Comments Officer on Noted Pair

At the Command Post of the 15th Army Group, July 17.—Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief of all ground forces under Gen. Eisenhower, has visited the Sicilian front and conferred with his commander in the field, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery.

It was the first meeting of these redoubtable generals on European soil.

This is the second time in three days that Gen. Alexander personally inspected the Sicilian front. On his first trip he called on Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, commander of the American 7th Army. With his usual tact he chose to visit Americans first.

Inspection of the areas held by Britons and Canadians followed. He travelled by a light cruiser on his first trip, by destroyer on his second.

"Alex" and "Monty" are a perfect team. As an officer told me here at this advance post, "Alex is the gun, Monty is the shell."

Martinique Will Lend Assistance To United Nations

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Fort-De-France, Martinique, July 17 (AP)—Assistance was given today by Governor Hoppenot, new Governor of long-troubled Martinique, that his administration would do everything possible to assist the United Nations was effort.

Asked if French military and naval forces in this area might join the Allied effort, Hoppenot said in an interview that this matter had not been discussed, although he believed all concerned were anxious to contribute all they could for victory.

Admiral Georges Robert, Vichy follower who acceded to the wishes of the United Nations and stepped down from the Martinique post a week ago, was forced to capitulate, Hoppenot said, following a "revolt".

Admiral Robert and about 10 of his closest followers, Hoppenot said, were being taken abroad a French vessel to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

An agreement already has been signed with United States authorities, Hoppenot said, providing for importation of food, clothing and other badly-needed commodities.

Some 200,000 of French gold which was moved here when France fell still is intact, Hoppenot said, and the French Committee of National Liberation will assume possession.

Haegg's chief rival tomorrow at Kezar Stadium will be Gil Dodds, Worcester, Mass., student from Boston. Dodds saw nothing but the dust of Haegg in the two-mile run-ning in Chicago and Los Angeles but at that he distance confidently expects to be in the finish.

The one-mile event is the Bostonian's favorite and he won the United States National A.A.U. 1,500 metres, or metric mile, the last two years.

Constructive Proposals In Public Interest

Speaking over the C.B.C. network Friday night, July 16th, Leader of the Opposition, Hon. John Bracken, M.P.P., Premier of Manitoba and Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Manitoba, outlined the Progressive Conservative platform in the Dominion election campaign. Mr. Bracken said in part:

Every Drew Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party has expressed the belief that it was essential for the welfare of Canada that a strong opposition should be maintained in the House of Commons. Mr. Meighen, Mr. Manion and Mr. Hanson all held that view and I am sure that Mr. Graydon will be of the same opinion. Without a strong opposition there is danger of the government of the day becoming overbearing and arrogant.

Not only this, said Mr. Drew, the platform and principles of the Progressive Conservative Party are constructive and offer a real alternative to the Government of the day. Some of the principles and proposals which the Progressive Conservative Party will put before the people are as follows:

To adopt such measures by inter-provincial co-operation as may be necessary.

b) To ensure the preservation of the family as the unit of society.

c) To meet the emergencies created by the war.

d) To ensure adequate prices for agricultural products.

e) To protect the established rights of labour.

f) To develop, encourage and assist secondary industry in the establishment of new industries and the development of existing industries, to the end that there may be found employment for returned soldiers and for those who will be displaced when industrial readjustment, and to consider the most effective means of assisting the welfare and security of the people as a whole.

Voted down by the Liberals including Mr. Mann.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

The advisability of making provision for post-war recovery was again pressed upon the House by Mr. Drew, Progressive Conservative leader.

That the proposed St. Lawrence development, the Trans-Canada highway, the development of the Canadian North, the reclamation of the Lake Simcoe area, and the development of the Lake Nipigon area, all be undertaken as part of a national plan for post-war employment.

That the Dominion Government, through the Dominion Planning Council, set up a Dominion Planning Commission, and that such commission be charged with the duty of preparing a plan for the development of rural and urban areas.

That such commission investigate ways and means open by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

ECONOMY URGED

In the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, Mr. Drew urged the necessity of economy in the administration of public affairs.

That the estimates for the current year be referred back to the committee of supply with instructions to decrease the total amount of the estimates by $100,000,000.

This was voted down by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

FOREST RESOURCES

Later on, Mr. Drew's followers offered a resolution declaring that the administration of the forest resources of Canada should be such as to ensure the maximum production of forest products consistent with the maintenance of the productivity of the forest lands, and that the Canada Forestry Service and the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission be:

Transferred by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

RECONSTRUCTION PLANS

At the late session of the Legislature (1942) the Opposition kept up the pressure for action on post-war reconstruction.

This House regrets that the Ontario Government has introduced no legislation to provide for the orderly reconstruction of the economic structure of the members of the armed forces and munitions workers who will be released from war industry, and with due regard to the protection of the interests of the men and women who have left their employment to enter the forces which will secure a proper standard of living, security of employment and social security for all our people, and that the Government should immediately call a conference of representatives of labour, industry and the municipalities to consider and formulate plans for such reconstruction.

This was voted down by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

HELP FOR AGRICULTURE

The Opposition renewed the attack with the following resolution:

The members of this legislature express their deep concern at the continuing decline in the agricultural production and that many agricultural producers are not receiving a fair return for their labour and investment, and that immediate action is necessary to meet this situation and to assure to the agricultural producers a fair return for their labour and investment, and to the consumer adequate supplies of foodstuffs at reasonable prices.

This was voted down by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

UNIFORM RATE FOR HYDRO

The next resolution submitted by the Opposition declared that the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission should be required to put into effect a uniform rate for power throughout the province, and that it is therefore necessary that the Power Commission Act be amended immediately to provide that the Commission shall charge the present service charge in rural areas.

Voted down by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

TO MEET FUEL SHORTAGE

An Opposition resolution dealing with the current fuel shortage read:

That this House is of the opinion a fuel emergency exists in the province and that immediate steps be taken to conserve the fuel supplies and to provide adequate resources to meet the growing demand for fuel for industrial purposes.

Despite the suffering of last winter and the prospects of another, the Liberals, including Mr. Mann, unanimously voted down the resolution.

FINANCIAL PROTECTION FOR SOLDIERS

The next Opposition resolution declared that the Government should undertake immediately, in co-operation with the Dominion Government, the Canadian Legion, the Canadian Armed Forces, Ivon Ontario Association, and other interested organizations, a survey of the financial circumstances of their servicemen and that all those, when they return to civil life, should receive adequate financial assistance to enable them to secure employment, to establish themselves in business, or to continue their education.

Voted down by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

HELP FOR AGRICULTURE

The Opposition renewed the attack with the following resolution:

The members of this legislature express their deep concern at the continuing decline in the agricultural production and that many agricultural producers are not receiving a fair return for their labour and investment, and that immediate action is necessary to meet this situation and to assure to the agricultural producers a fair return for their labour and investment, and to the consumer adequate supplies of foodstuffs at reasonable prices.

This was voted down by the Liberals, including Mr. Mann.

FARM LABOUR

Another resolution introduced by the Opposition read:

That this House is of the opinion that the House the Government should take immediate steps to provide for the payment of a bonus to farmers who employ farm labour, on the public distribution of the Province of Ontario, and that the Ontario Government Party, so already implemented by the Dominion Government Party, so already implemented by the Dominion Government Party, so already implemented by the Dominion

Reliance Make It Two Straight Over Army and Navy Kids

Making it two straight the Reliance Aircraft crowd hit Army & Navy Juniors 10 to 2 in their best-to-five series at Picton Fair Grounds last night. Reliance were never headed after scoring two runs in the initial frame.

It was a fair sort of softball game until the Army pitcher charges broke loose with a five-run splurge in the fourth, when Ted "Lefty" Shadbolt and Don Boyle from the Juniors' billtoo.

Although Red Townsend's kids cost-hit Reliance 11 to 9, they could not make their hits count into runs as a bill Anderson and Johnny Bawden shared the pitching honors for the winners, with Anderson the winning pitcher. The Juniors only entered the scoring column in the second frame.

Canadian Army divisional championships and some brigade finals are being decided under the 1941 army standard is set for each event. For instance, a time is set for the 100-yard dash and 10 men from each team compete against the clock. Points are awarded each who competed in all events. That meant every man competed in every event instead of confining himself to a sport in which he specialized, as under the old system.

Whereas under the old system a track and field meet was run off in one day, "tabloid" meets are completed in an afternoon.

Under tabloid rules an infantry brigade track and field was won by a team from the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, a field unit of reconnaissance unit as runners-up. Members of the winning team were Lieut. E.I.G. Smith of Winona, Ont.; Cpl. A.J. Kelly, Hamilton; Pte. Ross Cook, Lamb of Brantford, Ont.; G. T. Pinon, Hamilton, Ont., and L. Bradbury, Hamilton. Pte. C. A. Bailey, Sydney, N.S.; W. A. Rankin, Sydney Mine, Ont.; R. P. Davis, Toronto, and L. C. Newton and L. G. Swartz, both of Hamilton, Ont.

Among second-placers were Capt. N. Beattie of Regina, L. Cpl. J. Woods of Ont.; Lieut. Hugh Mc-Kinnon, W. H. Johnston, both of Guelph, Ont.

In another tabloid meet, the 5th Field Regiment won the championship of a Canadian division. Highlights of the meet were the presence of Lady Tweedsmuir, widow of the former governor-general of Canada, who took a keen interest in the scheme and met all team captains. Brig. C. B. Price, D.S.O., M.C., and awards were presented by Maj.-Gen. C.B.B. Ogilvie.

Members of the championship team were Gnr. Wm. T. Thompson of Toronto and H. H. Hillyard of Oshawa, Ont.; Bdr. Jack Drummond, Alexander, Man.; W. W. Adams, Brantford, Ont.; W. G. Owens, Toronto; Bdr. G. F. Dyer, Portage La Prairie, Man.; C. D. Bowen, Brandon, Sask.; Gnr. O. F. McKnight, Port Lambton, Ont.; Bdr. Ken Gunn, Portage La Prairie, Man.; R. E. Conway, Edmonton, Alta.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICHOLSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, July 17—(CP)— The largest group of Canadian Army sports officials ever assembled in Britain met on a Southern England recreation ground to witness a demonstration in motor vehicle track and field meets.

The 432 witnesses, mostly sports officers, supervisors and other officials from every formation of the Canadian Army, were invited the 1825 Canadian Armored Regiment (The Canadian Grenadier Guards), the utopia of group activity for large units of the Canadian Army.

Entries for the demonstration consisted of 16 teams of 10 men each who competed in all events. That meant every man competed in every event instead of confining himself to a sport in which he specialized, as under the old system.

The "spotlights" of the evening will be centred upon the mile event — a single scale race — the quickest mile in which qualifies, and would cause keen interest in anything else involving a mile, such as the 100-yard dash and 10 men from each team compete against the clock. Points are awarded each who competed in all events. Whereas under the old system a track and field meet was run off in one day, "tabloid" meets are completed in an afternoon.

Bobby Pearce To Scull At Trenton Meet

What will undoubtedly be Trenton's largest and most entertaining sports program to date, including Monday and Tuesday, is now less than one week away. Already there is an unusually fair of entrants for all events, which readies for the Bobby Pearce Sculling, and world famous sporting names, to be held on the Trent River under the patronage of Group Captain Ralph Manning, commanding Officer of Trenton Air Station.

The Regatta, which headlines the sports program, is open to all of big kind to be held at Trenton, and will take place on the first evening, July 19th, and the usual "Sports-fest", commencing at 6:30 p.m.

The "spotlights" of the evening will be centred upon the mile event — a single scale race — the quickest mile in which qualifies, and would cause keen interest in anything else involving a mile, such as the 100-yard dash and 10 men from each team compete against the clock. Dunlop Demands Return Bout With Former Marine

Some people are always looking for trouble and Al "Bunny" Dunlop is perhaps the No. 1 offender in that respect. Dunlop was last seen beaten by Wilbur "Tear" Morgan, Marine heavyweight, at the Toronto Hurne Arena sometime ago, but Dunlop refuses to let the thing rest peacefully and has demanded a return bout with Morgan. Knowing full well the fans of Belleville would like to see the bout, Al has asked the ex-Marine trounce the egotistic Dunlop heavy again. Promoter Tunney agreed and there you have the whole story in a week's nut-shell.

"I not only beat the Blimp, but plenty of times I have gone up and and crashed him to the canvas so hard his grandmother shivered with pain. He claims he has licked that bulk up before and I'm strong enough to fend and only of a Marine over my knee and break him in two. Let's get together and so he signed the papers. Tunney merely grinned when he read the paper and answered — "You be in the ring Saturday night, promoter next week, as I'm not going to be responsible for what happens to you."

In a supporting bout Leo Nuns meets Jerry Mc Cann, and Jerry Monahan, while in the opener, "Tex" Bishop meets Tessar Cooper, Gordie Gregg Tofolos, the little Adolphe Dionne, will work a card that Tunney is advertising as "rough house night".

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, July 17. (AP) — A couple of weeks ago Branch Rickey was defending the Giants'—and incidentally his own—failure to buy certain ball players by saying that during the winter bartering season both clubs were interested only in the kind of athletes who could help win a pennant . . . The Giants, he added, might change their attitude and show some interest in candidates for a sixth or seventh-place team. Wonder if he has Ducky Medwick in mind in that line?

Number Game.

George S. May is putting up $10,000 prize money for the Tam O'Shanter golf tournament at Chicago next week and requires only a $1 war stamp purchase for admission . . . Maybe George, who is slightly publicity-conscious, realizes he is putting up $10,000 worth of free advertising out of the prize'-money addition against wearing numbers last year.

Back to Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn baseble hadn't boasted when Shag Shaughnessy, the International League President, was talking about managers the other day, but his comments seem appropriate in view of the claims the names suggested by writers who figure Leo Durocher won't be back on the job next year. . . . A major league player can't step into a major league manager's job these days without getting some experience plotting in the minors, Shag maintained, because they never have had to do their own thinking.

Guess Who.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, July 17 — (CP) — The gods of war pushed at least two fences into the laps of prairie sport fans. Dave Dryburgh of the Regina Leader-Post resigned, thanks for another favor similar to that which gave Canadian sports a friend in N.H.L. hockey through the playing of former major league stars now in the army. Dave says the Prairie Arena sometime ago, but Dryburgh rose to new glory his heights when he beat the 6-2-lb. Bobby Dunlop to a pulp in a return bout with Morgan. Knowing full well the fans of Belleville would like to see the bout, Al has asked the ex-Marine trounce the egotistic Dunlop heavy again. Promoter Tunney agreed and there you have the whole story in a week's nut-shell.

"I not only beat the Blimp, but plenty of times I have gone up and and crashed him to the canvas so hard his grandmother shivered with pain. He claims he has licked that bulk up before and I'm strong enough to fend and only of a Marine over my knee and break him in two. Let's get together and so he signed the papers. Tunney merely grinned when he read the paper and answered — "You be in the ring Saturday night, promoter next week, as I'm not going to be responsible for what happens to you."

In a supporting bout Leo Nuns meets Jerry Mc Cann, and Jerry Monahan, while in the opener, "Tex" Bishop meets Tessar Cooper, Gordie Gregg Tofolos, the little Adolphe Dionne, will work a card that Tunney is advertising as "rough house night".

Sports Roundup

New York, July 17. (AP) — A couple of weeks ago Branch Rickey was defending the Giants'—and incidentally his own—failure to buy certain ball players by saying that during the winter bartering season both clubs were interested only in the kind of athletes who could help win a pennant . . . The Giants, he added, might change their attitude and show some interest in candidates for a sixth or seventh-place team. Wonder if he has Ducky Medwick in mind in that line?

Number Game.

George S. May is putting up $10,000 prize money for the Tam O'Shanter golf tournament at Chicago next week and requires only a $1 war stamp purchase for admission . . . Maybe George, who is slightly publicity-conscious, realizes he is putting up $10,000 worth of free advertising out of the prize'-money addition against wearing numbers last year.

Back to Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn baseble hadn't boasted when Shag Shaughnessy, the International League President, was talking about managers the other day, but his comments seem appropriate in view of the claims the names suggested by writers who figure Leo Durocher won't be back on the job next year. . . . A major league player can't step into a major league manager's job these days without getting some experience plotting in the minors, Shag maintained, because they never have had to do their own thinking.

Guess Who.

Bristol Girls Beat Opticals By 9 to 5 Score

Gaining an eight run advantage in the first two innings the Bristol Aircraft girls coasted to victory over the Consolidated Optical nine at the Bristol baseball field last evening to again take over the lead in the Senior softball league. Score at the end of seven innings was 9-5.

Four runs in the initial, two innings were enough to defeat the Opticals' girls, but they made it interesting for the victors during the remainder of the game. They batted an equally good job of shutting the opposition down after the first two and played strongly setting the victors down almost in order. Consolidated hurled for the Bristol nine and did an equally good job shutting the Optical girls out for the last four frames.

Penny Colclen was the only batter to hit for the circuit, she clouting a four-bagger over the left field fence in the first inning with two mates on base. Other batters were content to get as much of the distance hits as they could, but Consolidated's hit count out a couple of two-baggers, while Colclen collected a triple.

After gaining a two-run advantage in the first half of the first inning the Optical girls saw Bristol go two up in the second frame, but were soon eight to two at the end of the first half. Bristol increased the breach somewhat in thats' half of the fourth inning by bunching three runs to complete their scoring efforts, while Optical counted in the fourth to complete the scoring.

Optical — Stewart c, Hill ss, Cook 2b, Cooney lb, Henley rf, Delorm 3b, Coulass cf, Scero lb and Boyd lf.

Bristol — Elliott lb, Zebedee 3b, Wilson 2b, Colclen ss, Hughes cf, Calcutt p, Way lf and Vickers rf.

Score by Innings:

Optical	.....	2	3	0	0	0	0	0	5
Bristol	.....	4	4	1	0	0	0	0	9

Umpires — Cy Young (plate) and Smith (bases).

MEDWICK TO GIANTS

New York, July 17 (AP)— Joe Medwick, Brooklyn outfielder, yesterday was sold to New York Giants for a waiver price of $7,500.

Outside Brannick, secretary of the Giants, said that no other players were involved and that the veteran player, who broke into the Major with the Saint Louis Cardinals in 1932, would report to the Giants in Philadelphia today.

Good Frame

The village milkman bought a home for the morning round. It was not a particularly attractive one, but it had four legs.

One day he had his bargain to the blacksmith to have him shod. The smith regarded the newly-acquired animal critically paying particular attention to the hind body and spindly legs.

"You ought to have a horse there some day," he said at length. "I see you've got the scaffolding up."

O.A.S.L.A. bulletin.

Secretary Ted Schwab of the Belleville Softball Association, requests that all teams intending to join the O.A.S.A. the other day which wants to get the immediate leagues under way be ready to move out into provincial softball playdowns by or about Aug. 15th. One week from today the O.A.S.A. will meet again at Hamilton when tentative dates for the provincial playdowns will be decided.

The bulletin went on to say that after July 15th no player may sign with the O.A.S.A. certificates and that the O.A.S.A. has decided that anyone desiring to officiate in the O.A.S.A. playdowns must be in the hands of the parent body by the 20th of this month. Each must be provided with official identification cards. Secretary Schwab has all of the local teams certificates in his office, except No. 5 ITB. However, teams in the armed services will not be placements anytime there is a legitimate move, so Skipper Green is safe.

Mile of the century.

It undoubtedly would have been a great race even today but the fans spectators stormed into the stands at Lilly Field, Pasadena, Cal., for the first known "Mile of the Century." This, mind you, was before Gunder Haegg, back in 1886 when a 4:21 mile was an unheard of accomplishment. Lon Myers and Cummings, the professional champion, were matched for the 1,760 yards. The timers must not have believed the evidence of their watches.

At the three-quarters, when Cummings pulling almost abreast, bookbakers on the sidelines screamed their odds: "a hundred to one on Cummings," they yelled. The professional led by a foot at the end of the last lap. The amateur led by a step in the backstretch. Together they rounded into the home stretch, sway. George sprinted. Cummings sprinted.

It looked for a moment as though the Manhasset had really pipped the right winner in Cummings. But the stand gasped when it found that George reached deeply into his still untapped reservoir of reserve strength. One more spurt and Cummings was done, falling an exhausted heap on the turf. George finished in solitary majesty in 4:13 3-5. And for almost thirty-seven years was man ever to run faster.

Did you know—

Leo Novikoff of the Chicago Cubs has three brothers in the Army? . . . Tyson stopping Novikoff pick as the bundle of "sticers at a hotel the other day. Tyson remarked: "The fan mail is really getting heavy, isn't it?"....."No," said the Mad Russian, "it's the trouble I'm getting the bite on me for a five spot apiece. . . .The middle finger of the throwing hand of Ken Sears, Yankee catcher, is stiff from an injury received in the All-Star game played to date . . . Its victories came in 1936, 1938 and 1940.....Local softball fans will be glad to hear that Jack Fearey of the R.C.A.F., arrived safely overseas this week....Jack, a former Windsor lad, played outfield for the No. 5 ITS. softball team last week.

Sport Spice.

Eddie Schricker's (pardon Bill Davis') Bristol gals forged to the front in the Senior Softball league last night with a 9 to 5 win over the luckless Optical bunch. Bristol have won all of this week's holidays today knowing full well his Reliance teammates are going to win their best-in-five series with the Army and Navy kids.....Although Red Townsend's kids cost-hit Reliance 11 to 9 the Reliance beat the kids 10 to 2 on their superior performance in the score and the hitting powers of Bill Anderson and Johnny Bawden. Just could not make their hits count .....Why?.....Because Bill Davis' Reliance crowd had the Reliance and Bill is a pretty steady and cagey pitcher and he will get better. Let's trust Johnny Bawden hurled the greatest game of baseball since the junior pitching chore with Charles Hudson, Secretary Ted Schwab announced the future league playoffs as follows: Nos. 1 Marines vs. Bristol; Wednesday, Reliance vs. Juniors; Thursday, winner of second for Reliance and No. 5 ITS. Friday Reliance vs. Juniors.

Horse Sense Bridge

SIT 'ON 'MOSEY

By SAM GORDON and The Kibitzer

Do you remember how you started an early model T Ford? You primed (fix carburetor. Or was it jiggled? You retarded the spark. Or was it advanced? You advanced the gas. Or was it retarded?

Yes' took the crank forward, inserted it and heaved yourself. A quick jerk with a fifty inch load on hooks is not-in-it-at-a-pitch-and-toss-and-roll-and-heave-and-ho-and-yo-heave-ho-and-rock-a-bye-baby-rattle.

You ran back to the wheel and hurriedly fiddled with the gas and spark levers. If the engine did not sputter out right then you did carefully hide the seat with a stick of rolls.

Cranky as it was, the crank system became the accustomed custom of millions. Because nothing better was available at the time. And it remained so until the self-starter came along.

The Horse Sense method is like a self-starter for bridge. It takes the cumbersomeness out of the game. It helps you handle your bridge with less effort and more efficiency.

Nothing could be easier than the Horse Sense method of deciding two-trump bids. Each high card (ace or king or queen) in counted as one point, both hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A ♥Q 9	♠Q 9
♥K J 7	♥8 5 4 3
♦A 8 4 3	♦K 10 9 2
♣A 10 9	♣K 7 5

South starts with an opening bid of one no-trump. Among other things, he shows five high cards. North has four high cards. So he can now see nine high cards in his pair.

Nine high cards are enough for a game in no-trump. The signal for saying you can see tricks enough for a game is a one-jump bid. North's immediate response by north is three no-trump.

That completes a series of talks about first round bids. Maybe I have repeated myself in spots. If so, I hope the double talk has helped and remember the basic rules.

Next week we start gabbing about second round bids. Listen in.

"Hello, Frisco, Hello"

Knit suits, those mystifying creations that first saw the light of day in New York's fashion marts, are ultra-conservative compared to what John Payne and Jack Oakie wear in several scenes in their latest picture.

There is nothing on the market anything near the loud outfits worn by the two actors in 20th Century-Fox's new tuneful triumph, "Hello, Frisco, Hello" which is now on the Belle theatre screen, and to make it double in spades the picture is filmed in technicolor.

Something very loud was needed for the musical numbers which the two actors do opposite Alice Faye and June Havoc in the Barbary Coast background. The final outcome was a three-button creation with broad bands of purple, green, yellow, red and brown. They wear wide-shouldered straw hats with purple and green bands and huge bowties of the same color.

As curvaceous Lynn Bari, who is also starred in the musical, said: "From any angle they give the effect of a circus parade just come to town." The materials won't be found in any tailor shop—it reeked of from the bright pink of a studio prop man. He borrowed it from the upholstering department where it first covered a couch of the "Bronx Renaissance" period.

Completing the featured cast of "Hello, Frisco, Hello," are Laird Cregar, June Havoc, Ward Bond and George Barbier.

The Belle News of the World, a colorful cartoon of "Frankenstein's Cat," and a new edition of the "March of Time", "The Fighting French" complete the program.

The engagement ends on Wednesday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Gung Ho, Mr. Jordan"

One of the finest musicals ever produced in what Hollywood regards as one of the finest pictures ever made, may be seen next week at the McCarthy Theatre, when Columbia's "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" starring Robert Montgomery, Principal supporting players include Claude Rains, Evelyn Keyes, Edward Everett Horton, Rita Johnson and James Gleason.

According to advance report, "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" is the story neve told on the screen before, a comedy with flares to break every rule of film-making. Nobody is spared a high level of entertainment. Its characters are said to be gay, adorable, baleful, humorous—a story still hot Hollywood shouting.

Montgomery is seen as a fallow named Joe, a likable guy with a sense of humor who is obsessed with one overwhelming ambition. In pursuit of that ambition he is helped by sympathetic, kindly, dignified Mr. Jordan and by Mr. Jordan's unique understanding of problems and their solutions.

Portrayal of Mr. Jordan, Claude Rains is said to provide one of the year's most magnificent performances. Similarly, James Gleason has seen even his outstanding Meet John Doe characterization, in pursuit of that ambition he is helped by sympathetic, kindly, dignified Mr. Jordan and by Mr. Jordan's unique understanding of problems and their solutions.

Portrayal of Mr. Jordan, Claude Rains is said to provide one of the year's most magnificent performances. Similarly, James Gleason has seen even his outstanding Meet John Doe characterization, in the part of Max Corkle, partner of Mr. Jordan," and Edward Everett Horton's contribution as owner of his department hardly fumbled rules.

Miss Keyes, as the romantic lead, is said to fulfill the promise of early stardom revealed by her in "Dans with the Wind" and "The Lady in Question." Similarly, lively Rita Johnson establishes a performance which in a motion picture career has been limited. She won her immediate and scintillating stardom.

Second hit on the twin bill, "Invisible Stripes" with George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Paul Kelly, Henry O'Neil and Lee Patrick.

Main Italian Railway Lines Are Knocked Out

London, July 17 —(CP)— Some of the most vital rail lines of Italy and Sicily have been knocked out by the unprecedented Allied air campaign, the Air Ministry announced yesterday.

In a report on photographic reconnaissance last Monday after day and night operations, it said that with the assault last Saturday the Air Ministry added:

1. The main line from Palermo to Syracuse has been destroyed.

2. The main line from Messina to Catania was blocked.

3. The main line from Messina to Palermo was cut near the junction with the main Catania line.

On the toe of Italy's boot, the main line south to Reggio Calabria was damaged and railway sidings and the goods yard at Gioia Tauro Giovanni were destroyed by direct hits of the Liberators.

"Just as the Axis is finding it more and more difficult to use the airfields of Sicily," the Air Ministry said, "the communications are becoming more and more unworkable at a time when they are of vital importance to the Sicilian campaign.

Ottawa, July 17 — (CP) — The visits this week of Dr. H. V. Evatt, Australian External Affairs Minister, and Gen. Henri Giraud of French Committee of National Liberation are two more indications of Canada's growing stature as a nation.

These visits are not merely "courtesy calls." They are the fourth greatest producing nation in the world, and the centre of gravity of international affairs is once more indicating Canada's growing stature as a nation.

Little Benny's Note Book

I walked around to the grocer store with Mary Watkins without her asking me to, just for obligeness, sake, and little bit of a girl, me standing outside the store minding a baby in a baby carriage, and Mary Watkins looked at the baby, saying, My, how adorably dizzy, what's its name?

Sidney, the little girl said.

Proving it was a My, and Mary Watkins said, And what's your name?

Flora Seeds, the little kid said, and I said, Oh on, you must naps Flora Seeds.

No, Flora Seeds, she said, and I said, What else is it all about if not you if you're not flower seeds? Are you sweet peas and if you grow-ship seeds? I said.

Just Seeds, capital S double E Seeds, she said, and Mary Watkins started to giggle as if she thought it was great, saying, My, she thinks you're serious. I think you're terrible.

Meaning it for a compliment, and I said to the little kid, Are you sure you're not onion seeds? and just then somebody said, And what is your name, young man?

Being a big baby in a little hat right in back of me and meaning me, and I said, Aren't Benny Potts, and she said, Goodness, you must belong to a very interesting family. There must be pots of all shapes and sizes in your house. I dont know what kind of a little pot you are, but your father must be a coffee pot. Come on, Flora, let's go.

And she pushed the baby carriage away and the little kind went with her, and Mary Watkins started to giggle even harder, saying, My, Benny, you just ought to see your self.

Probably being lucky I couldn't and proving just because you start a line it dont prove you own it.

150 Bombs Explode at Same Instant In Messina Region in Allied Raid

By RELMAN MORIN

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 17 —(AP)—Thursday night at the same instant the U.S.A.A.F. turned the power of their titanic bomber strength against the docks and railroads of Messina and San Giovanni at opposite sides of the Messina Strait.

Reconnaissance pictures now are coming back, and by what they show—

A square mile of bulkings totally blotted from sight by smoke from one gigantic oil fire.

An area about two miles long and a mile wide burning as a single fire.

More than 150 bombs converged on that region, and they landed and exploded at precisely the same instant. The blasting action of an explosion is that brisk and the rattle walls of warehouses can be clearly seen in the stills.

And finally a tremendous banner of white smoke spreading across the sky from storage sheds that appeared to have been burning for several days.

Hour of Grace

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 21

She gave a nervous little laugh before she said it didn't know she were at home during the week and I thought.

"I'm not usually, but I thought I'd run down from town for a bit here. She went to town to do some shopping, Miss Willoughby told me. She called and found me home and said for me to come her way. Here, take off your coat and let me put you a drink."

"Oh, no, thank you, no. I—I really haven't the time. You see, I—I was on my way home when it occurred to me that that there's something wrong with the lock on our door at home. I suppose the door is swollen from so much rain. And I thought perhaps Harvey or someone boy who would help me open it. I don't seem to have the strength to do it and Toby isn't there. I can't get in. It's silly, isn't it?"

He chuckled. "Why no, there's nothing silly about not being able to get in your own house. Usually there are a good many here. This is the first time the house has been cleaned out of people. I'll see what I can do about the lock."

Providentially she had thrust her hand in her coat pocket and found the key. She remembered that the door would not open easily and that Toby had successfully cured it last night.

"Thank you. Don't bother with the car. I'd rather walk if you don't mind."

"Mind?" He laughed. It was rich, deep, resonant laugh that was good to hear. "Do you mean to say that there's another woman who prefers walking to riding?"

"I'm afraid I do and particularly on the first clear night we've had for days."

"You don't have to rush off now, do you?"

"No, I must. Mother will be coming back from a movie and she hasn't a key."

"I don't believe I've met your mother."

"She wants very much to meet you."

He chuckled. "Perhaps we'll take care of that situation tonight. I'd like to meet the mother of you and Toby." Their eyes met for an instant before he said, "I'm sure she is very charming."

She felt better when they were out of the house and walking along the dark road. It had been pleasant too easy and she was glad now that she had not fainted. That was frivolity. Nor had she lied. But if the heavy, capricious front door opened willingly, it was.

Fayne lifted his head and looked about him.

"This is the first time I've walked here at night. I'm glad you have a stubborn lock that gets me out of the house. It smells good, doesn't it? The earth, the atmosphere after a good rain. Thank God for the power to change the natural earth cycles."

Meagan said, "Before this war I used to wonder about the last one. I wanted how civilians could go about their business of living. I wondered how they could go on doing the same things when so much was happening over there."

"The amazing part of it is that over there they're doing the same thing about the business of living. Business as usual. . . I say it in London. It's the only way. Up and stiffer. It made the little people grow in stature until I doubt that much there are many little people in England and more. Even the children are big people now." He paused his head and looked at her. "Don't get me started on that. I'm boringly fanatical on that subject."

"But I want to know about it."

"I know you do. It surprised me to find a sheltered girl in a fashionable summer colony sensitive and curious about the people on the other side the world. How did this island produce you?"

"It didn't. I grew with it."

He looked ahead when he said, "The same is true of what's produced you produced also Clare. It's funny but the two I should have liked to know Clare as a child as you knew her. . . So thin at the road to your place. You feel it in the dark, don't you?" He had strayed a few feet from the path. He caught up with her. "You'd make a lovely fine hunting dog. Ever been hunting?"

"With my father once. He loved it. But I don't like killing things for sport. I'd rather look at them alive than dead."

He did not answer at once. Then he said, "That is to be expected of you. I suspect that you do most of the things that are expected of you."

"Which eliminates the interesting element of surprise."

He chuckled again. "As a matter of fact, you do surprise me. I haven't known many young ladies—can girls in years. They've either been foreigners or other men's wives. We've been ahead mainly and from what I read and heard I thought that a girl like you would talk it—what do you call it?—'Joe College' talking to me and we'd then break out in one of those new crazy dance steps." She turned his head and looked at her again and smiled. "You're not like that or what I thought you'd be."

"I think you've been mistaken—I and that I have been impertinent."

"No. Not at all."

They walked a little way before he said, "I think you are very honest and I know it. Let me have your hand."

He had a way of speaking with authority that she liked. She gave him the key and together they walked to the door. He inserted it quickly and he left immediately, then Toby could see how the door to be needed. Somehow she would have to know that it opened easier.

He put the key in the lock, turned it and then put his weight against the door. The door protested and pressed but it opened, bringing into view the telephone on the hall table, the same lamps and pictures which they had had that curious desperation.

"Why, it opened," she said. "I suppose I just wasn't strong enough."

"Try weather will fix it. I don't think you need have anything done to the lock."

When they had finished fixing the lock, she looked up at him a little too eagerly, she was afraid, and said, "And now may I fix you a drink?"

"No you think yours is better than mine?"

They laughed together, their laughter mingling. She felt her self-consciousness melt.

He said, "Of course I'll have a drink. In this place. This is what a country house should look like."

"If you'd like to wait on the porch."

"I won't wait at all. I'll help you. But why not take off your coat?"

She was glad she had cleaned the kitchen as he followed her to the rear of the house, and while she went about getting the glasses and bottles, it was not as though his was the first time he had stood back her, looked at her with a sure hand while her own were made unsteady by his presence. She had the frailty of her body, the feeling that the silence that came intently between them was caused by his knowing her nervousness. During the evening it was as if every nerve in her was beating against fear and secrecy. If this is love, she thought . . .

But she said once more eagerly, "Would you like to see our view of the bay? You can see for miles around and a clear night like this—"

"Would you?"

"I always want to. After living in the city all winter I can't seem to get enough of space and distance."

He did not know why he chuckled as they went out and walked out of the door to the porch and placed their glasses on the arms of the chairs. Then she saw that he had been lighting a cigarette. For quite a long while they did not say anything and the only sounds between them were the sound of the ice tinkling in the tall thin glasses and that of the gentle surf below.

"I thoroughly approve of your view, Meagan."

The tumult of her feelings frightened her. The thoughts she had of him and Clare and their five years of marriage would stir be stirred into words. Not because for five years Clare had been his wife. He had slept and dreamed with him. Only Clare had the privilege of touching him and saying to him the things that were given her, Meagan's mind told her. Clare could put her hand in his and draw warmth and strength and desire from it. Clare could and Clare was with Toby and she, Meagan was with Fayne, who was a partner, an unwilling but nevertheless a partner, in her deceit. And he knew. Of course he knew. He knew that Clare was with Toby tonight. Then why didn't he do something about it? If he knew Clare, why didn't he stop her or take her away? Didn't he have the right to protect his wife? Didn't he want everyone on the island to be with him about her? But Clare had not destroyed him.

Guns at ready, Canadian troops step warily through the Sicilian town of Pachino in a scrorching sun action against enemy. It was here that the R.C.R.R. made its first landing on Sicilian soil, taking the town quickly. A nearby airfield was an additional prize which was won by the port capture. The invaders secured artillery found from that point and are now driving on Catania.

This picture disproves any feeling that the Allies at last walked into Sicily without any opposition. The Italian railway rifles threw plenty of lead before they were knocked out of action. The wreckage is at last in the hands of the Allied forces, as well as the railroad line upon which the rifles were placed.

More Allied forces go about their landing operations on Sicilian beach, although greeted with heavy enemy fire from shore, as shown in foreground.

Heavily armed and with full pack, British troops leave their landing craft and wade ashore onto a Sicilian beach. This picture was received from Algiers via OWI radio transmission.

Give a cheer for the hitherto unsung heroes of the Sicilian operations — the army mules, strong stubborn and unco-operative in normal times, but in there swinging, when the chips are down. Here you see some of the mules going ashore. They are used to pack supplies over terrain where even the jeep has to cry "uncle."

This action picture was taken during early stages of the invasion of Sicily. A jeep overcrowded with Yanks rolls off a barge onto the Sicily beach. The barge at left is loaded with supplies. Note tank tracks in sand.

This photo of the great Sicilian Axis base of Catania was made 36 hours before Allied troops began their invasion of Sicily. It shows the lines started by Allied daylight raids burning fiercely. Today General Montgomery's Eighth Army is closing in on Catania and the fall of the base is expected hourly.

Germany Ruled by Nazi Spirit

(From New York Herald Tribune.)

To the New York Herald Tribune:

In your issue of last Sunday, June 27, Mr. Crosier gave a very interesting and objective report about the effort and program of the American Friends of German Freedom.

Who would not be a friend of German democracy if it existed at all and could be rolled upon to be a solid bulwark for Germany?

How great would be the danger if the American Friends of German Freedom built on a phantom and formed American public opinion to intrust major responsibility to a group that lacks the power to carry such a burden?

Mr. Crosier speaks of some persons who are opposed to the concept, which is now pretty general in this country, of the German people as more aggressive and bellicose than other nations. They stress the fact that people of German stock founded one of the most pacific communities to be found anywhere; the Pennsylvania Dutch.

The Penn German people, particularly those who are far distant from the German ideology, are certainly good-natured and peaceful. They even love peace to such a degree that they have not been capable of any effective and consistent resistance to the machinations of their rulers and to the patriotic folly that possesses and inflames the German upper and middle classes.

In his book on a hundred years Herbert Hoover correctly explains that the majority of the German people, although peace-loving, have allowed themselves again and again to be dragged into adventures by their warrior caste, which knows how to organize, command and dominate.

In Germany the dynamic minority commands the nation's destiny. Therefore it is of no use to point to the presence of the peaceful type, even if its peaceful ness is the majority. They never were a serious factor when it came to shape the nations' fate. On the contrary, their very malleability made them obedient to their masters, the dynamic and aggressive type who have been headed by the Prussian tradition and pan-Germanist plans for world-wide expansion. The latter would not have been so successful had it not been the other German, who is at pla:ast at war, of a childlike credulity, and can be herded like a flock of sheep.

What is the aim and purpose of the leaders of the ruthless German type that thers five innocent sheep into the wolves' wolves? You will never persuade me that even as well informed a man as Crosier is, that eight sheep are able to control two hundred and ten wolves in the policy of bloody extermination. The worst is that the German sheep have been armed with wolf-teeth and at present are engaged in fighting a people with a) enterprise of the German beast of prey after having been given useful teeth and claws for fifteen years.

Imagine the tremendous danger that would threaten the world if the lofty idealism of the Friends of German Freedom succeeded in influencing American foreign policy to abandon Germany to those democratic and peace-loving people who revealed their real political impotence from 1918 to 1933. What happened then would happen again. The dynamic minority which in the meantime has grown into a legion would quickly prepare a new onslaught on the world.

In 1917 the German industrialist A. Rechberg declared in the "Yosische Zeitung" that since the Prussian military clique did the War Office occupy so powerful a position as in the so-called German Democratic. Are you really willing to trust again a people with so devastating a record of "non-resistance to evil"? It is not all of less than the German people now under a tyrant will finally fasten their wrath upon him who misled them, as the American Friends of German Freedom, militarism and pan-Germanism finally popularized and fascinated, and Hitler have become epidemic, a natural mass drunkenness and collective disease which has even permeated the upper ranks of manual labor.

Political diagnosesty exists everywhere, but the terrible political blindness of the honest with the solidarity of the honest with the dishonest is of German's particular tragedy.

The people may finally desert the Fuehrer when his failure can no longer be concealed, but the ideas which have poisoned the German mind for many decades will not evaporate into thin air. Millions of hard-boiled, only by spasmodic, returning from the battlefields will try to exert their murderous will to power and simple, shouting and drastic means. Germany will be full of preachers of parochial and teaching; she needs the iron fist and the overwhelming power. Only the all-penetrating vigilance of an international military authority of Prusso-Tentons, because it will demonstrate to them beyond doubt that the chance of imposing on the German will on Europe is gone. This, then, will be the first step toward conversion.

They have preached the gospel of blood and iron for a century and had the advantage of surprise attacks. They must now be taught to realize that there have been blood and iron than Germany. This, and only this, will forment a revolution of their thinking and make them see their real chance in Europe and Europe's real conditions. Caesar's universal order preceded Christianity. Caesar has now to crush anarchy and to shape the system under which alone the work of spiritual regeneration can proceed. Such regeneration can be performed by Quakers, because these have no inkling of the type that will conquer Germany. It cannot be performed by German - Americans, because their ideas are generally too much influenced by the younger generation which has been systematically trained for political barbarism. Very rightly the editor of the "Aufbau" recently stated: "The Nazis are ready; the first day of peace will witness the last days of democracy." It was the plan that will last us for years and will force us to wage the very base of Nazi schooling, education and propaganda.

The perverted virtue and political insanity of the German people can only be cured by painstaking, elementary and drastic means. Germany must be cured by prescribed treatment and teaching; she needs the iron fist and the overwhelming power. Only the all-penetrating vigilance of an international military authority of Prusso-Tentons, because it will demonstrate to them beyond doubt that the chance of imposing on the German will on Europe is gone. This, then, will be the first step toward conversion.

Such regeneration can be performed by Quakers, because these have no inkling of the type that will conquer Germany. It cannot be performed by German - Americans, because their ideas are generally too much influenced by German propaganda. It is not the old type, who had their Pershing-Americans who possess American generosity and humanity and, nevertheless have now to deal with people who consider generosity and humanity a sign of weakness or bad conscience. They will not listen to German cries for self-determination, but will say: "Stop crying! You do just what you allowed yourselves to be dominated by your own self-determination? You have now to accept the sanction of a new world in which German virtue will no longer serve the devil".

The great error of generous men is to believe that they can rely on the weakest sides of the German people and to expect them to succeed in educating the stronger. In the German crisis we have to concentrate our thoughts and efforts on the establishment of anti-pacifist and nationalist section of the German people, and to treat them in the only appropriate and effective way, if you do not do that they will destroy your "democratic nucleus" on our side.

A soft peace would in reality be a hard peace on the German people, because it would leave intact under the scourge of their worst elements. The world may take it for granted that under a soft peace the untamed demons would rise again and gleefully start a third eruption.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By ALAN RANDAL)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, (CP)—One of the best records to have a head in knocking down a Hun fighter is that of Officer Walter Read, D.F.C., of Yarwood, Sask. He is captain of a Lancaster in R.A.F. squadron and his midupper gunner destroyed a night fighter. The crew home from bombing Bochum and Gelsenkirchen.

The gunner was P/O. Bob Baker of Ottawa, who had been in on the battle belonged to Turks for the swell manoeuvring of the Lancaster. The night fighter in from the portside and the rear gunner was set in his sights and shouted to Parks to turn. The Canadian pilot swung towards the fighter and Baker got it in a quick burst at 400 yards. Then the Jerry went down in flames.

The "intruders" now are more than two years old and the night fighter squadron which, operating from England nearly 2½ years ago was the first to use them. Intruder attacks on enemy airfields, in the hours when enemy night fighters are trying to land, shooted in Paris to turn. The Canadian pilot swung towards the fighter and Baker got it in a quick burst at 400 yards. Then the Jerry went down in flames.

A "pilots' bar," halo which fishscenes of a southeast coast town drop like a curtain, which pilots of Fighter Command, has been up in the air for several months. Surgeon's Work In the Mud Of New Guinea

(From a News-Letter issued by the Australian Section of the Empire Press Union)

Probably never in the history of war have medical men had to work under such conditions as those that existed in the New Guinea campaign. Seldom has such dense, concentrated so forcibly that sheer skill and dexterity count for more than sheer brute strength is the thing that saves lives.

Working in canvas "theatres" dangerous dead in inches of mud, with rain leaking through tent flaps, while the surface of insects flew around the pep headlights that took the place of shadow-proof operating lights. Everything was pig-sty surroundings, but claim that no case was lost which would have survived in the aseptic atmosphere of the most modern metropolitan hospital.

From the beginning of the Owen Stanley campaign in the end of last July, until the close of the Buna-Gona fighting in January, conditions necessitated operations being carried out as close to the front line as possible. After the Japanese broke through the Kokoda Gap it was at times impossible to get wounded back to casualty clearing stations or to general hospitals in time to be operated on.

Long, hard days, long nights were the usual medical posts, with beginning and ending like a crudely constructed ship's forecastle in the sailing days. These huts were cool in the daytime, but rats would become active at night.

It was always wet, and as the war zone moved to higher country, the nights became bitterly cold.

Night and day, there was great activity, at all the medical posts. In addition to the regular flow of battle casualties, the number of soldiers suffering after exposure to the cold and wet increased, and a great many had to be treated for some form of tinea or other skin complaint brought on by constant wet and the impossibility of washing clothes. Cases of exhaustion increased as the campaign continued, because there was little opportunity for sleep.

The first few days were harrowing. Because of the strict blackout, blankets were sewn over the sides of the tent and the atmosphere was stifling. Primus stoves roared, making the temperature hotter, and, on and on into the night, and standing on coconut logs raised 13 inches above the squelching mud.

Covered with mud and blood and in disintegrated clothes, the wounded were brought in from the battle front three miles away after a terrible journey by jeep or white bearers, travelling on a cemetery track so wet that the logs floated.

Many of the staff had malaria, and there was always an epidemic of 12 to 15 off duty.

The white bearers operating between the forward dressing station only 100 yards from the front line, and the main dressing station, did a magnificent job, particularly on moonlight nights. They carried their way along the floating corduroy tracks, and sometimes bogged-down with slit trenches and never dropped a patient.

The worst night of all was when 10 inches of rain fell. Thirty battle casualties were admitted after the first night. There was only one ambulance functioning—a Ford sedan, which had been knocked out which had been captured from the Japanese. In the middle of the storm the large surgical tent, with about 30 serious battle casualties in it, collapsed. The mud was inches deep, and patients had to be hoisted above ground level and all their clothing and blankets dried.

By 8 a.m. the tent was back to normal, and cigarettes, biscuits and sweets were handed around.

Just after the rain stopped there were ten enemy air raids, and at each flight of aircraft was heard approaching, the station was blacked out right out. Yet by morning all 30 cases had been operated on.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 16 —(CP)— There is more talk than ever in Washington of American competition with Canada after the war, following the example of Canada and other British Commonwealth countries in government-backed monopoly for foreign air routes. The proposals are dead set against it, preferring to fight it out among themselves and all others.

As an indication of how much interest there is in the development of commercial aviation during the war, it need only be mentioned that there now are on file with the Civil Aeronautics Board nearly 200 applications to start new air routes and services, most of them domestic, but many in the four corners of the world.

Wendell L. Willkie, according to those who know him best, now is convinced he can win the Republican nomination for President next year.

One of the reasons for his optimism is the remarkable sale of his book, "One World," an account of his global one-world trip last year. A recent survey by the New York Times showed Willkie's book in fifth place as sex-seller, of 34 cities across the country. The exception was St. Louis which was more interested in a new cook book.

You can add cork to the long list of products which the United States is seeking self-sufficiency in as a result of the war. That list has shut off the North American continent from Sweden, Spain and Portugal, only to spur developments to grow it in California, Arizona, Virginia, Georgia, Louisiana, Georgia and Alabama. At least 60,000 persons are now engaging in these states and some prophecy owners plan to plant as much as 1,000 acres in cork trees.

Cork trees must be 20 years old before the bark is ready for the first stripping.

Washington is an speculation about the reception that congressmen and senators will give when the folks back home, now that Congress has recessed for seven weeks.

Will they relish as determined as ever to bloc and tear down the domestic policies of President Roosevelt? Or will the feeling that their constituents don't think much of their handiwork and are ignoring them? Are the people determined, politics or no politics, to unite in wartime, even with 1944 elections looming just around the corner?

Washington would dearly like to know the answers to questions of the reassembly of Congress.

Brantford, Ont., July 16—(CP)—The city of Brantford has been making hay this past week. Last year for the first time the city ventured 16 acres on its Mohawk Street property, reaping 35 tons for feeding city horses. This year the area has already yielded 50 tons and a second cutting is expected.

The map shows the German advance in Russia. The German attacks are said to have slackened at the northern end of the Orel-Belgorod front and that their losses are reported to range up to 40,000 men and 2,625 tanks in seven days. Though the Germans continue to hurl reinforcements against the southern end of the front, they are making no progress.

ADDED home security has always been one of the foremost objectives of Brantford Roofing's production . . . extra protection against the ravages of fire, time and weather. But, as this soldier typifies, men who used to help Brantford Roofing build for security are out battling for it now.

Because Brantford Roofing products have a petroleum base—and oil is strategic material nowadays—the supply of Brantford Roofing for houses is limited. Any quantities available for civilian use are rationed to dealers, to ensure an equitable share in each community. To stretch raw materials as far as possible, all Brantford Roofing lines have been standardized on a minimum range of styles and colours.

If you are faced with roofing problems, ask your Brantford Roofing dealer to assist you. He will help you make your present roof last longer and effect urgent repairs with a minimum of new material. He will also help you plan now for a completely renovated roof after victory.

MILITARY OBJECTIVES IN ROME BOMBED
ALLIED ARMIES ADVANCE ON BROAD FRONT

Specially-Treated Crews Pinpoint Axis Targets

Great Care Taken to Avoid Damage to Religious, Cultural Monuments

Raid Gives Answer To Arguments Over Bombing of Capital City of Italy

FULL DAYLIGHT RAID

By SELMAN MORIN
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 18—(AP) — Allied heavy and medium bombers blasted military objectives in Rome for the first time in the war today, striking in daylight at the very heart of Fascist Italy in an emphatic follow-up to the Churchill-Roosevelt ultimatum that Italians must soon remove their country from the war.

Specially-trained Allied crews carried home a precision attack, pinpointing targets which supposedly were protested by their spokesmen in Rome as the most sacred symbols and monuments of Christianity.

• A secret force of explosives burst in Rome.

Prior to the falling of the bombs went leaflets telling Italians why Eternal City had to be attacked because the Fascists capitalizing on Italians' good will systematically concentrated their war machinery in Rome and furnished German troops as well as their own Eternal City defenses.

"It is from this war engine that weapons to kill our soldiers have been forged," the Allied message said.

Avoid Religious, Cultural Monuments

The raid was announced in a brief communique from Allied headquarters, which said special care was taken not to damage religious or cultural monuments.

This was in line with a communication which President Roosevelt sent to Pope Pius XII recently assuring him that the Allies, in attacking Sicily and Italy, would avoid all historic and religious damage to the Vatican and property of the Roman Catholic Church.

The raid was carried out in broad daylight and bombs were away at 11:13 a.m., (5:13 a.m., Eastern daylight time).

The Allies thus took the opening step in bringing the war home emphatically—to millions of Italians who had been deceived as to the real fringe in the ancient city.

Specially Selected Fliers

A group of specially selected R. A. F. and Canadian pilots were given the task.

Allied commanders said they took "unusual - ak" to carry out their instructions to avoid historic and religious areas of the Italian capital where religious and cultural monuments are located.

The communique declared the principal objective of the raid was the railway marshalling yard in the capital, which is one of the greatest importance to the Axis war effort and is "of importance for the movement of German troops."

The attack was carried out, the announcement said, by both heavy and medium bombers of the Mediterranean air command.

Leaflets also were dropped over the Eternal City by the raiders. Rome, a city of approximately 800,000, is situated on the west coast of the Italian boot, about midway of the long, narrow peninsula.

It is about 360 miles from the nearest point on the North African coast.

Says Italian A.A. Shells Failed to Explode - Till Striking Ground

Berne, Switzerland, July 19 (AP) —Unconfirmed reports from Italy said today Italian anti-aircraft shells which failed to explode when they hit the ground added to the damage caused today by the Allied bombing of Rome.

Up to early afternoon there was no Italian comment on the Rome bombing except a brief reference in the high command communique to the Allied raid on Italy itself.

Rome damage had not yet been ascertained.

The Rome radio broadcast a musical program after the communique.

PRECISION BOMBING

London, July 19 — (CP) — The bombing of Rome today suggested to observers here that the Allies had finally decided military considerations outweighed cries of protest from the Axis and possibly from neutral sources.

It was apparent that Prime Minister Churchill, who has not yet made a statement in Parliament on the Sicilian attack, would take an early opportunity in the course of Commons to set forth the reason for the attack.

Rome, by its usual daily communique, said only that "enemy airplanes have dropped numerous bombs over Rome, causing damage not yet ascertained."

Answer to Arguments

The raid, which an Allied communique said was concentrated on military targets gave an unmistakable answer to arguments which have flourished in the British press and in the House of Commons concerning the possibility of bombing the Eternal City.

The last official statement on the question was given by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden on June 30, when he said:

"It would not hesitate to bomb Rome to the best of our ability and as heavily as possible if the course of the war should render such action necessary."

The decision to bomb Rome was taken in London by mean that allied authorities had decided military considerations of the attack would outweigh inevitable reaction from Axis and neutral sources.

Axis Propaganda Likely Intensified

It was pointed out that Axis propaganda, which has been trying desperately to build up intolerable sympathy for victims of the Ruhr bombings, undoubtedly would be intensified by the bombing which will be called "desecration" of the Holy City.

Apparently, however, Allied authorities decided the bombing of Premier Mr. Eden's phrase — now would be both "commensurate and justified."

The Allied Headquarters announcement of the bombing declared that the raid was carried out "under instructions to avoid historic and religious areas." The announcement of the bombing of Rome long have contended there are actually no other legitimate targets in the capital except the Fascist regime.

SUPPORTS VIEW HELD BY PRIME MINISTER KING

Nothing Should Have Stood Before Immediate Recognition of Canada's Part

LONDON PAPER'S VIEW

London, July 19 (CP Cable)—The Daily Telegraph today says "security considerations should have been permitted to stand in the way of immediate recognition of Canada's part in the invasion of Sicily.

The newspaper was commenting on a statement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in Ottawa last Thursday, explaining his efforts to obtain mention in early communiques of Canadian participation in the assault.

(Mr. King said British military authorities had held there should be no reference to Canadian participation. He said he could only "no satisfaction" from replies to his requests that there be early announce in Canada, as soon as the facts were known there, that Canadian troops were taking part.

He said he had informed Roosevelt and that the President's personal intention had ensured that Canadian participation was mentioned in early communiques."

It would have been plain to all that this was an occasion where "no satisfaction" might legitimate factors," said The Express.

It said "the need for his (Mr. King's) expostulation should never have arisen. This is a view which is held as firmly in Britain as in Canada."

Moscow, July 19. (AP) — The Russian Army, overcoming the German fluid defence, has dragged its way to the approaches of the main defensive belt on the direct road to Russian front south of Moscow, the Soviet Information Bureau, official communist Party organ, announced today.

As the battle reached the close of the second week of furious fighting on a 165-mile front it found the Nazi army, initiators of the offensive, reeling under heavy sledge hammer blows of the Russian counter-attack. Only reinforcements for German base and their hold on the Orel-Bryansk railroad.

Canadian and U.S. Forces Capture 2 Strategic Towns

8th Army Pushes To Within Three Miles of Catania, Reaches Gerbini

35,000 PRISONERS

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 19 — (AP) — Canadian 1st Division troops have captured Piazza Armerina in the centre of the Sicilian front, it was announced today as the Allied forces gained all along the line.

The 8th Army apparently had reached the Gerbini zone with its nine satellite airfields.

Gerbini is 13 miles west of Catania.

In the west the American 7th Army captured Caltanissetta, almost half way across the mid-section of Sicily and 15 miles directly west of Piazza Armerina.

Gen. Montgomery's men wrested some of the most important strong points of Catania's defences from picked elements of the German Army and reached a point within three miles of the city.

Important Ground Gained

While these veterans were fighting the hardest battle of the Sicilian campaign against the hard core of Axis resistance, Gen. Guy Simond's Canadian units, jabbing dangerously at the enemy's whole flank where it is stretched in front of the roadless area of Mount Etna, were said in Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique to be gaining important ground "with skill and determination in difficult country."

In this 10th day of the Allied invasion, the combined forces have taken from the Axis approximately one-third of all Sicily, the official war bulletin added.

Following the capture of Agrigento and Porto Empedocle on the south coast, American troops led by Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, were driving northward, widening the gap between the enemy forces in the mountainous centre of Sicily.

Dominates Network of Roads

The capture of Caltanissetta, 8 miles north of the provincial capital, dominates a network of American advance, was announced today at Allied headquarters.

It is a highly-important town deep in the heart of Sicily with roads and railways running through Central Sicily. It is about half way across the south coast, and about 37 miles from the north coast.

Patton's troops, after along to the northeast in Enna, described as the geographic centre of the big island. It was believed the Canadians and Americans would join forces in Enna.

The Canadians and Americans gained contact after their captures of Caltanissetta and Piazza Armerina. Both columns forces then turned north in a rapid advance upon Enna, which has been called the "navel of Sicily."

Scorza Sees Italy 'In Mortal Danger' Frantically Asks Last-Ditch Stand

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Berne, July 19. — (AP) — Declaring Italy would be "mortally endangered" if enslaved and her treasures looted if she yielded, Carlo Scorza, secretary general of the Fascist party, broadcast from Rome tonight a frantic appeal for last-ditch resistance to the Allies.

Scorza, replying to a reply to the Churchill-Roosevelt unconditional surrender demand by the king, however, that the plight of Italy is desperate.

Italy, Scorza said, is "as never before in mortal danger," threatened by an "a-little group of men" bandits, against the rich cultural powers in the world who, he asserted, are "most avid to purge and destroy Italy's extraordinary and political unity and abolish her rights."

Although he made no direct reference to the Allied ultimatum he urged that through continued resistance could Italy survive. Recounting the country's grandeur in the Roman empire, he painted a stark picture of the fate in store for Italy if she surrendered.

"Resist! Resist! Resist," he exhorted. "If the enemy will be victorious, what fate would befall us? The nation would be annihilated up; the people would be reduced to a mass of serfs and the country would fall under the Russian whip. The stronger would be sent to toil in the Ural mines and in the steppes; the less strong would rake flowers for the cattle — and we shall stock ceramics for English barracks. The sacked museums, the schools subjected to the whims of the commissars; the idle turmoil, the port deserted of our ships; the closed factories, the abandoned fields would bear witness."

Liberated by Anglo-Canadian Army Villagers Smile and Shout Welcome

(By ALAN HUMPHRETS)
(Representing the Combined British Press)

Distributed by The Canadian Press War Services, Overseas Headquarters, Army, July 15. (Delayed)— Our troops had their first real taste today of the welcome of liberation as a town from Axis domination.

Hitherto they had passed through politically unconscious areas where the apathetic, largely illiterate population was neither hostile nor welcoming and to whom the Allied troops meant little more than the British and German forces.

But a small town this afternoon provided a sample of the reception which awaited the advancing troops of the United Nations on the mainland of Europe.

The population from children to the aged turned out in the streets and clapped, cheered, smiled and shook handsdemocratic as the British forces continued the chase of the fast retiring German towards Catania.

There was nothing sham about the welcome. This was not feigned joy.

The people smiled through tears and shouted "Viva Inglese" with emotion in their choked voices.

It was a welcome which amazed by its silence the retiring troops. A Greek village, a Dutch town—any place liberated from Germans—could not have shown greater delight or have been more vociferous.

Complete Formation Of 15 Junkers Wiped Out by Americans

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 19 —(AP)— In a brilliant battle beyond Sardinia, American fighters patrolling the Mediterranean Sea caught and wiped out a formation of 15 Junkers-52 transports used by the enemy to carry troops and supplies to Sicily.

The devastating interception was similar to those off the north African coast during the Tunisian campaign when as many as 50 German air transports were destroyed in one attack.

The fighters spotted the formation of JU-52s between Sardinia and the island of Ustica and not one of them escaped wrashing into the sea.

Geographically it is almost the dead centre of the island it is the focal point of nearly every main highway cutting through that area.

Lies in Open Coast

Then general line of the advance of the whole front was now approximately north and south, left flank where the Americans were attacking, through where the Canadians were in action, to the right flank where the British were battling.

The line was an average distance of about 50 miles from the coast. Rome Canadian units had advanced of the roadless area of Mount Etna.

Meanwhile, Axis prisoners captured by the Allies totalled 35,000 with 3,000 taken by Canadians, or more than one-tenth of the entire German and Italian force with which it is estimated Gen. Alfredo Guzzoni started his defence of the island. Canadians and Italians now surrendering not as isolated groups but as organized army units.

In one Italian battalion company shot his German commander and gave up.

The most important moves were taking place on the eastern stretch of coast, where Gen. Montgomery's troops had battered back strong German units in the confluence of three large rivers across the Catania plain and were pushing bridgeheads over the southernmost of the three, the Simeto, east of the estuary three miles south of their headquarters city.

Resistance south of Catania still was strong, but they gradually widening their bridgehead across the river.

Many Places Bombed

Allied bombers, meanwhile, pounding the tranquility of Rome, took another severe cut at Catania in the path of the British advance, and such American fighters made a brilliant attack on a formation of Junkers-52 transports used to ferry troops and supplies to Sicily.

Other fleets of aircraft blasted the railway yards at Foggia and Naples, Monopoli and Monte Corvino, and Randazzo, important communications point across Mt. Etna from Catania, where 24 tons of high explosives were dropped.

Reggio Calabria, the mainland southernmost across the strait from Sicily, was the target of fresh blows by Allied bombers. R.A.F. Hallifaxes and American Liberators flying from the Middle East Command's far bases.

Attack bombers made a particularly large target of the connecting Enna with Palermo, Messina and Randazzo, bombing and strafing large concentrations of vehicles in an effort to isolate that mountain range.

The collection of 150 vehicles was badly shot up when it was caught retreating northward from Agrigento.

REPORT SAYS THREE MAKE WHOOP TRIP COE HILL TO FRANKFORD

Despite the rapid advancement of science and modern living, there's at least one sign of the pioneer spirit which 75 years ago was responsible for the transformation of Hastings from a virgin forest—that is if credence can be placed in the story emanating from Frankford last week.

Apparently anxious to assist in the war effort through supplementing on the production lines of a war industry and having no other means of transportation, three residents of the Coe Hill district are reported to have made the trip from Wollaston township to Frankford by canoe. The trio were said to have started their journey at Eagle Lake and proceeding southward by way of the chain of rivers and lakes finally emerged to the Trent River and on to Frankford. It took them three days to complete the journey.

GIRLS QUESTIONED REGARDING BEHAVIOR

City police apprehended three young girls on the 1-2 Dalhousie Street business house and in company of several others about 3.15 on Sunday morning. The girls were taken to the police station and questioned regarding their actions and the reasons they might be loitering about at such an hour. They gave their names as Edith Brown, Montreal; Joan Carter, 1-2 Dalhousie Street, Brantford, and Evelyn Brown, 366 Nelson St., in the same city. The Brown girl established to police she was on vacation and was released. However, the two Brantford girls were held in custody and questioned further on whereabouts and actions.

On Saturday night, Brantford police communicated with the local authorities stating that some of the girls from that city would not assist them in their movements as they were alleged incorrigibles. The two Brantford girls ran away from home two weeks ago. They are ordered to leave Belleville early today.

NOT THE T. G. LEWIS MENTIONED IN STORY

Ed. Way Garage Destroyed by Fire Sunday Afternoon

Tweed, July 19 (Special)—Damage estimated at approximately $12,000 resulted in this village early Sunday evening when fire razed the large frame service garage owned by Mr. Ed Way and destroyed eight automobiles parked in the building and two parked outside. The fire is thought to have originated as the result of a short circuit in one of the stored autos.

Fronting on Victoria Street, Mr. Briggs' Jones, was first to notice the fire in the Way buildings. He immediately sounded the alarm and endeavored to extinguish the flames with the aid of a portable fire extinguisher but was unable to control the blaze.

Members of the Tweed voluntary fire department arrived in three streams of water playing onto the fire but their efforts proved to be a futile effort by a high wind which endangered nearby buildings. The Tweed group succeeded in saved from destruction but as a precaution the gasoline tanks were removed in the building to safety.

No one was in the Way garage at the time the fire started and the blaze was attended considerable headway before they were noticed by Mr. Jones. The heat of the flames destroyed Ford hydro wires alongside the garage as the fire was at its height, but were kept by a stiff wind blowing.

Search Fails to Recover Body in Bay Reported Seen by Young Pt. Anne Boy

Provincial Police are puzzled today regarding the reports of a drowning at Point Anne over the week-end. Late Saturday afternoon, Bert Lloyd of that village, informed O.P.P. officials that his 8-year-old son had been drowned, relating a tale relative to the finding of a body in the Bay of Quinte between Point Anne and Big Island swimming when he alleges he made his discovery.

Provincial Constables John Wells and James Howard investigated and despite the fact they dragged and even dived into the surrounding waters failed to recover a body, locals anything that resembled a body. The dragging continued on Monday when Constable Wells returned to the scene.

Young Lloyd stated to authorities he was swimming in the bay Saturday afternoon and when leaving the water west of the Canada Cement Dock happened to step upon a foreign object. The water was only five feet deep and the lad insists he reached down and brought to the surface the body of what appeared to be a 12 year old boy. Frightened, young Lloyd dropped it and fled home feeling rather nauseated.

He immediately told his parents, who in turn reported the incident to the Provincial Police. Despite the fact no signs of a body could subsequently be found by police or

YOUNG BICYCLISTS MUST OBSERVE TRAFFIC RULES

Names of 153 Boys and Girls Said to Have Infringed Regulations, Taken

RIDING ABREAST

Cyclists riding two and three abreast, and riding two on a bicycle and without proper markings or licence plates were apprehended on the bye brides road in numerous beyond proportions, Highway Traffic officers revealed today, as a matter of fact Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell personally took the names of 153 boys and girls riding bicycles on the bye brides road last Saturday and Sunday afternoons, all of whom were in some minor manner, in violation of traffic regulations.

"It is not the will of the traffic department to spoil or even interfere with the joy and entertainment of young folks, but they must be taught to observe the traffic regulations as well as a motorist or any other person. The Department of Highways has suspended large sums on posters and other mediums of warning cyclists the folly of riding three and four abreast along the main highway. And while many vehicles are so prevalent, it is much more advisable to ride single file and thus eliminate the largest percentage of chance of accidents," pointed out Highway Traffic officials this week.

Check-Ups For Safety

"It is for the safety of the individual cyclist that further check-ups must be made. There are more bicycles being ridden in Belleville today than ever before and cyclists must be taught to ride with as much, or perhaps more, caution than here-to-fore. We do not wish to prosecute the boys and girls nor mitigate their entertainments, but in the future any traffic violations committed by cyclists will be brought into court and severely dealt with in the event of convictions being registered", added Chief Probert.

Caldwell had occasion to stop no less than 153 cyclists along the bay bridge road all of whom were riding in some manner in violation of traffic regulations.

When Will Germany Crack? May, 1944 Is Date Named By Many Military Experts

Optimists Believe End Will Come This Year, While a Few Men of Mature Judgment Say Germany Cannot Possibly Be Beaten Before 1946

When will the war end? That's the question on everybody's mind as an article in the last issue of "This Week" Magazine, New York, Henry C. Wolfe, author of "The Germans Come", considered the opinions of men who know most of the situation. Here is Mr. Wolfe's article, in part:

During the past year my lecture work has taken me to all parts of the United States. Everywhere I went there was one question Americans were asking: When will the war end?

To arrive at a balanced and intelligent answer I have rounded up a cross section of opinion on the subject. I have talked with people whose background or experience should make their opinion of the war worth while. I polled the judgment of members of governments in the Army and Navy officers—both foreign and American —economic experts, diplomats, journalists and Germans who lived in the Reich during World War I. Their opinions differed widely... I've filed them under three headings, carried more weight. It was not modified in the groove of replacement thinking.

We'll smash Germany by May 1, 1944—that's the average their opinion struck. The optimists expected Germany to throw up after the failure of her 1943 summer campaign. At the other extreme there were a few men of mature judgment who said that we could not possibly beat Germany before 1946.

The betting odds ran something like this: one to 10 that Germany's resistance will crack before May 1, 1944; even money by May 1, 1944; 30 to one by early fall of 1944. A few of those interviewed would venture no date, but expressed the belief that it would be a "very long war." Personally, I side with the majority who expect the war to last beyond the beginning of May, 1944.

An interesting side bet might include on how the crack-up will come. For myself, I think there is an even chance that it will be accompanied by lurid melodrama in Germany. I expect the Nazis to try to destroy their enemies along with themselves. And I look for Hitler to have a fatal "accident."

Five Factors Stressed

The judgments that I polled were based primarily on two factors: Germany's military strength and physical resources. The military men stressed the number of divisions the Reich has in the field, her relative strength, the inner and outer lines of communications, her known system of fortifications. They emphasized the difficulty of "getting at" Germany. The economical experts talked largely in terms of the Reich's raw-materials reserves, the deterioration of her railways and industries, the destruction from air bombing and the difficulty of getting food and morale prolongs the war.

Dr. Reinhold Seeberg said: "I think we can take pretty much for granted, Sir, that when Germany failed to destroy her potentially more powerful enemies in the power years of German offensive and Nazi officials talked to me quite frankly about their coming conflict. They would win it quickly, they admitted, or lose it slowly. I believe that the German leadership realizes that it has lost the war. But it rights on, hoping to stave off a collapse at home, hoping to split the united United Nations front. So morale becomes a factor of tremendous importance. Let's have a look at German morale.

It appears that the Reich's morale is beginning to slip. Along the Norwegian frontier German officers are deserting into Sweden. They're going over to the Allied invasion or service in Russia. Thousands of Germans are crossing the Swiss front itself have picked up safe-conduct passes dropped over Switzerland. Reports indicate that doesn't happen in an army that expects to win. It never happens in an army whose morale is high.

There are clues on the home front, too. A short time ago a wave of interesting advertisements began appearing in German newspapers. They ran like this: "Visit — Enjoy an 800,000 sacks of coffee for the room filled with garden. Reply to Box 61, this office." The blind addressee is the mail-order house of Czechoslovakia. Jittery Germans who had set themselves up in the conquered country were preparing to bolt at a moment's notice. They wanted to be sure of a refuge in the Reich. The advertisements struck me as a comment that the Gestapo finally took steps to stop.

A short time ago a riot took place among students in Munich. Hitler, his bodyguard and the birthplace of Nazism. And the students of Germany are Hitler's most fanatical supporters. Yet German students rioted; the Gestapo shot a number of them, two boys and a girl.

Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler has been rushing from one end of Nazi-occupied Europe to the other putting down incipient revolt and fighting sabotage. In May he was shot down factory workers in the Austrian town of St. Pelten, not far from Vienna.

Another Purge?

The Nazi chiefs are finding it hard to maintain their own party members. They have threatened to purge "inferiors" and "cowards."

Unrivaled facts? Not at all. They are scattered straws in the Nazi wind. It is the wing which sweeps Himmler, Hitler with the unwholesome fragrance of low morale. In Tunisia the elite Afrika Korps pledged to fight to the last alternative of victory or death on the Fiehrer's battlefield, ended by being given arms in the face of United Nations attack. Germans go to fight for a last cartridge, the super-soldiers of the blitzkrieg staged a little surrender.

Haughty, besmocked generals, asking for terms in the Nazi Valhalla, rode up to surrender in Red Cross trucks to save their precious skins the reserve Panzer force surrendering, the flower of Hitler's former caste scrambled to promote one another in order to insure a higher scale of prisoners' pay.

In carnival spirit the crack goose-stepping of the Nazis race down down their own trucks to the prison camps, cheering the Allied invasion. What a contrast to the morale of the last-ditch defenders of Stalingrad, to the last-ditch defenders of bombshattered Britain!

But let's not be overhasty about the Axis debacle in Tunisia. Would the Afrika Korps have given up so easily if they had been fighting on their native soil? If we have the answer, we could make a better estimate of the date of German collapse.

In appraising German morale don't forget that the Nazis are led by desperate men, by criminals. They are gambling their last stake, all everything, including their lives on this war. In my opinion, Goebbels is the real brains of Germany today. He is clever and resourceful. He won't give up. You can look for him to choose the weapon to stave off a collapse of German morale.

He has been using "fear propaganda" on the Germans. The Nazis have terrorized, pillaged and murdered millions of people in this war. They know nothing of that. He is telling the Germans that if they lose the war they will all be enslaved as retribution—Nazis and Germans alike.

A former German editor warned me not to place too much faith in parallels between 1918 and 1943. And he insisted the Nazis have learned from Germany's failing. "Air raids do not affect them as they do normal human beings. They are robots. That is what the Nazis want them to be. Things don't get them down so easy."

Sidney Crossing

By of Quinte W.I.

Sidney Crossing — The regular monthly meeting of the W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson on Wednesday last with a large attendance of members and several visitors. The president Mrs. Percy Bolton, opened the meeting. Business matters were discussed and then Mrs. C. Holmes was called on for her account of some of her visits to different annual meetings. She then gave a brief report of the Biennial meeting in Toronto and mentioned the Golden Jubilee of the Government of Ontario and also the Dominion President Mrs. Dunnow's session. She also said she had visited some of the Institutes in this district recently and they were very enthusiastic in the women's institute work. It may be because they have only the one night gathering but however, they like to keep their money circulating at home for there they have some one and then, they vote it to be used for the benefit of institute work which one needs badly just now with so many war needs and the relief work to be done.

At this time Mrs. Bolton handed the meeting over to the convener, Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson.

The guest speaker, Miss Ruth Spafford, was called on for an address, "Home Economics" being the topic for the day, she chose for her subject "Meat". She gave a very profitable talk on the different proteins and vitamins and how to cook meat in different ways to retain them, also the different vitamins in the vegetables to suit all tastes. She also told us how to buy in order to get the most economical cuts and the meats for health. All enjoyed this profitable talk and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Ruth. Miss Barbara Hamilton then gave a piano number. Mrs. Ketcheson staged a contest of "Hidden Articles" and Mrs. C. Tucker, Belleville, winning the prize. Mrs. Ketcheson served a cup of tea and lunch. Mrs. Wilson moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Ketcheson for opening her home for the meeting.

Washington, July 17 — (AP) — President Vargas of Brazil has given 400,000 sacks of coffee for the use of United States troops, president Roosevelt revealed yesterday, a gesture to "the soldiers of your country."

'Foolish Boast And Frantic Word'

By RICHARD F. CRANDELL
In the New York Herald Tribune.

There are three set men in Europe today who would give much to change the record of what they uttered before and after the war started. Their lies, their cheating, their bungling fill the world's balcony bunk and prostituted genius. They are Benito Mussolini, Hitler, Benito Mussolini and Virginia Gayda.

A re-examination of what they told the world and their own people becomes fascinating light fluent reading. Their mouthings, by radio and leased dailies, take on new highlights now as the bombs of the "decadent democracies" shower down. And their cocksure offensive tones have given way of late to defensive whine.

As though it were not enough that their heads turn like weathervanes, to see whence cometh the next blow, they are forced sometimes to feast the eyes of their own countrymen, the Italians and the Ocean Fuhl Mussolini can't be much of a leader, but they've been remembering just what the great Duce screamed in his heyday of conquest. Nowadays the balcony of Palazzo Venezia is little used. Should a servant nearly attempt to draw the curtains back for a bit of dusting, one hotbs back to appear to smile wistfully for the three old days when the nervous fealted and the fearless hortator gripped the balustrade, determined to show them what the little King and spewed forth threats against his betters.

And wherever Schicksalgruber is in his Fuehrer Bunker he cannot change the record of what he said though he has altered his policies and his nationality and a million German threats still confront Hitler" to a man who is neither German nor Hitler. Mussolini is sure that somewhere in the crowd a German father may not be thinking, "I gave my boy early in August and all your victories risked on Schicksalgruber's neck."

Gayda, brilliant and snake-pressed newspaper man who runs the Italian press as the Charley McCarthy of Italy, must have his moments when that he might be leading as an editorial Garibaldi the forces of Free Italy from a brave New World, opposing this wheezing Fascist and his German master, Hitler. Sometimes the thought must strike him. Have I lacked the wrong end of the horse."

This trio of impudent braggarts started out with their mouths to the right end of the megaphone but their errors grew feebler now. British and American and Russian bombs have knocked the megaphones over their ears. Now they speak out the small end so that Axis citizens scarcely hear them, though the words are plain under the horn. The records show that.

To take up Hitler first, here is what he said and here are the dates:

May 21, 1935: "Germany neither intends nor wishes to interfere in the internal affairs of Austria, to annex Austria or to conclude an Anschluss."

March 1, 1936: "We have no territorial demands to make in Europe."

September 4, 1940: "Whatever may come, England will break down."

January 1, 1941: "(Over all the duty to the army) — "1941 will bring completion of the greatest victory of our history." "The Kaiser was glad to have a Christmas dinner in Paris in 1916!)

October 9, 1941: "I can say today this opponent (Russia) has already been beaten." (Head of Bolshevism will never recover, Hitler.)

March 15, 1942: "The Bolshevist Army has annihilating defeated by us in the coming Summer." (And another Stalingrad is still waiting.)

October 1, 1942: "The decisive last word will not be written by the Fuehrer." (Did you refer to Africa?)

November 8, 1942: "Do not think that my heart does not break when I look at the sacrifices (on Germany). You know that I have not done anything like that." (Goering told you England would be another Stalingrad.)

November 11, 1942: "Germany had no intention of invading France or of infringing on the integrity of the French empire."

So much for Hitler, a proved and demonstrated liar, many times. As for Dr. Goebbels, he is not to be alone. Germany must have something to laugh at.

In January, 1936, Mussolini made one of his most immoral hypocritical statements. At a dinner honoring Schachtmeister Hjalmar Who was returned to say:

"The whole British accord, which entered recently into force, has placed the relations between Britain and Italy on a solid basis." (It was the dagger versus the umbrella.)

Here are further Mussolinimes: "Italy is the friend of all nations not engaged in European problems big enough to justify a conflict. Italy's legitimate development would become a universal right."

May 15, 1939: "What an arc of power had been curved in the past 20 years! And what are our future?"

November 19, 1940: (After France) "The years will be, if not of peace. Germans and Italians form a bloc. This bloc is already very formed."

February 23, 1941: "The crushing victory of Germany in the West eliminates the possibility of a long continental war."

February 23, 1941: "Great Britain is engaged in a war. I can prove this logically." (Is it a bet?) ... Determination of troops, people, soldier has fought well, but the German fought better because they have beaten the Russians."

Four out of more hard work of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, proved Harry Mason a student and diligent worker and he carried home the B.S.A. degree.

Harry Mason's people were United Empire Loyalists, five years ago. He was presented by his grandfather over 100

Ontario's premier was born on the farm in April, 1891 Mr. and Mrs. Carrie Hayes and is always called just plain Harry

High School in Brantford was an exciting place for young Harry, who was a leader in all did well.

Those who knew Harry Mason well, knew he was a natural and honest business judgment as well as a successful "dirt farmer"

Working in his own quiet way, Mason's qualities of leadership recognized him at once in the Province in 1919.

He returned to the farm, his chosen life work. On October 28, 1914, he married Alice Anderson a Guelph girl who had graduated from the Macdonald Institute.

At 36, Harry Mason was the youngest Cabinet Minister in Canada.

Equally at home in a neighbor's driving room or in his barn, it is said he has reached many important decisions while sitting on the top rail of a fence.

Harry Mason has been a member of the legislature for front continuously since 1919, but farming is his occupation and he works at it.

The Mason family are church-goers. They attend the United Church at St. George.

On April 30, 1943, an enthusiastic liberal Convention made Harry Mason leader of the party. He was then premier in the Province of Ontario. He won by opposite next confirmed by the people.

Whether at the farm or at the Parliament Buildings, he likes to relax in his shirt sleeves at the end of a busy day.

Mason's quietly efficient ways and original thinking have won for him the confidence of many friends. At 52 he was many times Acting Prime Minister.

Here, Mason is a friendly, motherly woman; a gracious hostess and sympathetic counsel. She is well liked wherever she goes.

Premier Mason is a steady worker and a strong thinker, with the ability to get things done. His long administrative experience and loyal backbenchers will ensure Progress and Unity in Government for Ontario.

Canadian People Thrilled

Well might the Prime Minister of Canada express in a message to be delivered to Major-General Simonds commanding the Canadian in Sicily the pride of the Canadian people in the success which has been achieved by the Canadian troops in association with the British and Americans in their steady advance in the Sicilian invasion, and their great satisfaction that the operation so far has been achieved with very light casualties.

General Montgomery himself under whom the Canadians fight in co-operation with the famous Eighth Army, had this to say about the Canadians: "They fought terrific on the beaches and in the attack inland." It has likewise been said that Canadians have fulfilled the hopes of General Montgomery in their ability and resourcefullness as fighting men. Now with the British and Americans, Canadians have been honored with a place as spearhead of the invasion of the Italian island.

So Lieut.-General McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Army finds his prophecy ringing true that the Canadians are a dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin.

Weekend news still told of steady Allied progress towards which the Canadian division had made an important contribution.

Russia's Achievement

Russia has succeeded so far in the counter-offensive against the Germans in the Orel sector that it is expected that the Red armies will soon capture the city.

Just last week there was a story to the effect that Hitler was directing the offensive, having overridden his general staff but of this there has been no confirmation.

German tactics had gone back to the powerhouse style of fighting, but the power of the Russian advance is seen as a sign that Germany in this third summer of her war of invasion against Russia is weaker than she was last year.

The course of the war since last autumn has been one of defeat for the German and Italian arms. With the Allied offensive in Sicily which is being carried through according to Allied plan at a rate which indicates the perfection of the planning that has gone into the assault upon Mussolini's doorstep and the knock-out blow of two great disasters which have come to German arms at Stalingrad and in Tunisia are not conducive to a healthy German morale. With the fall of Italy, the Russian and American invasion of Sicily the Allies have clearly demonstrated that they have the initiative. Russia too shows that in her hands lies the power of delivering shattering blows to the enemy.

Hitler's army's driving power is not what it used to be. The German offensive has not yet won for her a foothold itself held up by the Russians, even though the Germans are believed to have hurled half a million men along the front of about one hundred and sixty miles and thousands of planes and tanks with very heavy losses to the Germans in men, airplanes and tanks.

Hitler's Whereabouts

A story in the newspapers a few days ago that Hitler had again gone on the rampage and taken the command of the German forces in the war against Russia revives the mystery of Hitler's absence from gatherings and the public platform. It is remembered how, before the war and later, he was ready to mount the platform on every occasion to thunder his wild rantings in the ears of a Hitler-intoxicated or Hitler-stupified Germany and the world that was anxious for peace. But there is no more of that.

Hitler may be the type that cannot react as the Germans would like to the new situation which Germany and the Allies have created in the United Nations gathering power about the territories he has stolen and about the Germans themselves. Goebbels seems to have been trying to fill the bill in Hitler's absence from public gatherings.

What then is Hitler doing? Where then is Hitler? In retirement because the Nazis have put him there? Deposed by a revolution or by military leaders and the news suppressed? Dead and the news concealed by the Nazis fearing that their gangster rule could not offset news of his death? Or insane and the news hushed? Who knows?

As for the view that he may be dead, Ottawa Journal remarks "our own hope is that he lives to be hanged" and the world outside Germany too hopes that he is alive just for that purpose.

On the other hand one of his last known appearances in a meeting was last November after the British and Americans invaded North Africa. On that occasion in the Munich beer hall he seemed in a trance, revelling in gloom. This was just at the time of the defeats of Rommel and the thought of the former Kaiser's flight in 1919 invaded Hitler's mind and he was reported to have said that he would not flee as the Kaiser did but would stay and face any such situation.

Anyway the world is not hearing the wild imaginings of the oldtime Hun.

The news story the other day is that Hitler might be commanding the Russian offensive where he might be gambling on the lives of tens of thousands of men to try and build up his reputation as a strategist.

Most people probably believe Hitler is still alive and knows that he can do nothing by his speeches and appearances as in the old days and that his absence from news and meetings is evidence of the "jitters" that have no doubt long been struck and that he and military Germany have been frustrated and cannot avoid a colossal and ruinous defeat.

Saving Lives

American doctors are saving from five to nine times as many soldiers from dying of battle wounds in this war as was possible in the Great War, it appears from casualty figures announced by Brig.-Gen. Norman T. Kirk, new surgeon-general of the U. S. Army, at the meeting of the American Medical Association.

The figures he gave covered the period during the phases of the North African campaign before the Army moved up into Northern Tunisia. The death rate at that time in the evacuation hospitals was from 2½ percent to 3½ percent, compared to a death rate of 15 to 18 percent in evacuation hospitals in the last war.

This remarkably low mortality, it has been pointed out, was achieved in spite of great difficulties in evacuation.

Plasma, surgery and sulfa drugs were credited by Gen. Kirk in that order for the great saving in lives. Shocks and hemorrhage and bomb or shell fragments are the biggest threats to the life of the wounded.

From 80 to 85 percent of the casualties are due to shell and bomb fragments, which carry more clothing and infection than the clean rifle bullets. An astonishingly small number of wounded have had the serious bone infection, osteomyelitis, which occurred in 75 percent of comparable conflicts in the past, and the percentage of survivals in cases of head wounds is much greater than in the last war, as is the survival in cases of abdominal wounds.

Era of Whiskers

(Sarnia Observer)

Perhaps we are not far from the era of beards. In the days when whiskers were trumps, some of the boys thought that there is more of a figure.

The Vandyke was a killer, even up to recent years when safety razors and blades became so cheap that no one could afford to whisker them. It would seem that it only requires a pushoff by a few brave individuals to get the whiskers vogue going like a prairie fire. Of course, the cost of living problem associated with haircuts. No one can make friends and influence people by wearing long, unkempt locks, unless he has ambitions to pose as a poet.

An inventor may spring a gadget with which men could cut their own hair. That would be a calamity indeed for the barbers.

RESOLUTION

If they can die in one brave deed
And offer all the years may hold,
Surely, to serve the lesser need,
I, too, can be as bold.

If they can shut their eyes to self
And deaf become to pleasure's call,
Surely, forgetting ease and pelf,
I, too, can do my duty small.

If war's grim horrors they can face
And stand unmoved long hours through
Surely, at my far safer place,
I can become a soldier, too.

If they can fling their lives away,
All we have cherished long to save,
Surely, whate'er my task today,
I, too, can be as brave.

Alexander Orders Sicilian Fascist Group to Dissolve

By RELMAN MORIN

Algiers, July 18 (AP).—Gen. Sir Harold Alexander in his first proclamation to the people of Sicily as Allied military governor of that island, today ordered all Fascist Party organizations dissolved.

At the same time it was announced that Charles Poletti, a former Governor of New York, who replaced Herbert Lehman, is in Sicily in a general executive capacity with the Allied Military Government of Occupied Territory.

Gen. Alexander's proclamation told Sicilians that all personal and property rights would be respected, ordered discriminatory laws annulled, and warned the people to refrain from acts of resistance.

It declared the purpose of the Allies was to deliver the people from the Fascist regime and restore Italy as a land free people.

Eight Injunctions.

Then it posted eight injunctions:

1. All governmental powers and jurisdiction in occupied territory were vested in himself as military governor, and in Amgot (Allied Military Government of Occupied Territory).

CLEAN CLOTHES

The first important washing "machine" was the old-fashioned back-breaking corrugated wood and later metal, washboard.

The first washing machine with a rotary motion, was patented in 1858 by Hamilton E. Smith, of Pittsburgh. The inventor continued to improve his machine and in 1862 he obtained patents, on the first self-reversible motion attachment to a washing machine.

Electric and gasoline washing machines, of course, came much later. The first complete self-contained electric washing machine was developed by Alva J. Fisher, who put it on the market in 1907.

The census of 1940 showed that about 1,350,000 power-operated household washing machines were being manufactured in the United States annually. Of these, 1,350,000 were electric machines, and only 100,000 gasoline-engine driven.

Members of a Shakery colony at Canterbury, New Hampshire, are still using a washing machine made more than a century ago. It is ante-dates washing machines with gasoline engines, but has been modernized by the addition of a motor and running water.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another Love Affair Cured as Allessel Doctors Confide!

Experts who spend hours in laboratories digging out why we behave like human beings should be interested in a letter which came to this column recently.

It explains the story of a girl who had been taken from one specialist to another, suffering from a nervous breakdown. Then she fell in love, got well, got married, and it seems to have the energy of nine pin-drivers.

There is a way of working this kind of magic in human beings. Yet few people—diagnosticians, family practitioners and families who know about it.

This girl hears a well known name. She is a graduate of a famous finishing school for young women's colleges. Her name gave her a debutante party, the kind with orchids, champagne, specials, and dreams created by famous designers.

Her friends, in becoming shades of pastel, embarked on a series of revelry, and a result was that within two years the girl became engaged to a fashionable play-boy.

Well, a young lady who had no coming-out party at all, but who knew all the answers to the fundamental things of life, smeared the play-boy. He called off the date, married and married the young lady who knew all the answers, in a ceremony which included a dash across the country.

The two who had been jilted proceeded to "go into a decline," as the old Victorian days. The young lady got old Victorian days. The family tried travel "to forget" her as the beginning of a new world permit. They tried her on Dr. Vienna, but nothing helped. She lost weight. Doctors shook their heads. A friend, who had a debutante daughter who had been at the debutante party, invited her to go to a U.S.O. dance — to hand out cigarettes. There was an argument on whirling her off in a dance. He was made a date with her. Then he was made a date with her. Then he was a fast worker. He made love like lightning. He kissed her! He became him rather than neurotic. No doctors were needed.

The family were none too impressed by their whirlwind-in-law's station in life, but nevertheless Private — was augmented to Miss Social Register has been announced. And they're happy.

Silas is going to have a quiet wedding and dispense with garnishings. She doesn't want to know when she came out at that famous debut.

All said and done, there's no stint like LOVE. This letter is one of thousands I've received that are proof of it.

Not Proper or Legal to Mail Birth Announcements 3rd Class

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have not lived in Canada very long and so, when our baby is born, most of the birth announcements we send out will be mail. Will he sent out of town. I am going to buy the kind of announcement that will count with the baby's name, date of birth, and so forth. Would it be proper to mail these in unsealed envelopes, with a cent and a half stamp?

E. R. T.

No, this is not only not proper, but it is not permitted by law. Announcements with printed birth announcements when they are filled in to the baby's name, date of birth, and so forth are, according to postal regulations, first class mail, and require a two-cent stamp for local delivery and a three-cent stamp for out of town addressees. Unless the baby's name is written on these cards, they still require first class postage.

When Fiance is Soldier

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance is a private in the Army. When having our wedding invitations engraved, is it necessary to state his rating on the invitations?

June.

No, it isn't necessary. His name may be engraved with his designation in small type directly under his name. Like this, for example.

John Fred Ward
Private, Canadian Army

Proper Wedding Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My wedding is to be this summer in church in the evening.

I. Since I am to wear bridal attire, is it proper for the groom and best man to wear white coat or are navy-blue coat and white trousers more correct?

2. I am having only one attendent. Is it necessary for the ushers to wear the same kind of attire as the groom and best man since they are not to be in the bridal procession . . . or may they wear their own suits?

Louise.

1. When the bride at an evening wedding wears semi-formal attire the groom, best man and ushers are only a short sweep, and a short vest; the groom and best man wear appropriately wear tuxedos, with, if they wish, a white dress coat-covered tuxedo coat. Either of the attires you mention would be appropriate for a day-time wedding in summer.

2. If the ushers are not to take part in the procession they may wear their business, or if more convenient, dark business suits.

First Wedded Name Dropped

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I expect to be married soon for a second time, and I am uncertain about what name I should use. I should use after my marriage. I have always used my first name with friends, but they do not agree on the proper form, so I'm coming to you for your kind advice. Do I drop my first-marriage name completely, or retain my first-marriage surname, or my first name and add the surname of my second-marriage name?

C. A.

After your second marriage, you drop your first-marriage name completely.

SALAD VEGETABLES. Could be used as a sandwich filling, or as a salad. If you supply a meat or fish salad in a container, plain bread and butter sandwiches might accompany it—or one with a little relish in it. Chopped cabbage and carrots are particularly valuable.

MEAT SALADS

Try one of these in a waxed container or covered glass jar.

1. ½ cup diced Savoury Loaf, ¼ cup diced celery and grated carrot, ½ cup dressing.

2. ½ cup Bologna cut in strips, ½ cup diced celery, ½ cup mixed leftover vegetables. Salt, pepper, mayonnaise to taste.

POSTUM: Of course I'm Postum. Don't you notice that hearty Postum fragrance?

CREAM: Yes, but I saw you being prepared in a coffee percolator, just like coffee.

POSTUM: That's because I'm POSTUM CEREAL BEVERAGE—prepared like coffee.

CREAM: Just the same as making coffee, eh?

POSTUM: Directions for making me in a coffee-pot or percolator or drip coffee-maker are on my package

CREAM: What about Silex glass coffee-makers?

POSTUM: If you use a Silex, after the water boils up into the upper bowl, leave it three minutes before removing from the heat.

CREAM: Have you got that invigorating Postum flavor?

POSTUM: You bet—and people who like a stronger flavor use rounded tablespoonfuls in measuring instead of level tablespoonfuls called for in the package directions.

CREAM: And you taste like coffee?

POSTUM: NO! I do NOT taste like coffee. I'm the great hot, mealtime drink in millions of homes because I have a grand flavor all my very own. And grocers have a supply of me on their shelves.

Yankees Extend Winning Streak to Eight in Row; Cooper Chalks Up No. 12

Mort Cooper Halts Pirates for 12th Triumph of Season, Curfew Halts Three Games

SITUATION INVOLVED

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

National League standings hung in abeyance today no fewer than four "suspended games" which must be played to completion at some future date. Two of them already have been entered in the standings as ties and had for the teams involved, the other two have not.

Yesterday Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew halted the second game of a doubleheader at Pittsburgh after the Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals had battled 6-6. Because the National League passed an "anti-deal-line" rule last winter which said that contests halted before the end of nine innings must be replayed, they must later be played to completion, the result will be the same. Until Sept. 1, when the game will be concluded.

Earlier in the day the Cards whipped the Pirates 7-4 for Mort Cooper's 12th triumph.

The Curfew Rang

At Boston the Massachusetts Sunday curfew stopped the second contest of the three-game series between Brooklyn Dodgers in the midst of a Boston rally in the sixth inning. The Braves had just scored three runs to tie the count at 4-4 and had the bases loaded with one out when play was halted. That will be the situation when play is resumed at an unspecified later date. The Dodgers bagged the first game in the 11 innings.

The other two games that must be completed were "suspended" as the result of rules after they presumably had been completed and already had been entered in the standings.

The American League has no such rule and records showing in the standings today will count — very likely because the Yankees need the runs for Nick Testa.

Yanks Triumph

The Yanks yesterday swept a doubleheader from Philadelphia Athletics to extend their winning streak to eight games and 13 victories in 15 starts. Bill Dickey's 3-run home-run homer helped warp up the first game, 5-3, for Hank Borowy and the Yanks struggled to a 6-3 victory in the finale to clinch the nightcap for Spud Chandler's 11th victory.

Washington's stout-hearted Senators, in second place, kept the pace by taking a double-header from Boston 9ed Boy 9-3 and 5-4. Cleveland Indians split even, 5-3 and 4-3, with Ken Keltner's 6-run homer in the first game and Louis (Bobo) Newsom making an unsuccessful comeback to the Browns in the nightcap and gaining batted out in the third inning.

In the other American League clash yesterday, Detroit divided a doubleheader with Chicago White Sox, taking the first game 13-4 with an 18-hit attack and dropping the second 4-1 to Johnny Humphries' pitching.

Giants Win Two

In the National League Chicago Cubs crushed Cincinnati Reds twice, 3-1 and 10-3 to vault into fifth place.

The Giants topped the Phillies twice 10-6 and 3-2.

In Saturday's National League games, the Giants and Phillies divided a pair, the Phillies sweeping the first 2-1 and the Giants the second 8-7 by virtue of a 7-run rally in the ninth inning. The Cubs nail hosed out the Cubs 6-5, Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis 4-3 and the Brooklyn headed off the Braves 7-5.

In the American League, Chicago White Sox won 3-2 over Detroit in the first game of a doubleheader but lost the second 5-0, New York nosed out the Athletics 3-2 and St. Louis defeated Cleveland 2-1 and Washington shut out Boston 3-0.

To commemorate 50 years of horse racing in Canada, the Hamilton Jockey Club is setting the stage for a Golden Jubilee meeting to open Saturday, July 31, and to continue through Aug. 7. A feature for the occasion is the $5,000 Golden Jubilee Handicap, distance one mile and a sixteenth for three-year-olds and up, foaled in Canada.

Jersey City Gets 19th Shutout, But Nothing New

In 1909 and 1919 Little Giants Blanked No Less Than 24 Times

TORONTO SPLIT

The dubious honor of shattering the 19-year-old record for baseball shutouts may go to the tailend Jersey City Giants in the International League this year.

Held to five and three hits, respectively, by two freshman southpaws, Mike Sobalis and Arnold Carrier, the Little Giants yesterday suffered their 18th and 19th whitewashing of the year in losing a doubleheader to Syracuse Chiefs, 6-0 and 3-0.

Jersey City now is within striking distance of the record of 36 shutouts defeats dealt Montreal way back in 1908. In any event Gabby Hartnett's club seems certain of being the first International team to get blanked 20 times during the season since Toronto was shut out 20 times in 1940.

It is a new experience for a Jersey City club to be whitewashed. In 1909 and 1919 the Little Giants were blanked 24 times in a full season's play.

Montreal Royals whipped the listless Toronto Maple Leafs 10-3 in the first game of a twin bill and moved a step closer to a double triumph by scoring five runs in the first inning of the nightcap. But Manager Dixie Walker's relief staff pie and Lee Gamble who pounded out a three-run spree, spiraled for six runs in the fourth and went on to a 9-5 victory and a split. Bob Chipman held the Leafs to seven hits in the opener.

Newark rapped five Baltimore pitchers for 16 hits and a 10-4 victory in the first game of a baseball bill, but Ed. Kleiman gave the Orioles a 5-3 decision in the nightcap, 6-4, for his 17th victory of the season.

Buffalo and Rochester also divided a doubleheader, Buffalo outslugged the Red Wings in the opener, 10-6, but dropped the second game, 2-1, as the visiting Jim Bagby chinson chalked up his 10th triumph of the year. The nightcap was aided by Al Schoendienst's homer.

Kay Kotchman's single in the ninth took a doubleheader from Buffalo, 6-5 in 11 innings, but the Bisons won the second. Rochester defeated Montreal 8-2 and Syracuse won 4-3 over Jersey City. Pervant turned back Baltimore 5-3.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

Ingersoll (CP)—National Selective Service regulations became a question for sport to unravel Saturday when Waterloo Tigers protested an inter-county baseball game at Ingersoll, which they won 8-3 anyway, because the local Commando used Private Ed Wilson, the Tigers had previously signed at Waterloo. The defence of manager Ralph Beemer was that the player had been transferred to Tillsonburg under the manpower draft and could turn out with the Ingersoll team.

Old Orchard Beach, Me. (CP)—Grand circuit racing moved here for the opening of a three-week meeting today on a track built upon a long peat bog, giving it a lightning-fast surface for the horse-drawn sport. Purses will be the $5,000 Hambletonian test stake Aug. 4.

Winnipeg, (CP) — Defeating 19-year-old Emile Esmond Chabot, Ont., Allan Boss, of Winnipeg Saturday won the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship for the second time in three years against the same opponent.

Detroit (CP)—Lack of manpower because of the war was given as the reason for the retirement of the University of Detroit from college football after 1943 year. The decision was announced yesterday by Jack Kelly, director of athletics. The Titans have joined about 200 other college teams in retirement for the duration.

Toronto (CP)—After being extended to the 20th hole by Norm Himes of the Kitchener-Waterloo Club in the semi-final for the Canadian P.G.A. golf championship, Bob Gray, of Toronto Scarboro went on to defeat his fellow townsman yesterday afternoon by taking Lex Bishop, of Fergus, one up. Gray defeated the six-time winner of the title by holing out the course in 69, four under par.

New Westminster, B.C. (CP)—The far-famed Balmonbellies of New Westminster, victorious in league and all-Canadian lacrosse championships for four consecutives are apparently on their way to another title, with prospects of clashing again with eastern contenders. Saturday night they overcame Richmond 16-14 in a crucial contest.

Bob Gray, of Scarboro qualified to meet Norm Himes of Kitchener in the semi-final today at Islington Golf Club for the Miller Trophy competition by eliminating the Kerr brothers, Sam and Bill, in the second and quarter-final rounds yesterday. The defending champion defeated Bill 6 and 5 in his last outing and the pair of Himes, meanwhile, won from Bob Burns of Weston, one up.

Sport Is To Be Great Factor In Bringing People Together, Says Athlete Lord Burghley

By The Canadian Press

"After the war, sport will be a great factor in bringing the people of the British Empire closer," Lord Burghley, former great English athlete, during a farewell luncheon at the South Pacific where he is on an official tour as controller of supplies and repairs in the British Ministry of War Transport.

Lord Burghley, who was Britain's winner of the 400-metre hurdle event at the 1928 Olympic Games at Amsterdam, Holland, predicted a comeback for the Olympic sports which, he said, would help bring about a better understanding among peoples because "the principles behind athletic competition remain the same."

The Olympic Games, he asserted, would be instrumental in helping to unite the world together. Lord Burghley, incidentally, had recently passed through Canada on his way to the South Pacific battle area aboard a British bomber which had flown across the Atlantic, then droned over the Pacific.

The opposition could not force Gunder Hagg, Swedish speedster, to step to a new mark in the one-mile special at San Francisco Saturday with the touring Scandinavian runners. Lord Luck, at 1:54 1-3, or eight seconds slower than his own best time, did not bother near the hoped-for four-minute mile. During the 220 yards of the taps, Hagg took time to wave to the cheering crowd of 15,000.

The triple entry of John Marsh, Chicago turfman, failed to make a clean sweep of the $60,000 Arlington Futurity at Washington Park Saturday but did gain the first two places when Jerabad, streaked to the lead half a length ahead of the more-favored Occupy, with Alsab, the Cleveland horse, third. The time for the six furlongs on the heavy track was 1:14 1-5.

Mis Excellency, favored horse to win the Goldsmith Maid trot, value at $5,765, in Grand Circuit racing at North Randall Saturday, could do no better than second to Scotland's Comet although it required four heats for the decision. His Excellency, world trotting champion of 1943, thus suffered his first defeat in three starts this season.

Posting a great 154 for the 36 holes, Adjutor Dussault of the Royal Quebec Golf Club captured the 16th annual renewal of the Manoir Richelieu Shield competition for amateurs Sunday, repeating his victory at Murray Bay in 1941. Jacques Amyot and Julian Hissink, both of Royal Quebec, tied with 156 but Amyot won the toss for second place.

A horse that had been left at the post in the $7,000 Fleetwood Handicap at Jamaica Saturday afterwards kicked the jockey, forcing the rider to cancel his mounts in the last two races. The horse, owned by Johnny Longden, the Western Canadian, and the equine was With Regards, by Alsab—Delphine Grimes. Longden was unsaddling the horse in the finishing line when it suddenly let go for a near-kick at William Woodward's Apache won the race.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Here Comes Mr. Jordan"

The greatest comedy in motion picture history, great because it depicts completely from the basest back, bedlam it possesses hilarious imagination and a background of deep emotion, because its actors and the characters they play are magnificent and memorable—opened today at the McCarthy theatre. The film is Columbia's sensational "Here Comes Mr. Jordan."

Robert Montgomery, in one of the most unusual roles ever brought to the screen, is superbly starred in the amazingly amusing fantasy comedy. Appearing in major support are Claude Rains, Evelyn Keyes, James Gleason, Rita Johnson, Edward Everett Horton and John Emery. The film was directed by Alexander Hall, from a screen play by Sidney Buchman and Seton I. Miller.

"Here Comes Mr. Jordan" is a motion picture filled with bright fun with romance and thrills. Its hilarity is predicated upon a situation which, while it bears re-telling now and for years to come, should really be seen to be fully appreciated. The McCarthy theatre, in presenting the surprising, sensational screen story, urges its patrons to obtain the fullest enjoyment of the film by seeing it from the very beginning; with this, we heartily concur.

2nd feature attraction presents George Raft, Hungarian actor, with Jane Bryan and William Holden in "Invisible Stripes."

AT THE BELLE

"HELLO, FRISCO, HELLO"

These are the days when moviegoers the nation over want pleasant diversion. They want to be entertained — carried away for a couple of hours from the work and worry of the strain we all share. With this in mind, we recommend a trip aboard for the spy new Technicolor musical which opened Saturday at the Belle. Theatre. "Hello, Frisco, Hello."

All the elements that make up outstanding entertainment were carefully assembled in "Hello, Frisco, Hello" and the results are most pleasing to the eye and ear. Picture this: a cast topped by Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie and Lynn Bari, set to foot-tapping music, filmed in resplendent Technicolor and produced in a lavish story — and you have some idea of the entertainment contained in "Hello, Frisco, Hello."

The music is tops; a lively combination of something old and something new delivered by the top songstress in all Hollywood, Alice Faye. Included among the songs are such favorites as "Gee, But It's Great To Meet a Friend From Your Home Town," "Lindy Lou," "Hello, Frisco, Hello" and "I'm Always Pick On Me." A new number, destined for the No. 1 spot in national popularity, is "You'll Never Know." Set to the song lyrics by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren.

"Hello, Frisco, Hello" is Alice Faye's first film in over a year and her many admirers will be glad to see that Alice enthusiastically gives her heart in every song.

The story of the film is set in the Barbary Coast in old San Francisco. A group of free entertainers are struggling for recognition, and on the frame-work of their adventures are hung the many production numbers. Alice Faye is the tempting singer of the town. She starred the torch for John Payne — who was born on the wrong side of the town! Jack Oakie is slosy for comic relief, which he gets by the barrel, while Lynn Bari is present and accounted for. She doesn't sing or dance one but brother, she doesn't have to!

Completing the features cast are Laird Cregar, June Havoc, Ward Bond and George Barbier. Directed by Bruce Humberstone has breathlife into the Technicolor musical, working from a script prepared by Helen Eiffe, Robert Ellis, Logan and Richard Macauley. Producer Milton Sperling, 1st Lieutenant, U.S.M.C.R. has spared no effort in making Hello, Frisco, Hello, on outstanding picture.

The Belle news of the world, a color cartoon featuring Frankenstein's Cat, and a new edition of the March of time, "The Fighting French" complete the program.

"Desperate Journey"

"Desperate Journey", Warner Bros.' stirring new success, now at the Capitol theatre, Errol Flynn and Ronald Reagan, the pictures tells the story of how an R.A.F. bomber crew, forced down in the Nazi heart, Nazi-land, gunned, tramelled, fought their way to safety and England.

The only important feminine role in the film is played by Nancy Coleman, who has scored such a success in "Kings Row" and "The Gay Sisters." She is cast as a member of the German Underground who rescues the R.A.F. fire embattled flyers.

"Mountain Rhythm"

The Weaver Brothers and Elviry, yodels-hokum-band comedy in the entertainment world, were head-liners when many of the current day favorites were but unknowns.

Among the present day radio favorites who were billed at one time, along with the Weaver Brothers and Elviry starring vaudeville act were Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, and Judge Berges and Charley McCarthy.

Under contract to Republic Studios, the Weaver Brothers and Elviry have brought to the screen the same type of uproarious rural comedy on which their vaudeville success was based. "Mountain Rhythm," the added hit is now at the Capitol theatre.

Lynn Merrick and Joseph Allen, Jr., have the romantic leads, while the ever-popular Sally Payne enacts a comedy characterization.

In Technicolor, "Hello Frisco, Hello," is set to be the musical hit to open the screen this season. Starring Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie, Lynn Bari and Jane Hamilton.

"Hello Frisco, Hello," is already hit the screen this season. Starring Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie, Lynn Bari and Jane Hamilton.

"Hello Frisco, Hello," is already hitting many cases of neurosis, that condition in which the patient thinks or fears he has an ailment when no real ailment is present. Because responsibilities have come to these patients, they have shouldered these responsibilities while doing so have not had time to think about their own ailments.

There are still, however, a number of individuals who "enjoy" poor health and have this as an excuse for not shouldering their responsibilities, or in order to get the sympathy and attention of the family. In the Journal of the Tennessee Medical Association, Dr. Ruth L. Bond, Philadelphia, presents various interpretations of this condition which is called hypochondriasis. Hypochondriasis acts in a different manner to neurosis in that instead of shouldering their responsibilities and forgetting their symptoms, these patients try to avoid responsibilities and exaggerate their symptoms.

Dr. Bond points out that the problem of the hypochondriac has assumed greater significance because of the fact of competition for illness and attempts at army draft evasion, in addition to the usual or commonplace use of illness to have their own way in any particular circumstance or to satisfy forbidden desires.

One psychiatrist-(Stephen) states that the illness of the hypochondriac which the patient describes so fully, gets its start in some conflict in early childhood between instinctive craving and the disappointing realities of life. Another psychiatrist (Adler) states that neurotic individuals use illness as a shield for a feeling of inferiority and for inability to succeed in normal competitive society. Another suggestion is that the cause of hypochondriasis is that it is the effect of anxiety—chronic fear.

However, Dr. Bond points out that not only must the psychiatrist be interested in such cases but also the general practitioner and the surgeon, the general practitioner because he may see the interplay between mind and body and the surgeon because he may thus realize the deeper meanings of pain.

Because of "the wish to fall ill", some of these hypochondriacs are willing to go to hospital for lengthy stays, and willingly undergo unnecessary surgical operations.

The Wish to Fall Ill

Physicians are finding that while the war aggravates true nervous ailments, it is really responsible for curing many cases of neurosis, that condition in which the patient thinks or fears he has an ailment when no real ailment is present. Because responsibilities have come to these patients, they have shouldered these responsibilities while doing so have not had time to think about their own ailments.

There are still, however, a number of individuals who "enjoy" poor health and have this as an excuse for not shouldering their responsibilities, or in order to get the sympathy and attention of the family. In the Journal of the Tennessee Medical Association, Dr. Ruth L. Bond, Philadelphia, presents various interpretations of this condition which is called hypochondriasis. Hypochondriasis acts in a different manner to neurosis in that instead of shouldering their responsibilities and forgetting their symptoms, these patients try to avoid responsibilities and exaggerate their symptoms.

Dr. Bond points out that the problem of the hypochondriac has assumed greater significance because of the fact of competition for illness and attempts at army draft evasion, in addition to the usual or commonplace use of illness to have their own way in any particular circumstance or to satisfy forbidden desires.

Toronto, July 19. (CP)—A couple of weeks ago Mr. Copps of the Thamdina Press took his life in his hands by commenting, in print, that women sport fans are "nuisances". Complaints came to Dorothy Vic in his moment of peril by repeating his observation. Dorothy say that the girls have a champion —Sid Cole of the Guelph Mercury who says he's spectators can be a great deal more obnoxious than the girls and probably is the reason for this fact is that they generally know a little more about the ins and outs of the game they are watching than do the feminine members of the audience". But even Sid admits that the female fan is not a bit of a trial at times. He revives the story of a woman hockey fan watching a referee at Guelph and winding up with: "Hey there, Sonnabee, you bum! Get your glasses. If you were my husband, I'd poison you!"

"Yeah lady", replied the ref, "and if you were my wife I'd take it."

Let Scotch Do It

A story is going the rounds about the Goderich, Ont., baseball manager who, having confidence in his veteran sluggers, sent his nine-year-old son "Butch" in to pinch hit in the ninth inning of a senior game with Chatham. Butch was so excited that he struck out but got a strike over all the youngster added. The manager switched in a fast base-runner who stole second and third. A single scored the winning run.

Sticklemality!

Pete Richardson, centre forward of the Vancouver Pro-Rec soccer team, has been the hot-shot scorer on the coast for a year. In 13 district league games he scored 21 goals and added another 16 in 11 cup matches, giving him a total of 37 goals for 24 games. Jack Park of the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder hasn't given up hope for hockey next winter even though the army has him. Ralph, who was a hockey there, Park says the famous old Cornwall Flyers name may be revived for a certain team which would include say available players in the district, adding that Lieut. Ralph McGrath, formerly of Cornwall Flyers and Brockville, was the first Canadian to be killed during the Allied surge into North Africa. With the army's loss, Ralph was attached to a United States tank corps, for the occasion.

CHAPTER 13

Perhaps of all people only he knew Clare. But what was there to know about Clare that her old friends did not know? She was beautiful and charming and vital. She could tell a story well and make a home delightful and, as an excellent party, She liked men and was by them exceedingly attractive to them. But were there depths in her that only Payne knew? Certainly he was not the kind of man' to permit his wife unlimited freedom. His authoritative air, the firmness of his face and the working of his mind proved that. She suspected that he was a fiercely possessive man of those he loved, wanting possessiveness in return. A man's man, he was also a woman's man. He would not live well without love and a woman. The month that was at once exhilarative and sensuous proved that. Did he then love her as much that he cared not what she did as long as she lived with him? She did not believe that either. He would care enormously about the reputation of his wife and the goodness of his name.

Presently he said and there was a hint of sadness in his voice, "This is the pleasantest night I've had on your island, Meegan."

"Some of the pleasantest nights I've had on the island have been here."

He looked at her and smiled his slow smile. "You're too modest, I mean that the credit goes to you for making it so. But I really must be getting along." I imagine that Clare is home by now."

"I'm sorry you're going and thank you for helping me out."

They arose together.

Payne said, "Don't make it sound as though I did something important."

She smiled, "Do you think you'll find the road back all right?"

"If I can't, I'll be ashamed to show my face on a horse again."

"I wish you'd told me some of your experiences."

"Do you? I'm sorry, I always think that people who make you listen to their holiday experiences are a bore. And anyway you can't make Africa picturesque in a blogmans. Words don't do it justice. You're not, by any chance, afraid to stay alone until your mother or Toby comes?"

"Well then, good-night, Meegan."

"Good-night, Payne."

He turned and walked over the lawn as though he knew his surroundings well. Gradually he became one with the darkness and she could hear his footsteps no more. It seemed to her that she could hear only the wild beating of her heart.

She was inside washing the glasses when Toby came in. He came in in a rush as though he were glad to be home and he looked more disheveled than she had ever seen him. His white coat and dark trousers were wrinkled and a lock of his dark hair had dropped over his tired forehead. Impatiently he straightened his tie and pushed back his hair. He took a deep breath of infinite relief.

"We made it," he said. "Thanks. I suppose it sounds crazy to you. You think we we: just trying to pull something over on Payne. But there's more to it than that. I've never been so scared in my life."

"What was there to it? Were you in an accident?"

"Not exactly. Look here, I can't tell you because I promised and wouldn't. I had to swear by all that's good and holy I wouldn't. It is all right, I guess, I mean I didn't have anything to do with it and I'm not trouble with anybody. I meant to tell you. I thought Clare deserved an explanation. But after I talked to you I promised I wouldn't tell anyone. I'd sort of like to forget the whole thing, if you don't mind."

"You seem quite . . . well, subdued, Toby."

He shook his head. "You'd be too. I think you're swell for doing what you did and I'm sorry I can't open up."

Meegan turned from the sink. "There's something strange going on in Clare's house. And you know what it is. Miss Willoughby isn't a secretary, but never seen a secretary look as she does. If Clare had a secretary, she wouldn't look like Miss Willoughby."

He looked at her with a frown. "You're not so dumb, are you? But as I said I wouldn't tell."

They ha' not heard the car stop or their mother walking to the house. Eve came in, blinking a little light and lifting her small white hat carefully from her waved hair. She smiled sweetly at them.

"I couldn't imagine why there was a light on in the kitchen."

Toby said, "We had a drink while we were waiting for you."

"Isn't that nice! Oh, dear! I'm so tired. I've had a perfectly lovely time. I saw the most interesting picture. I don't want to forget it. I want to tell it to Payne. Where is he?"

Toby chided, "Peep he said, "Is there anything to be done except date tomorrow?"

Elinor McBain laughed. Why darling, what's come over you? You mean you're going to be home to-morrow?"

"Yes, I thought I'd stick around for a change."

"Let's not talk about it until then, dear. I don't want my present mood destroyed."

And Meegan, drying her hands, was thinking that whatever had happened tonight in Clare and Toby or between them he did not know, and to see her tomorrow That was why he had looked glad to be home again.

Then the house was dark and the doors locked. she heard Toby in the next room striking matches to successive cigarettes and also the sound of his bare feet as he walked back and forth across the floor.

Adele was sitting with her long brown legs crossed under her on rear the tennis courts. She wore her customary practical but unconcious costume for the game—a pair of blue shorts with a white cotton blouse. Seeing Meegan's slight, neat figure in white approach, Adele's dark eyes mustbe in her agile body and lean, ugly face seeming to lighten.

She said, "Hi! Have you dried out yet? I am tired of sitting. How goes it with you, pal?" But she was thinking other things.

It still is little early," Meegan said, She was very sleepy indeed and had a full day ahead with two trips to the beach with the children. Let's start playing. I have only an hour, you know."

They played several games hard and well. In sports Adele ceased to be lazy and gauche and became a fleet, graceful person with a perfectly co-ordinated body. In years gone by she had often played on a gallery and heads had turned first to the delicate, fair figure of Meegan to the fleet, dark, muscular Adele. Adele won this morning as she usually did. She played as though she were something to be avenged with a deadly accuracy. She went to the judge's of the big tree and dried their faces.

"Game was swell," Adele said, "I thought I'd be rusty. You have time for a cigarette, haven't you? Oh, I forgot. You've stopped. Well, sit down and get your breath, I'm winded."

Meegan sat down on the grass, stretching her legs before her, hoping that Adele would not want to talk about Clare. But if Adele did not talk about Clare and the fact Jerry might have had, she had nothing to talk about. Darling Clare and loving Jerry filled her life. They were the essence of her.

Enjoy These Poems That Are Immortal Love Lyrics

Great Love Poems

"O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear! your true love's coming.

That was sing both high and low; Trip no farther, pretty sweeting; Journeys's end in lovers' meeting. Every wise man's son doth know."

—Immortal love words written by William Shakespeare on "Sweet-and-twenty" words that have lasted several hundred years and are still read today with as much enjoyment as when they were written.

Our 32-page booklet explains nothing but immortal poems based on the ageless theme of love-songs that have come down through the ages, as well as songs of recent times—all have delighted many listeners. They're immortal love songs.

Many will recall Lord Byron's lovely poem:

"She walks in beauty like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies:
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellow'd to that tender light
Which Heaven to gaudy day denies."

RAID GIVES

Troops and Railways

In addition to hunting German and Italian troops, Rome is an important centre for railways which transport troops and supplies from the northern area to the defence lines south of Rome.

There are also numerous industrial targets in the city's outskirts and on the Campagna Romana, the plain which surrounds the city for a radius of 30 miles.

This outer industrial ring includes a number of minor aircraft bombs, chemical works, rayon factories and gas and water works. Six big railway stations and a railway repair shop are located in the centre of Rome. Large military barracks are ranged along both sides of the Tiber.

East of Rome in Tivoli, site of an important military airdrome, and Civitavecchia, a city completely devoted to aviation, Southward is Centocelle airfield and five miles north is a large civilian airport.

Municipality R.R. Yard Other Target

The brief communique announcing the raid said:

"Railway objectives in Rome and its vicinity have been bombed today by heavy bombers and medium bombers of the Mediterranean Air Command. The marshalling yard was the principal target. It is of the greatest importance to the Axis war effort and in particular for the movement of German troops.

"Leaflets also were dropped over the city during the raid. Pilots and bombardiers employed on this mission were particularly instructed to avoid damaging religious and cultural monuments."

Mention of "the vicinity" of Rome apparently meant the attack was directed against outlying targets.

Opponents of the bombing of Rome were not without recruits even in Britain. Frequent questions have been asked in parliament indicating concern over the propriety of such a move. Some individuals spoke out openly against it.

Eden's Reply

Mr. Eden's reply always was the same:

"No one twisted Signor Mussolini to attack France, and no one invited him to send bombers to bomb London."

It was recalled that the United States also never had given any assurances against bombing the city beyond President Roosevelt's promise to Pope Pius upon the invasion of Sicily that "churches and religious institutions will to the extent that it is within our power to spread the devastations of war during the struggle that is ahead.

The fact the raid was made in broad daylight testified to the Allies' intention to select military targets carefully and avoid damage to shrines of Roman and Christian civilization.

Vatican City's Location

Vatican City lies in west Rome, opposite a prominent bend in the Tiber and only a quarter of a mile from one of the city's six railway stations.

The central station lies in the heart of the city within a few blocks of the ministries of war, air, interior and finance.

The city's biggest freight yards are vital links in Italian communications to Sicily from the industrial north, and the Brenner Pass route from Germany. The attack would thus be tied in closely with the Sicilian campaign.

These freight yards have been declared by Italian commanders themselves to be military zones. They are the type of target which would be shelled by artillery if land forces were within range of Rome.

As a further testament of their sincerity, the Allies issued and trained special crews to undertake the bombing.

Enemy Interference Might Upset Aim

It was observed in London, however, that interference from enemy fighters might upset the aim of even the cleverest of pilots and bombardiers and no guarantee could be given that non-military targets would not get hit.

Exist Precautions Taken

Such precautions never had been taken by any belligerent to avoid harm to civilian establishments. It was observed that the bombing of Warsaw, Rotterdam, London, Coventry, and Belgrade obviously were indiscriminate, and no claim ever has been made by British authorities that workers of the Ruhr failed to suffer in air-raids night after night.

The indications that the Allies apparently issued the communique even before the raid was completed testified they did so to beat the Axis to the draw and to present their side of the picture to the world ahead of the enemy propaganda.

The bombing was no reprisal lit-for-tat raid.

In April, 1941, Prime Minister Churchill warned the Axis that if Athens or Cairo were bombed Rome also would be attacked. Rome were dropped on a few months later on Cairo, but there was no reprisal.

Pravbee Mae Renew Campaign

The bombing of Rome was expected to renew the campaign by Gen. Francisco Franco of Spain — who presumably is Axis inspired — to halt the Allies blasting of Axis cities. He has been attempting to imply that Rome had the status of the city of the Vatican. This never has been conceded, although the Pope has deplored the bombing of civilians on both sides.

The bombing of Rome probably will be received with no greater cheers anywhere than in Malta, whose own ancient monuments have been battered day in and day out by unrelenting Axis bombers based on Sicilian soil.

In Malta the cry of "Bomb Rome" has been heard oftener than any where else.

The closest that Allied bombers had come to Rome previously were attacks on Cettia and Frumicina, about 10 miles southwest of Rome. In May a sharp attack was made on Lido di Roma, near Ostia and about 15 miles from Rome.

City Population Trebled

Thousands of refugees from Allied bombings in the north and south, apparently believing Rome immune from attack, have flocked to the capital in recent weeks, causing serious housing and food problems.

It has even been estimated that the normal population of close to 1,000,000 has been almost trebled.

Report Released Before Attack Started

Bombs were away — dropping on their targets — in broad daylight at 11:15 a. m. (5:15 a. m., E.D.T.)

(The bombing was announced by the U. S. War Department in Washington at 1:30 a. m., before the bombers had time to return.

(An Algiers radio broadcast at 2 p. m. — 8 a. m., E.D.T. — said the bombers were just then coming back.

A CBS commentator, at a broadcast from Algiers recorded by The Associated Press, said Rome "is ready to surrender the attack was started yesterday."

It was the first time in this war that a report on a bombing was released before the attack actually started. Correspondents were given the information at 11 a. m. — 7:15 bomb bay doors were opened for the lead flight of the Allied planes. Five minutes later and the radio operators on the flight informed headquarters instantly.

To Discount Axis Propaganda

The reason was to forestall or discount a flood of Axis propaganda claiming Rome had been bombed indiscriminately, with lurid and fantastic tales flashed to Roman Catholic countries over the world.

Rome is barely 300 miles from advanced Allied air bases and Mussolini and his Fascist chieftains are reported to have lived in terror of a bombing of their capital since the turn in the fortunes of war in the Mediterranean.

The Fascist chieftain is reported to have had several different headquarters arranged in various parts of Italy, but his main office remained in the capital.

The pilots, navigators and bombaimers who made the attack were hand-picked from among thousands, selected for special qualities in which their military efficiency was only one, and then went through intensive weeks of training by Allied intelligence experts who had lived for years in Rome.

Memorized Large Map

They memorized a large map of Rome to be sure of their targets.

They had to take all these precautions because Mussolini had built up a big war machine virtually in the shadow of Vatican City.

The Pope's residence is about five miles from the big Rome railway freight yards where bombs were dropped and the Roman Forum is even closer, about three miles.

The Allied bombers also struck at mainland airfields of Italy at Centocelle and Ciampino Pontiglian Saturday night, dropping explosives in strings on runways and buildings, it was announced. In direct support of the British 8th Army moving up the Sicilian east coast objective fleets of aircraft blasted at Catania and Randazzo, key communications centre across Mt. Etna from Catania.

WOODCRAFT SCHOOL TURNS CANADA'S SOLDIERS INTO SKILLED WOODSMEN

Fifty miles from Pembroke, Ont., at Venne Depot in the Quebec woods, the Canadian Army operates a school of woodcraft where soldiers, N.C.O.'s and officers learn how to live in the bush. Every phase of woodcraft is covered in a course operated under skilled bush instructors. This class of soldiers and N.C.O.'s is being taught how to place a springpole snare for small game — handy to a soldier who might be forced to live off the land in wooded country. The instructor is Lieutenant Robert Brunelle of Dusk Lake, Sask.

The crooked knife — "the knife that opened the continent," according to skilled woodsmen — is in the hands of Lt. Brunelle. In the tool with which backwoodsmen as well as soldiers when lost in the bush. The Army's woodcraft course at Venne Depot is operated by Quebec woods.

Putting their theory into practice, Sergt. P. Huard of the Regiment de Quebec (left) and Lieut. J. J. Denlper of the Regiment de Levis, set a spring-pole snare for small game. They are both instructors at the woodcraft at Venne Depot in the Quebec woods where men of the Canadian army learn to be skilled woodsmen.

In the woods you don't have ambulances or trucks to carry casualties or heavy loads. The tump line by which the pioneers packed heavy loads for long distances comes into its own again at the Canadian Army's school of woodcraft. Sergt. P. R.A.F. four-engined Halifaxes and American Liberators hurled tons of explosives upon Reggio Calabria's rail and port facilities early Sunday. The Rome bombing was announced in a brief special communique which emphasized the care taken not to harm cultural and religious structures.

Allied Operations in Mediterranean

Allied air units operating in the Mediterranean theatre destroyed a total of 18 enemy planes yesterday against a loss of four of their own number.

R.A.F. Bostons led the way for American medium bombers in the crushing attack on Catania Saturday night when more than 86 tons of bombs struck the doomed city. They met moderate anti-aircraft fire but no enemy fighters.

The attack on military, industrial and communication objectives within the boundaries of Rome was made in a strong force of Allied bombers whose crews went out with what was described as "most emphatic" instructions to keep wide of Vatican City and the central part of Rome where the majority of religious and cultural monuments are located.

The raiders concentrated particularly on focal points of the Italian rail communications that pass through the Rome bottleneck. Industrial sectors of Mussolini's war machine also came under attack from the powerful air fleet.

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 19 —(AP)— Following is the English translation of the text of leaflets dropped over Rome by Allied airplanes today:

"To the citizens of Rome. You have already been warned that military objectives in the vicinity of Rome are liable to be bombed by the Allied air force.

"When this occurs the Fascist Government, who have consistently concealed from you the facts about the war, will pretend that we are trying to destroy those cultural monuments which are the glory not only of Rome but the civilized world.

"It is possible, moreover, in order to lend plausibility to their lying statements, the Fascist Government or their German associates will themselves arrange that bombs will be dropped on the centre of Rome or even on Vatican City.

"We leave it to your intelligence to decide whether it is likely that we should waste our efforts on targets destruction of which is useless for our purpose.

Military Objectives

We have declared, and we repeat, that we shall be aiming at military objectives — communications, war industries, military installations and airports, all of which are being used for the sole interest of the Germans.

These objectives have been carefully chosen and our pilots have been especially trained in accurate bombing. It is, however, impossible while aiming at military objectives to avoid some destruction of civilian buildings. It is our intention to reduce this destruction to a minimum.

Since our attack will be in daylight you will be able to see for yourselves that these statements are true.

You can therefore conclude that when any bomb drop far outside the target area, it will be the work of the Fascist Government in a deliberate attempt to deceive you.

GEN. SIMONDS

only a major then and in July, 1940, he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel to command the first field regiment of the Royal Canadian Artillery—his own regiment.

From there he went almost rapidly and his appointments included commandant of the First Canadian Junior War Staff course in Britain, general staff officer (1st grade) of a division, brigadier on the General Staff at a corps headquarters, and commander of an infantry brigade of the First Division.

Before his division's personal command he was a brigadier general staff at army headquarters and Gen. McNaughton's chief-of-staff. While he was at corps headquarters he became a good friend of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander of the combined British and Canadian forces in Sicily, and during his Tunisian trip he saw a great deal of this famed British commander.

Gen. Simmonds is a Englishman, born at Ixworth Abbey, Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk. He went to Canada with his family as a child and received his early education at Ashbury College, Ottawa, before going to Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., from which he was graduated in 1925.

Staff College Graduate

He went right into the army then, as an artillery lieutenant, attended a general staff course in England in 1932 and later instructed in gunnery tactics at R.M.C. He also is a graduate of the Staff College at Camberley, England.

This broad military training combined with his own energy and the talent he has demonstrated in the appointments he has filled with army in England, went a long way to fitting him for his present vital command.

Gen. Simonds is a tall, slender officer with black hair and a neat moustache. In general appearance he resembles Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, and even in battle-dress his attire is impeccable. He has the instinctive air of a Guards' officer on neatness, discipline and smartness among his officers and men.

When he is discussing questions with his staff and when he is talking with war correspondents, he speaks rapidly and easily, proceeding quickly and logically from one point to another in his speech in precise and his thinking clear-cut.

Gen. Simonds is not as approachable as some Canadian leaders when you first meet him. There's a reserve—almost a shyness—about him and it takes several meetings before you feel you know him at all.

MUTINIES REPORTED AMONG ITALIAN UNITS

OVER 500 BOMBERS TOOK PART IN ROME RAID

Troops Surrender After Killing German Officers

Allies Stab Deeper Into Central Part Of Sicily—British Pause Near Catania

WEAK RESISTANCE

(By DANIEL DE LUCE)
(A. P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 20 (AP) — American troops are stabbing deeper into Western and Central Sicily against weakening Axis resistance by Italians reported mutinying against German officers, and British forces in the vital battle for Catania have smashed back desperate German counter-attacks. It was announced today.

Canadian and American troops were within artillery range of Enna—Central Sicily stronghold commanding main roads and railroads east and west—and British forces were pounding at the gates of Catania, the prop of all eastern coast defenses.

Front dispatches said U.S. troops had advanced to the outskirts of Agrigento on the southwest coast.

Canadians Advance

Canadian forces advancing north of Piano Armiero were confronted by units of the resuscitated German 15th. Panzer Division, in strong opposition, but they "continue to fight their way forward," it was announced.

"There are many indications of mutinies by Italian troops, commanded by German officers," and hundreds of Italians are surrendering to American troops striking ahead westward, the Allied communique said.

On the smoke-covered Catania plain, British 8th Army infantry guards shattered a series of Nazi tank assaults launched in desperate defence of the great seaport.

With several bridgeheads established over the network of three rivers in the Catania plain, British troops stabbed a big running from the sea westward in the direction of Misterbianco. They were within at least three miles of Catania.

The Herman Goering Grenadier Regiment and Nazi parachute troops used with infantry were thrown into the Catania battle line and suffered heavily, it was reported.

Pause for Knockout Blow

Some headquarters observers did not view the Allied pause outside Catania as a temporary check, but as a planned knockout blow prior to carry through that port to Messina and the Italian coast.

Possibly explaining the wholesale Italian surrenders and reports of mutinies, it was stated that at least half the 35,000 Axis prisoners so far captured were born to fighting.

The U.S. 7th. Army was within 60 miles of Palermo, the leading north coast port of Sicily, and was driving a wedge swath through the heart of the enemy line, encountering "almost no resistance" by Italians, an official statement said.

Mutinies among the Italian units led by German officers was one of the gravest signs yet reported of ultimate Axis collapse in Sicily.

Reports from Allied sources recently have killed German commanders who tried to prevent their surrender.

General Giulio Cesaara Goiti Porcinari, commander of the 54th. Napoli Division, had been captured, the fourth divisional commander to be taken. Gen. Porcinari had been sent back to Sicily as a failure as

Probe Defences

Premier Mussolini and Italy's troops "are gathering strength and armored plating, are probing the defences" of Axis troops strongly established on the foot of Mount Etna to bar the narrow coastal route.

Thus in preparation was a mighty push westward, some observers said, might reach to the Messina Straits almost as quickly as the 8th Army advanced from Cape Passero to the gates of Catania. Once Catania falls there is no strong place for an Axis stand short of Messina.

Catania was again bombed, with one raid starting there over a square block Randazzo northwest of Mount Etna and an enemy concentration point were heavily pounded by 46 tons of bombs.

Fighting at Enna three days behind the actual events — and from there to three days behind front official announcements — today's Allied communique reported the fall of Caltanissetta, the town on Saturday, and Porto Empedocle.

Nowhere on the Allied north sector was the enemy making a determined stand, the Allied troops poured steadily ahead beyond Porto Empedocle at a pace beyond the ability of the official communique to keep up.

Leadership Poor

The shabby record of Italian leaders in the Sicilian invasion, it was reported, probably would continue, since among Italy's commanders still directing forces on the island the were Gen. Zaglio and Chirlcielson, both 'failures in the Ethiopian war.

But the Germans were fighting back-to-the-wall fury and for the present at least were disputing every inch of the Allied advance in lively vicinities.

This performance is akin to their fiery resistance in April in Tunisia, which finally broke through and transformed them into a retreating rabble. The original German garrison of 60,000 troops in Sicily has been seriously depleted in men and armor in the 10 days of battle.

Meanwhile Germans are the backbone of the determined resistance to Gen. Montgomery's

Near Gerbini

(London dispatches said advices from Allied headquarters indicated Canadian troops were closing in on to the vicinity of Gerbini, on the plain 13 miles west of Catania and one of the most important local air bases still in enemy hands. Gerbini is 10 miles south of the initial Allied landings, the invasion beaches having been left far behind the island under control from Porto Empedocle on the southern coast of Catania on the East. Rosa Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, also reported that prisoners taken in the Gerbini area yesterday fighting with Canadians holding at least 5,000 and probably 7,000. The Axis reserves in Sicily were 20,000.

The capture of Enna would split ancient city is the hub of all railway and road communications in Central Sicily. It would be a tremendous step toward exploiting the advance in the centre.

It would also free the Canadians to advance that to date has rolled through many towns, including Pachino, Rosolini, Ispica, Modica, Ragusa, Palazzolo, Vizzini, Grammichele, Scordia, Lentini and Carlentini.

Canadian Unit Advances 30 Miles

Rewarding their efforts, yesterday's Allied communique praised the Canadians for the manner in which they had fought their way north with "skill and determination in difficult country". One unit had advanced more than 30 miles in tenuous region at the amazing pace of 5 miles a day.

Examples of Italian capitulation were witnessed by Jack Bennett, veteran Movietone News cameraman, who arrived in Africa with the Associated Press the Italians simply could not fight on, whole companies abandoned infantry-artillery assault. He said he saw hundreds of Italians walking down the mountain from hillside villages and vineyards with their hands held high, waving their arms frantically in surrender.

Bombers Strike Close to Japan Proper, Pound Enemy Base at Paramushiro

Washington, July 20 — (AP) — The Navy Department announced today that Liberators struck yesterday over the Japanese side of the North Pacific battle line in an arrow pointing of Paramushiro Monday, starting fires and sending up a column of smoke and setting a ship ablaze and damaging.

The big army planes were described as "a formation," which may have been a dozen or so. They approached undetected, Major Japanese base of Amchitka in the Western Aleutians, 1,911 miles and 1,191 miles from Amchitka to Paramushiro.

This is the first raid in which bombers of the American North Pacific force have struck so close to Japan proper.

Paramushiro is at the northern end of the Kurile chain, stretching southward like an arrow pointing to Tokyo about 1,300 miles away. Its airfields and seaplane base are also important.

The big army planes were described as "a formation," which may have been a dozen or so. They approached undetected, Major General Willis H. Hale announced.

The communique announcing the precedent-setting raid also disclosed that the Army Air Forces in the South Pacific Japanese planes destroyed on Canton Island Monday without causing personnel casualties or material damage.

ALLIED BOMBERS POUND MACASSAR MAJOR JAP BASE

Fires Started Along Waterfront and in Factory Area Seen Towering Over City

2,000-MILE TRIP

(By MURLIN SPENCER)
(Associated Press War Writer)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, July 20, (AP)— For the second time since the Japanese overran The Netherlands East Indies, Macassar harbor has been made a daring, long-distance attack on the enemy's big base on Celebes Island.

A great fleet of heavy bombers flew 2,000 miles, round trip, from the staging base in New Guinea, lowering above the big harbor city on Celebes. There was no report on the extent of damage done but some of the fires, started along the waterfront in the factory area and on the airdrome, could be seen 70 miles away.

At the other end of the long flight, Japanese headquarters, Allied troops enlarged their beachhead with a limited advance at Lae, about three miles east of the Japanese key Central Solomons airdrome at Munda. The communique announced Japanese positions around Munda airdrome and at Bairoko on Kula Gulf, while others machine-gunned Japanese on the trails between Munda and Lambeti.

In New Guinea, Allied ground forces cleaned out another Japanese strong point on the slopes of Mount Tambu, near Salamaua, without the aid of Japanese. Allied ground troops were supported by aircraft.

Heavy and medium bombers struck at Kahili and Ballale airdromes in the Buin-Paki area, Southern Solomons, and fighters reports on the heavy blow struck there Monday and on many fighters were shot down against a loss of two Allied planes.

The assault on Macassar caught the Japanese fast-footed. The town was well lighted and there was no anti-aircraft fire. The communique reported.

The first raid on Macassar was in the night of March 9-10. The eight tons of bombs were dropped and the Japanese radio, later heard in Australia, implied heavy damage had been done.

However, if military needs remain static, he stated.

Italy Admits Damage But Makes No Mention Of Military Targets

(By S. C. DANIEL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 20 (AP) — While Axis propaganda beat the drums of indignation against the American bombing of Rome, the official Italian communique acknowledged a "very great damage" in yesterday's attack and placed the toll of victims at 166 killed and 1,658 injured.

"Eleven buildings sacred to faith and science are reported heavily hit and some of them partly destroyed, as well as workers' buildings in the Prenestino and Labicano districts," the communique claimed, but it made no mention of the damage to military objectives.

The bulletin broadcast by the Rome radio declared that the attack by "American formations of hundreds of four-engined planes" lasted three hours and that seven of the attacking planes had been shot down and five are now in Italian fighters.

Italian Statement

Among the places partly destroyed, the communique claimed, were the San Lorenzo Basilica, Verano Cemetery, University City and hospitals of the Policlinic Institute.

A German broadcast quoted a correspondent of the Transocean agency saying that the Allied aerial time bombs dropped by the American 15th Air Force on Rome "have exploded one by one since Monday night."

Another broadcast by the Berlin radio, which reported previously that Pope Pius XII had visited the Basilica immediately after the raid, said that Monsignor Giovanni Battista Montini, Vatican under-secretary of state, had interviewed the American charge d'affaires, Harold Tittman in the Vatican Embassy to the Holy See. Kinsmen Fag Fund List Fluctuates

Belleville boys continue to go overseas, while others, who have been serving in theatres of war for many months, are returning home. For instance recently W. N. Bedford, of this city returned to England and his name is naturally removed from the Kinsmen Club "Fag Fund" for servicemen of Canadian families overseas. Then on the other hand Sgt.-Major Ken Rae, who returned to Canada some months taking a special course, rejoined overseas recently and his name was returned to the Fag Fund list. And so the Kinsmen Club smokes list fluctuates.

This week Chairman Matt Curtis received replies from 30 Belleville boys, all of whom sent personal thanks for fags they have received and expressed hope that the flow of cigarettes would continue, as smokes get more scarce overseas each month. Incidentally Chairman Curtis pointed out today that W. H. Bedford, who returned home this week, was the first name placed on the Kinsmen Fag Fund list when it was inaugurated.

The list of names 'sent individual packages of 300 cigarettes each this week included: George E. Bailey, Kenneth Barrizee, F. G. Belsey, J. D. Bettes, L. B. Bird, Hoore Boyle, J. B. Calbury, Douglas R. H. Carr, M. M. Cole, L. E. Cole, G. H. Cooper, H. Bedford, who returned home this week, was the first name placed before the Kinsmen Fag Fund list when it was inaugurated.

PHONE RECEIVER WAS OFF HOOK

It's merely to prove the alertness of local telephone operators and the splendid co-operation that exists between them and the police and the police department, Late Monday night local telephone operation observed the light flashing on the Provincial Police switchboard, Belleville board indicating a Victoria Ave. subscriber was receiving service. However, when the operator enquired "Number, please," there was no response and the lady at the switchboard somewhat alarmed regarding the failure to get a response the operator immediately contacted city police, who hastened to the home of his call where it was disclosed the occupants had accidentally knocked the telephone receiver from its hook, and placed the call and then placed the phone switchboard. No great harm was done, but it did establish the fine co-operation which exists between the police and telephone company.

Names of 60 Voters Added to List On First Court Sitting

The names of approximately 60 voters were added to the Belleville voters' list on the first day of the election appeal court which is being held at the county court buildings. Appeals were heard yesterday by W. C. Mikel, K.C. Mr. Mikel and S. Gordon Robertson, assistant crown attorney, are holding sittings this week to make corrections and to add names omitted from the list of voters.

Soldiers' proxy votes are coming in very slowly, it was stated by Mr. Mikel. The procedure calls for soldiers to name their proxies who in turn must register with the voters' lists revising officer prior to the election date.

During the initial sitting of the election court, Mr. Justice Gunda, appeared on behalf of R. D. Arnott, Progressive Conservative candidate while Col. Roscoe Vandewater also made a call. The court will sit tonight and for the most of the week.

HUCKLEBERRIES PLENTIFUL STATES VENDOR ON MARKET

"There are lots of huckleberries but it's a mighty poor season for them," one market vendor stated this morning when questioned regarding the scarcity of blueberries on the rocks bordering Mc-Donald's Hill, Thurlow, a hunting ground for berry seekers.

The vendor, however, was one of the few who had a supply available for a market vendor. The fact that fewer residents are picking berries commercially was also given as a reason for the apparent scarcity of huckleberries.

Raspberries appeared slightly lower in price with vendors quoting down to 35 cents the box although a few held out for the former 40 cents figure. Blue raspberries were quoted generally at 25 cents the box.

MOORE FAMILY HOLDS OUTING

More Than 100 Descendants Take Part at Shillibeer and Margaret Moore Forgather

Descendants of Matthew and Margaret Moore held a family reunion picnic at Searles' Beach, Oak Lake, on Sunday, when well over 100 persons were on hand to relive fond traditions and to discuss events of the day. A basket picnic lunch was enjoyed following which the more actively inclined family members had an afternoon of swimming, horse-shoe pitching and ball-playing.

Sole surviving son of the late Matthew Moore, Mr. Augustus Moore of Shannonville was present at the picnic despite the fact he is now in his 90th year. Mr. Augustus Moore was born in Ireland 130 years ago and came to Canada with his parents when he was a baby.

Members of Argylls Going to Camp Will Not Be Able to Cast Votes

Members of the Argyll Light Infantry (Reserve) leaving Belleville on July 30th for their two-weeks' training period at Petawawa will not be able to cast their votes in the Dominion Provincial election, it has been ascertained by R. D. Arnott, Progressive Conservative candidate for West Hastings.

This has been confirmed by Major Alex Lewis, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, who was contacted by Mr. Arnott on the matter. Major Lewis stated the situation was caused by the fact that the official nomination date is not until July 30th—after the date the reserve unit has gone to camp.

Ballots cannot be printed until after the official nominations. Major Lewis stated, and therefore it is impossible to allow the men to vote in advance polls.

Efforts have been made by Mr. Arnott to have a deputy returning officer sent to the Petawawa camp for the convenience of members. Progressive Conservatives will be at the training base on the date of election, but without success. Advance polls will not be set up in Belleville until July 31st, it was stated by Mr. Arnott.

Capt. Ruston Tells of His 45-Years Association With Children's Aid Work

The history of the Children's Aid Society in Belleville dates back to 1893 up until the present with the added responsibilities thrust upon the association through war exigencies, was heard by members of the Belleville Rotary Club on Monday when at their regular weekly luncheon meeting they were addressed by Captain Thomas D. Ruston, superintendent of the Hastings County Children's Aid Society.

Work Started Here in 1894

Children's Aid work in Belleville and Hastings County dated back to 1894, when during its first year's operation only $3.80 was expended, according to Mr. Ruston. At that time the superintendent did all the work. Now the activities have so broadened that a staff of six besides the superintendent is employed and expenditure for this year is estimated at $46,500.

For the past 45 years associated with social work, Mr. Ruston first became interested in the benefiting of conditions for underprivileged children while living at Mid. England, At Liverpool and London he had also been associated in this line of work before coming to Canada 36 years ago. Approximately three years he was named superintendent of the county C.A.S.

Referring to the inauguration of the C.A.S. in this country as "one of the wise bits of legislature ever passed," the speaker indicated that not a government penny, the administration being conducted entirely from funds and donations received from the government toward the supervision of children's aid work, for the organization's operation being raised from private sources.—Legal Aspect

A great deal of misconception as to what the society can do is prevalent, Mr. Ruston declared, according to Mr. Ruston. He intimated that before children can be made wards of the society, it is necessary to show in court that they are not properly provided for by the parents, and no child can be made a ward without the consent given to the municipality to which it belongs.

Shelters in which C.A.S. wards were formerly housed are now confined to be one of three types, the children being placed in foster homes, boarding homes, or taken into the receiving home and then sent out to foster homes where they remain in the ordinary children. A complete report of the child from the time he enters foster and White River.

The final link of the Trans-Canada highway via Geraldton and Nipigon, Ont., was cut out of revenue of Ontario, he said.

Dairies Seek Extra Milk Supplies As Hot Weather Lowers Production

A drop of approximately 30 per cent in milk production during the past ten days, coupled with a considerably increased demand for fluid milk as summer season progresses, has made it necessary for Belleville dairies to make arrangements to have their milk requirements outside their regular sources.

Cheese factory patrons in the Belleville district have been interviewed by milk dealers with a view of getting milk supplies to meet their immediate demands, while arrangements are also being made to have milk shipped in from dairies next winter when another shortage is expected.

Reason for the sudden drop in milk production was given by the exceptionally hot weather during the past month, which has served to dry up the pastures, and to the fact that cows will not go out into the sun to feed when the weather is too hot.

The shortage of milk is general throughout this section of the province with Kingston dairies also be-

Poultry Shelter Shortage

Speaking of the expected shortage of fluid milk this summer, Belleville dairy operator predicted a shortage in this centre such as has not been seen for the past 30 years. "And I have been in the business for more than 30 years," he added.

Considerable increase in the demand for milk had been seen during the past week, with coffee rationing, it was stated. Also restaurants made heavy demands for pint glass bottles on weekends when "hippies of chocolate milk are served.

In the past three years fluid milk consumption in Canadian dairies had increased from 18,000 to 26,000 hippies daily, it was stated. This means an additional 8,000 hippies for more than 30 years.

More Cows Expected

The fact that American buyers had been buying up some of the best milch cows in the district was held responsible for some of the present shortage. High prices paid by the American dealers is an inducement to Canadian farmers to part with their stock. In one instance a district farmer was reported to have

NIXON PRAISES ONTARIO FINANCES

Says Completion of Highway out Northern Shore of Superior a Post-War Project

Port William, July 20 — (CP) — Premier Harry C. Nixon, Ontario, declared here last night that the completion of the highway linking the north shore of Lake Superior, between the lakehead and Sault Ste. Marie, would be one of the projects to be undertaken as a post-war employment project.

Ontario's finances in recent years have been put in such good shape that "we can now assist the Dominion government in carrying out projects for the post-war period," he declared. The province had decided to build the new highway north from the Sault before the war, and also had started the new road eastward from the lakehead. The highway would be built to one of the highest standard with much of it paved.

Mr. Nixon estimated that as high as 75 per cent of the road would be built between Port Arthur and White River.

The final link of the Trans-Canada highway via Geraldton and Nipigon, Ont., was cut out of revenue of Ontario, he said.

FALL WHEAT, RYE CUTTING BEGINS

Stand of Straw is Very Heavy and Promises Good Yield

Cutting of fall wheat and rye throughout the Bay of Quinte district is now under way, a weekend drive through the district revealed. Several fields of golden tinged wheat were seen here and stooked while the number of stooks indicated that the stand of straw is exceptionally heavy and promising a good yield.

And just a reminder that the summer season is again stepping away, a reminder received here each morning is that of Belleville stated yesterday that the first load of oats of the threshing machine will be gathered. Oats will be cut and be ready for the thresher in that time providing the heavy showers are received, it was stated.

With the promise of a splendid yield of fall grain, early oats are showing good development, while corn is also reported in fine shape and may also show a greater yield than last year. Recent continued wet weather held up seeding operations last spring.

Newsman Finds It Difficult to Keep Up With Canadian's Fast Advance

(By ROSS MUNRO)
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadians in Sicily, July 17 (Delayed) (CP Cable) — Speeding northwest along twisting, dusty mountain roads, Canadian troops now are thrusting into the heart of Sicily.

After the capture of Vizzini, Canadian infantry and armor struck west to capture Grammichele in a short, fierce engagement with a German-Italian force Friday afternoon and press on to occupy Caltagirone, 35 miles west of Augusta.

Now columns of infantry, guns, trucks and tanks are pouring through Caltagirone, blitzed into a London that died by R.A.F. bombings. I drove into Caltagirone in the wake of a Bren-carrier patrol a few hours after the troops marched into the town without meeting any opposition. Canadians were patrolling the streets, watching for snipers and booby traps, and checking on civilians.

Caltagirone is the largest town the Canadians have occupied. It is a rambling mass of grey stone houses with dirty red tile roofs piled on a hill and topped by a beautiful church.

The dirty, dust-choked narrow streets were strewn with concrete and stone rubble. Buildings had been smashed and gutted by fire and bombs raised down by the R.A.F. in the Sicilian blitz ahead of the advancing troops.

Civilians Give "V" Sign

Civilians waved us on here as they have in other towns, giving the "V" sign.

The lightning speed of the advance was beyond all my expectations. It is difficult at times to keep contact. Headquarters are far ahead sometimes several times a day.

While the operations are gathering momentum few of us get more than a few hours sleep a night, bivouacking at dark, then speeding forward in jammed infantry and tanks at crack of dawn.

There is a tremendous concentration of fighting power being driven into the heart of Sicily. The 8th Army really is rolling. In seven days the Canadians advanced more than 70 miles from their landings on the Pachino peninsula.

Textile Powers By

I am writing this by the roadside near Caltagirone and a constant stream of army traffic is pouring past in a screen of dust. Trucks loaded with infantry, Bren carriers stacked with troops, and tanks are churning special billows of dust. There are anti-tank guns, field guns and jeeps by the score.

I bivouacked in a field on the road to Caltagirone. It is cool up in these hills of Central Sicily at night and the troops find the one blanket they carry hardly enough to keep them warm.

But the coolness of the night is a relief from the heat of the day, and most of the troops move practically all the time — anyway. Lengthy sleep is out of the question.

An enemy force was reported ahead and the Canadian Commander made a reconnaissance over high ground before dusk. He could see Axis fires flickering in the valley below.

The Canadian attack was scheduled to start during darkness but when a regiment went up the steep roads to the town they found no enemy there. These Canadians have so far have made a long march in pursuit of the enemy were disappointed that Caltagirone was another pushover occupation.

Few Obstacles in Road

But they systematically went through the town and kept it in order. The commander, pushing his troops along the fastest he can, has received a congratulatory message from the British Commander, Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, which also urged the Canadians to keep it up.

En route to the front I drove into Grammichele and while our jeep was being repaired I heard the story of the fight there. This was the first real engagement the Canadians have had since landing, apart from a few skirmishes coming up the line and constant difficulties with snipers.

The first blown-up roads I have seen are in this area. All the way from the beaches there had been no obstacles apart from occasional poor roadblocks in the path of the Canadians.

Near Grammichele attempts had been made to put craters in the roads with explosives, but the Royal Canadian engineers filled up the holes in short order.

Burned-out Italian trucks are lying like skeletons every mile or so. Some of our troops are driving in a few captured German vehicles.

Munro Hears Story of First Meeting Between Canadians and Nazi Forces

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(Canadian Press War Correspondent)

With Canadian Troops in Sicily, July 18. (Delayed) — (CP Cable) — Canadian troops and German infantry came to grips for the first time in Sicily in the battle which preceded the fall to the Canadian 1st Division of Grammichele, northwest of Vizzini.

Canadian tanks knocked out at least one German mark III tank and destroyed two half-tracks.

(Fall of Grammichele to the Canadians was announced Saturday).

They had occupied Vizzini earlier last week in their drive up through the centre of the front from their landing beaches.

(Today the Canadians took Piazza Armerina.

(Reuters News Agency reported that a composite Canadian-American force in the great central thrust is penetrating mountain country toward Enna following the capture of Piazza Armerina which came after a push through a mountain defile from Catagirone. (The dispatch seemed to mean that the Canadians are filling a flexible role, augmenting British or American troops, or acting alone, as the situation dictates.)

Fort Hope Man Present

In an old garage in Grammichele, Lieut. Herb Long of Port Hope, Ont., told me the story of the fight around this town Friday.

A reconnaissance patrol of 4 tank unit and Bren carriers of an infantry regiment were moving up to the town at a fast clip when they ran smack into the enemy.

There was a small force of German tanks on a hill one-third of a mile west of the town, and German infantry of the Herman Goering Division which had fought in Tunisia for a while, with Italian infantry in Grammichele itself.

This was the first time Canadian and German met in Sicily.

"We were leading the 8th Army up the road near this town when it happened", said Long. "German tanks and half-tracked vehicles with multiple pompoms mounted, opened up on our carriers. Our men returned the fire. Germans and Italians with machine-guns, rifles, mortars and even some artillery.

"Some of our tanks came up and took on the German tanks and half-tracks. I understand one of our tanks was knocked out.

"Then our infantry which had been reinforced by now, rushed Grammichele and cleared out the enemy. A few Germans were killed and a couple taken prisoner, but for the most part they cleared off as we attacked, leaving the Italians. We got about 200 Italian prisoners."

Captures 11 New Tanks

Capt. Bernie Holden of Brockville, Ont., was with Lieut. Long in forward vehicles when they ran into forward Sgt. Jack Whitington of Melbrook, Ont., was one of the N.C.O.'s in this action. Lieut. Rockman of White Plains, N.Y., who went to Regina two years ago with a tank outfit, was commanding the Canadian Reconnaissance patrol which was with the infantry carriers.

Ryckman and his men had to take cover when the shooting started, and they found in the subsequent assault on the town, according to the lieutenant who told me of the tank action at headquarters later.

It was Ryckman who rounded up 10 French 11-ton tanks being used by Italians near Rocolini three days ago. He found them in the harbor guarded by a group of Italians, and captured the lot. The tanks were brand new.

There was plenty of evidence of the Grammichele scrap as I drove along the road. On a hill west of the town there was a charred Jerry tank and two half-tracks blown to pieces by Canadian tank gunners.

Take 7,000 Prisoners

I drove through Grammichele which is a small town, battered by the fighting, and went on to Canadian headquarters where I learned that the total number of prisoners taken by Gen. Guy Simonds' Canadians now has probably reached the 7,000 mark. There is a definite figure of 5,000 and hundreds of other Italians are being rounded up and taken back to camps. Captured enemy booty is mounting, also.

I saw plenty of Breda machine-guns, rifles, ammunition and shells lying about. I met a British officer who had fought in the desert and he said there was "never anything like this in the western desert. The Italians used to put up some kind of a fight but in most cases here they are just surrendering".

A captain from Hazalano, B.C., told me the Germans had dropped paratroops north of , mind to try to stiffen that front but it proved unsuccessful and the paratroopers withdrew.

Navy Volunteer Tells How It Feels To Be 'Blown Up' in Gun Boat

London, July 20 — (CP) — Every navy man has heard the story of the volunteer who signed up one day and went to sea the next, but few naval headquarters said in a press release today, can match the experience of Sub.-Lt. John Motherwell, 21, Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, of Calgary, who reported to a Royal Navy base one morning and was "blown up" the next night.

It began when Motherwell was posted to a Royal Navy coastal Forces base, home of the hard-hitting motor gun boats and motor torpedo boats, as spare officer. He is proud that his most stirring naval experiences centre around the late Lt.-Cmdr. Robert P. Richens, who before his death had established himself as the greatest of all power boat men.

"I was up dressing for dinner and looking forward to a quiet evening in the mess when the boys rushed up and told me there was a flap on," Motherwell said. "The boats were already warming up. Luckily I found myself assigned to the same boat as 'Hitch.'

"We roared off towards the enemy coast. When we were just a few miles off Belgium, suddenly all hell broke loose. Star shells went up and the Germans began to pour lead at us. Some of it was heavy enough to make us think there was a destroyer in the court.

"They had taken us by surprise. It was hot and heavy for a few minutes. We sank one E-boat. I was in the wheelhouse when a Nazi shell hit our ship. I flung myself on the deck. While I was lying there the Oerlikon burst ripped through the sides of our ship and passed about two feet below my nose.

"Then they got our fuel tank. We had lost one of our ships and it looked like a good time to execute on an eight-man Carley Float, but there was absolutely no panic. I admired the coolness of the Royal Navy boys. It was wonderful. In a little more than an hour we were picked up."

Planes from escort carrier blasted a wolf pack in recent action, of which this operation was a part. Note depth charge in LOWER CENTRE about to strike water.

A plane from an escort carrier circles over the spot where a few moments before she gave the death blow to a Nazi submarine during a battle against a wolf pack that marked the voyage of a great convoy in the Atlantic. That's where the women come in. They've got to take over any jobs in the forces they can do. Tell them that. They'll understand. They won't let us down."

Sicilian Morale

What is the state of the morale of the Italian people in the island of Sicily? A report from North Africa states that seemingly incredible reports are coming in at first hand of the broken spirit of the Sicilians. They state that the civilians show their genuine joy over the arrival of the Allied armies. This story is founded on the fact that an Allied officer who read the proclamation of General Sir Harold Alexander announcing the determination of the United Nations to smash Fascism was hoisted to the shoulders of a crowd of Sicilians and borne in triumph through the town while the people said, "This is the day of our deliverance."

For some days there have been stories brought to Allied attention of villagers tearing down the symbols of the Fascist party.

One states the people are expressing bitterness against the Germans whom they blame for the shortage of food and clothing. Mussolini the jackal had evidently been letting Hitler rob Italy.

The Allies brought white bread in their invasion and those Sicilians who had some of it said they were eating the first white bread in eight years. That means Mussolini and his party followers and particularly the war machine which Mussolini hoped to use to crush the people of the world, had robbed the Italians of food and clothes for years even before the war.

Italy has had the opportunity to surrender but of course that goes against the grain of the men at the head of Fascism who have thrived on their country's misery. But if the people should under leadership enforce their will upon the government of Italy or rise and resist Mussolini's aggression, they will be near the day which for Italy will be a blessing, her severance of relationship with thugs and monsters like Hitler and Mussolini and they will find themselves under a benign protection.

As for their hatred of Germany where in all the world should Germany have a friend? She has been of no service to any nation for long ages. She has brought upon the world two disastrous wars. Down through Germany has always been the foe of Italy.

Scorza, Fascist secretary, said Sunday that Italy was in mortal danger. He added that the party of Fascism of course, "They are near the end of their tether and Italy purified by Allied victory or by her surrender will be rescued from her aggressors." The nearer Italy approaches the day of her capitulation the closer she is to a taste of Allied freedom and democracy.

The sawdust Caesar, Mussolini, nears his fate and with him that company of Fascists who have danced to Mussolini's fiddling and murderous antics before the world. The man who would have been a Caesar if he had had his way will end wretchedly. His hour nears. His shame will be that he betrayed Italy to his gang, that he brought it bluster and self-show and dictatorial pomp, he will go down all the ages as the would-be dictator, the subject of world laughter and by others he will appear the modern counterpart of the most renegade and detestable figures in history.

It is no wonder that Sicilian civilians shout for the English and Americans and Canadians and that Italian soldiers surrender.

Course of the War

Time has wrought great changes. There was a time when Hitler looked to himself like a colossus astride the world, with nations scraping at his feet.

Today, Hitler, Mussolini, Tojo are the haunted men, who must read disaster in their future. In none of them is one single redeeming principle. They are the evil men of modern international society and destiny is marking them for their doom. Try and the evils they sought to load upon the world will be erased, rubbed out as they deserve.

Today's bitter feelings are due to the fact that it is not a German - Italian - Japanese compact that is winning the war but the peace-loving nations that would not have been at war but for the unholy ambitions of these three renegade nations of the Axis.

The Allied war in Sicily moves on space successfully, "like the ticking of a clock."

Dewitt Mackensie says of the raid on Monday against military targets in the capital city of Italy, "the bombing of military objectives in the Eternal City of Rome is a signal of Allied determination, and a grim warning to supporters of Mussolini and his gangster ilk that 'all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.'" Care had been taken so that the utmost bombing precision should result, that no religious shrine, no historical and no cultural places should be damaged.

The Russian front is a bitter potion for Hitler for his blitzkrieg is more than matched by the Russian counter-offensive. In the Far East it is the same with Japan which has sustained awy blows to her air and naval power while the Allies are tightening the strangle hold on the whole vast island area.

Mr. Mackenzie compares the situation of Hitler with that of Kaiser Wilhelm who took a tremendous defeat and licking in 1918, though Adolf has never admitted it. Hitler and the Kaiser arrived at crucial defensive positions at about the same period in their campaigns. Actually Adolf is a bit behind the emperor's schedule.

"The First Great War lasted four years, three months and two weeks. The Fuehrer has five months to run to equal that.

"Having been all but knocked out, the Allies of the last war made a miraculous comeback with an offensive which in three months to beat the Boche.

"Hitler at this juncture would seem to be in a position similar to that of the Kaiser in the latter's final months of the war. That is to say, the Emperor was terribly short of resources of all sorts, and he was being compelled to fight on too many fronts."

Mussolini and Tojo no doubt gleefully thought that the Allies could not win when their nations stretched over to the Axis this time. And Hitler must have thought it was a good sign to find criminal nations together for mutual benefit and he probably thought that Germany with the Italians and Japanese and with his own arch treachery and terrorism and brutality could not help but win. But they guessed amiss and now perhaps they are able to see with grave concern that swift defeat is coming to them and that the judgment hall waits for them.

Burying Japs

(Saturday "Review of Literature")

Clark Lee, author of "Behind the Pacific," tells of an officer, very religious, who insisted on reading a burial service over a hundred odd Jap soldiers who fell in a pitched battle on Guadalcanal. Fellow officers didn't relish the notion, but he persisted. "They may be Japs," he said, "but they're dead, and I'm going to give them a decent burial."

In the middle of the service, one of the "corpses" suddenly rose with a grenade in his hand. The officer dropped his Bible, whipped out a gun, shot the Jap through the temple, calmly re-holstered his weapon, and resumed the sermon.

"Lord," he declared, "I said I'd give these Japs a funeral, and that goes for every last one of them! Amen!"

WONDERING

As a youngster looking backward at the turning of the lane,
At the landmarks of his boyhood, which he may not see again,
Since he's off for fame and fortune to the city miles away,
So I turn in contemplation to a bygone summer day.

And I wonder is some youngster sitting where I used to be,
And are the bluegills biting as they used
to bite for me?

Is some happy, barefoot urchin with a bobbin, line and pole
And a can of worms beside him at my favorite fishing hole?
Is that stream as full of thrills with beauty as I thinks it was, today?
Have the song birds left the woodlands
just as I, or did they stay?
Does that youngster sit enchanted underneath that willow tree
And are the bluegills biting as they used
to bite for me?

Is it fact or is it fancy? Was the tinkling of the bells
On the cattle in the distance quite as clear as memory tells?
Is it just imagination, as I backward turn to look,
That has made a stream of splendor of an ordinary brook?
Is some lad as glad as I was back in Eighteen-Ninety-Three?
And are the bluegills biting as they used
to bite for me?,

Early Collapse Of Italy Hinted

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Caught between the devil of Hitlerism and the deep sea of all-out British-Canadian-American attack, the Italian segment of the ill-starred Axis is creaking with portents of utter collapse.

The Allied aerial attack on Rome capped an Allied invasion of Sicily that is sweeping like an irresistible flood over the big island outpost. Its fate is sealed, and, with it, that of all Sicily—and of the near-by Italian "boot" itself from toe to heel.

It has been patent for days in Rome broadcast and Italian press comment that only fear of the Nazi Gestapo is holding revolt in Italy in check. Italian propagandists preaching continued resistance point out no victory hope to the war-sickened Italian people, only the grim idea there is no escape from war even by surrender. German masters would still make it a battleground, they assert.

But the impossible must be far distant when dread of the terrific pounding barrage now on Italy will outweigh even fear of Nazi reprisals upon a weakening war ally.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

ANTI-LAND MINE DETAIL AT WORK IN SICILY

Members of an Allied anti-tank mine platoon in Sicily are shown at one of the most hazardous jobs in modern warfare—that of finding, uncovering and immobilizing land mines sown by the retreating foe to hold up the Allied advance. Thousands of such mines had to be found and rendered harmless as the Allies headed inland after landing on Sicily's beaches.

PACHINO CITIZENS WELCOME CANADIANS IN SICILY

Here welcoming citizens of Pachino, Sicily, gather troops took the town soon after landing on Sicily's about the crew of a Bren gun carrier. Canadian southeastern tip.

That was the psychology of the carefully planned, well executed bombing attack on Rome.

Significant Hint.

Its significance lies in the hint it gives that London and Washington see a prospect of early Italian collapse to pave the way for driven from the Sicilian advance base against the Continent itself, not at the remote time, but soon. With Sicily swept clear of the foe, the Allied road to northern Italy and the coast of France would begin to open. To the northeast, from Sicily holds on the Italian mainland boot, the Allies could launch a drive at the Greek peninsula and the Balkans.

American troops which took Calatanisetta, geographical hub of Sicily, and vital road and rail communication centre in the Catania plain, have not only debouched to that rolling central valley, but are halfway across Central Sicily from their southern bridgehead. They are in a position to widen and deepen penetration to the north coast of the island swiftly, splitting the foe.

Eastward, General Montgomery's Anglo-Canadian troops are set, too, on the Catania plain as well. They are reported already in possession on the Gerbini air base and northward with the outskirts of the port of Catania. Once that port falls, they can sweep northwest against the eastern coast of Mount Etna to widen the swath which Allied troops have cut and which are cutting toward the north coast.

Western Springboard

Western Sicily, the certain advance base for an attack upon Sardinia, Corsica and Continental France does not seem threatened. It fall into Allied hands almost without opposition once the Allies complete their drive across the centre of the island. That will expedite the hour when Fighting French troops from Africa join in the assault. "That is likely to be strictly a French-American affair as far as ground forces are concerned, leaving the British-Canadian force in Eastern Sicily to spearhead the attack on the Italian mainland itself, if that proves necessary.

There are immediate Allied objectives at the lower end of the Italian boot, however, which could condition the next phase of the fight. Foggia is the chief hub of the Gulf of Taranto between them and the Adriatic for Italian land forces; garrisoning Albania and Greece could be virtually cut off from contact with Italy by sea. And from the Foggia boot heel it would be easy for massed flights of big bombers to reach the Romanian oil fields in sustained and devastating attacks.

Destruction from the air of those Balkan oil sources would strike a more serious blow to the Nazi war effort than any other discernible move the Allies could make quickly, and the attempt is definitely to be expected soon.

Council Dismisses Kingsville Chief

Kingsville, Ont., July 20 — (CP) — Chief of Police J. C. Babcock, Chief here for about 12 years, was dismissed by the Kingsville town council at a special session last night.

Dismissal of the chief occurred following complaints from residents. Chief Babcock operates a restaurant here, in addition to his police duties, and council members declared themselves of the opinion that he was devoting too much time to his private business and not enough to his police work.

For years, council members asserted, residents of the town have been complaining that Chief Babcock was not to be found when he was wanted. He has been warned by the council time and time again about his action and asked to attend to his duties more closely, it was stated.

RUSSIAN ARMY, OLD STYLE

Richard Hakluyt, in his "The Discovery of Muscovy," published in 1580, gives us some interesting military information from Russia. In 1553, the year Richard Chancellor visited Moscow to open up trade between the Russians and the English.

At that time Ivan IV, known as Ivan the Terrible, was Duke of Muscovy and czar of all the Russias, having been the first to assume that title.

The English visitors, who dined with the czar at his court in Moscow, reported that Ivan the Terrible was a valiant and courageous soldier who "is not more afraid of his enemies, which are not a few, than the hobby of the larks."

His chief enemies were the Poles, Swedes, Danes, Lithuanians, Crimeans and the Tartarians, which are a stout and a hardy people as any under the sun.

"Whensoever the injuries of their neighbors do call him forth to battle," the Englishmen reported, "he never assembleth a less number against the enemy than 300,000 soldiers, 100,000 whereof he reareth into the field with him, and leaveth the rest in garrison in some fit places for the better safety of his empire."

"He is wrought, no husbandmen nor merchant; for the country is so populous that these being left at home the youth of the realm is sufficient for all the wars."

All Russian soldiers at that time fought only on horseback. Each soldier had to provide his own horse, saddle, coat of mail, helmet, shield, bow and arrows, shafts and food.

"They are a kind of people most sparing in diet, and most patient in extremity of cold above all others."

The Russian soldier of those days had a cloak for bedclothes and had a cloak for protection against the cold wind and the snow, the frozen ground for a bed, a stone for a pillow, a little wood for a fire, cold water from the river for drink and for a handful of oatmeal for food: "and as for his horse, he is as it were, continually clothed with his master, faring both alike.

"As often as they are to skirmish with the enemy," these soldiers of Ivan the Terrible set forth with one accord at all; they make no wings, nor military divisions of their men, as we do, but lying for the most part in ambush, do suddenly set upon the enemy."

"Their horses can well abstain from victuals days together, and they feed upon the barks of trees and the most tender branches in the time of war. And this scant and miserable manner of living and the horse and his master can well endure, sometimes for the space of two months lusty and in good state of body."

These Muscovite soldiers received no wages, but if they survived the campaign the emperor gave each one for his service" some farm or so much ground as he and his may live upon."

Red Triangle Hostess Club Has Many Plans for Entertainment

The Belleville Branch of the Y.M.C.A. War Services recently held a reorganization meeting of the executive board of the Red Triangle Hostess Club at which time Miss Helen Symons was chosen the new president, Miss Duncan Adams, vice-president, Miss Mary Moult, secretary, Miss Catherine Murphy, treasurer, Mrs. Irene Walsh, chairman of the sextette committee, Mrs. Helen Allison, chairman of the refreshments committee and Miss Mary Forster, chairman of entertainment.

Five Groups

Divided into five groups, the Red Triangle Hostess Club is made up from a list of 300 voluntary workers who provide planned entertainments for the members of the armed forces. Heading each of these smaller groups is one of the members of the executive committee and the groups will function as small clubs in carrying out service projects for the week.

Leading the list of proposed summer plans for entertaining of airmen and airwomen from the surrounding air stations, probably the one of greatest popularity, is the Sunday afternoon picnics. These picnics are financed from the proceeds accruing from the Tuesday and Thursday dances held in the Rume Arena, with the men paying a nominal fee. One of these is usually held at Massasagga Point where the airmen are taken and transported by Mr. Percy E. Dulmage by boat, making three trips out and three trips back starting at 1.30 in the afternoon. Softball and soccer games are organized and swimming parties arranged.

Weekend Dances

The girls of the club are busy thinking up ideas of entertainment, among them is bicycle hikes. The girls will arrange a theme party for their guests and themselves and organized trips will be planned. Rationing of meat permitting, wiener roasts will be held from time to time. Once a month the regular weekly dance guests take a free hop, as when the girls try to give the men a change they plan a floor show and the best dance band in the district. The girls have also shown after this monthly dance and this money is being used for the dance dresses. At revue which the girls are now working on under the direction of Miss Mary Forster. When the revue has been rehearsed and thoroughly polished to perfection, they will make a tour of the surrounding air stations and put on shows.

The Quinte Country Club has made its golf courses available to a limited number of airmen and their friends on certain days of the week. The girls are now trying to find golf clubs and golf balls and have sent out petitions to members of the club asking for friends to furnish their uniformed guests with the necessary equipment.

Seek Tear of Stations

The Red Triangle Hostess Club of the Y.M.C.A. is endeavoring to arrange for conducted tours of the air stations and several girls have been going to dances as hostesses but have found as many of the stations than the building where the dances are held. A number of girls have also served to familiarize the girls with the airmen's mode of conversation if they encounter while dancing with airmen and will help to put them on equal ground.

The Red Triangle Hostess club has already done a great deal toward finding entertainment for servicemen and boys who have come from distant parts of the Dominion to Belleville and boys who are looking for training and the men speak highly of the help of the girls. The work started by the local girls is carried on by similar organizations as the men find themselves unoccupied after reaching their destination. The London Hostess club has a volunteer workers list exceeding 4,000.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

WEDDING ETIQUETTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I live in a small town where it is the custom for the bride to open her wedding presents when the guests are assembled at the wedding reception and then express her thanks, instead of opening the presents as they arrive and writing thank-you notes. Would you please give me a few hints as to what to say and how to say it when I express my thanks?

2. When a toast is proposed at the wedding, who responds to it and just what does the one who responds say?

L. A.

1. As you open each gift use your most enthusiastic words and your most enthusiastic manner, as you thank the giver, for you don't want to be hasty in your words of appreciation, giving the impression that you're too anxious to open the next present to adequately express your thanks for the present "in hand." As the present is from a couple, man and wife, be sure to say your thanks to both by name.

Make your thanks as definite as possible — that is, after your general words of thanks, say appreciative things about your special feature or features of the gift. Whenever possible too, say just what use it is for some use in your new home — for example, how perfect the vase will be on the end-table in your living-room; how harmonious a color-scheme the lamp will be in the sofa you already have, and so forth. In other words, make every giver feel that he or she planned the perfect gift for you.

2. The groom responds to the toast proposed to the bride and groom." For his bride and himself he expresses appreciation by saying only "Thank you", or he may expand this reply a bit, and say for example, "Dorothy and I thank you deeply for your good wishes . . . and always we will remember the hearty way you all wish us on our wedding day."

MATRON OF HONOR'S DUTIES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be matron of honor soon at my friend's wedding, and would appreciate it if you will tell me the duties of a matron of honor both before and after the wedding. (In the bridal party there is to be only a matron of honor and two bridesmaids.)

H. S.

The principal duties of the bride's attendants are to look as lovely as possible and to be as gracious and socially cooperative as you know how.

The honor attendant walk alone in the procession, behind the bridesmaids and in front of the bride and her father. During the ceremony, you hold the bride's bouquet, and when the ceremony has been completed, you return the bouquet to the bride, and as the recessional starts, straighten out the bridal train and veil.

If it is a double-ring ceremony, you receive the groom's ring and hand it to the bride as the best man hands the bride's ring to the groom. In the receiving-line at the reception, you stand to the bride's right, and if there is a bride's table, you sit at the left of the groom.

As duty, if you wish, give a party (perhaps a shower) for the bride-to-be, or you and the other attendants may be hostesses together, but giving the party is not necessary. You do, however, give a wedding present to the prospective bride.

COURTESY TIP

It's fun to play a good manners game with yourself, determining to make a kind and gracious reply to someone who has been rude or inconsiderate to you. They may even reconsider the rudeness, and "about face" by saying something pleasant!

R.C.A., Peterboro, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hannah. Rev. E. Farnsworth united the young couple in marriage.

Blue delphinium, baby breath and red roses decorated the church with an imitation of a miniature garden fence and an arch of white lattice work which was adorned with evergreens and baskets of white Regal lilies. The wedding music was played by Mrs. E. Perry, organist and choir leader and the signing of the register, Madeline Scriven delightfully rendered "Because".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a picture of beauty in a white satin gown embroidered with baby chenille, with a sweetheart neckline and tight fitting bodice. Her finger tip veil was caught to her hair with baby chenille forming a headdress. Her only jewellery was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of red Bellefonte roses.

Miss Marjorie Scriven, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid was gowned in a pink organdy frock with matching full length bolero-length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink Briarcliff roses.

Miss Madeline Scriven acted as her sister's bridesmaid and was also frocked in baby blue sheer crepe with matching shoulder-length veil. She carried yellow Johanna Hill roses.

The tiny and winsome flower girl was Gail Scriven, niece of the bride, gowned in yellow organdy with mauve trimming and carrying a basket of sweet peas in various delicate hues.

Mr. James Scriven, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The ushers were Reg. Scriven, brother of the bride, William Cullen, of Ottawa, cousin of the groom and Joe Mastin, of this city.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The rooms were decorated with pink and white streamers and baskets of summer flowers. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake set on pillars. The bride's mother was wearing an ensemble of heavenly blue crepe with white accessories and corsage of pink snapdragons. The groom's mother was attired in navy blue crepe, matching accessories and corsage of white roses.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and points west, the bride donned a two-piece dress of blue with white accessories.

In lieu of honor and bridesmaids received necklaces, gifts from the bride and groom to the flower girl, a tiny locket, the groomsman, gold tie pin and the ushers, cuff links.

Out-of-town guests were from Ottawa, Toronto and Picton.

ROBINSON—JONES

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the Rev. Mr. J. D. P. Knox, when Amanda Jones, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, was united in marriage to Ernest Robinson, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Robinson. They were attended by Mr. Bruce Jones, brother of the bride, and Thelma Robinson, sister of the groom.

The bride was attractively attired in ensemble of rose-beige georgette with three-quarter length veil caught to her hair with a daisy wreath. Matching accessories and a bouquet of red roses completed her costume.

The bride's attendant was wearing charming frock of sky blue with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Following the ceremony the bridal couple left on a wedding trip to points north and upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Like the Weather Yankees Are Hot in July As Usual, Enjoy Eight-Game Advantage

Have Won 12 of Their Last 13 Games and Should Go House in a Breeze

ROOKIE JOHNSON GOOD

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Yankees are not the old-time Bombers but they're up to their old-time tricks — trying to break the back of the American League in the middle of the season.

When they swing back into action tomorrow after the usual two-day layoff that preceded International series in the major league this year they will be nursing an eight game winning streak, the longest of the long-curry campaign.

A six-game spree string in itself is not overly important but it is worth noting because 'at this time last year the Yanks were in the midst of an 11 game streak that quashed their complaint about their finishing on top of the American League.

They now have won 12 of their last 13 games and this has been sufficient to dazzle the ambitious Washington Senators, who won five of their last six games and still lost ground.

Aside from the very creditable pitching, a major factor in the Yankees' mid-summer heat wave has been the peppering of "Rookie Bill" Johnson.

Johnson Hits Ten

The young third baseman hit a three-run homer and four singles Sunday to add still into the already pile of contention for the runs batted in title in the American League.

Nick Etten, in the best first-base tradition of the Yankees, has been at or near the top in run production all along and now is leading with 56. By batting in four Sunday, Johnson moved into second place with 57 and may be the first rookie to cop the prize since Joe Stines Ted Williams broke in with 145 in 1939.

If he touches this peak Johnson will have compiled in for the ephemeral honor of rookie of the year.

The major leagues will resume play tomorrow with a heavy program of 11 games, including three doubleheaders, but the Phillies and Pirates in the National League will get a jump on their rivals tonight with a night game at Pittsburgh.

Collusion?

Yorktown, Sask., July 20 (CP)—Two men combined to score a hole-in-one here.

Playing in a foursome, Ernie Jacques picked up a No. 5 iron, and chipped a shot to within two inches of the cup on a 126-yard hole.

John Woods blasted his drive into the rough, finding a clump of trees. He selected a No. 7 iron and raised a high shot over the trees up to Jacques' ball, and knocked it in the hole.

The trio had led to a lot of head scratching. Does Jacques get credit for a hole-in-one, and does Wood score an assist on the play?

BISONS DEFEAT RED WINGS IN 6 OF LAST EIGHT

Came Up With 4 to 2 Triumph in Only International Game Played

If Buffalo Bisons could play Rochester Redwings often enough they would have a good chance of being first instead of seventh in the International League.

In their last eight games the Bisons have beaten the Wings six times and they usually can count on help from the Red Birds.

Last night, in the only game scheduled in the circuit, Buffalo came up with a 4-2 triumph with Joe Hutchinson, a lanky ex-Regina, a wild pitch and an outfield error that produced three runs in the 6th inning.

The only wild pitch was made by Kemp Wicker, the losing pitcher, who also suffered from a bad throw by Burt Hogue.

Mike Rocco was the winner and after a shaky start when the Wings scored twice in the first three batsmen he settled down to pitch two-hit no-run ball over the last seven innings.

The only Rochester player who apparently wasn't awed by the Bisons was Al Evans, catcher. The Bisons's leading hitter, he obtained a double and a single.

BRISTOLS BATTLE MARINES TO TIE SCORE OF 5-5

Game Goes 11 Innings With Teams Still Deadlocked in Play-off Series

HARRIS STRONG

Bristol "Bombers" and SACO "Marlins" are the Series ahead with their City Softball League semi-finals today when they started a couple of weeks ago. After three games the series is still knotted at one game each after they played an 11 inning 5-5 overtime draw at the Pal Grounds last night.

The "Marines" garnered in all of their five counters in a third inning rally, but the Bombers kept picking up the odd run until they knotted the count in the ninth and then literally tossed away chances to win in the eleventh when, with the first two batters each scored and third and none away, they failed to score.

Score All Runs

In the fifth, when the Marines scored all of their runs, they batted around the batting order, but from then in it was all Connie Harris and Ken Wilson, who scored two runs, batted two in and accidentally one of his mates in the tying run, as the Bombers were up to bat in the ninth as the game progressed. Steve Hook pitched for the Marines and whiffed ten and walked two, while Harris struck out nine and walked only five. Harris helped his own cause with three hits in five tries. The Marines had only six hits off 9 innings.

Imagine Kid Joe Jones, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, sacking groceries behind an a golf course! Well, it happened yesterday in the All-American amateur golf tournament at Chicago. Most of the large gallery turned it into a boxing show by following the battler and ignoring the more-famous golfers but Joe was knocked out in the first round with a 44-43—87 match. Joe is from Utica, Mich., and is still a good prize-fighter.

The big names of golfdom—those who are left—will be back on the links practically left by the wayside when Dick McCreary, 26-year-old bakery salesman from Indianapolis, carded 36-36—72 to take the lead for medalist honors, matching par on each half of the qualifying heat. He scored four birdies to even up for two bogeys and a double bogey when he got himself in trouble. Those who shared 73's included a fairly well-known amateur, Frank Cochran of St. Louis, and a former caddy, Frank Kovach, Chicago. Frank Perpich, ex-college enthusiast, and Bill Schmidt, assistant pro keeper at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Among the favorites, Chick Evans of Chicago could do no better than 75. Gus Moreland, Houston, Tex., and Sonny Ellis of Columbus, Ga., was on George Pessis in a 36-hole tutoring in the day's lowest score, McCreary's two 4-210 war bond.

SWACOS DOWN SARGENT GIRLS BY 14-9 SCORE

Fifth Inning Uprising Gives Winners Six Runs to Lead League

Six runs in the fifth inning helped Tommy Cooke's SWACO softball out of a rut and led them to a 14 to 9 win over Sargent's in the league in a City Ladies' Softball fixture at the Armouries last evening. It was the SWACOS' first win after a few starts and moved them into first place in the league standings. Jack Symons' "locknasters" seemed headed towards victory as they scored runs in the first five frames and were enjoying a substantial 6 to 2 advantage when the Alleniles' bats began to respond with hits for a fifth inning uprising that gave them six runs as they added a trio to their total in subsequent frames to win handily.

Teams Make Help

Norma Conrad hurled for the SWACOS and although she started out on in all but one frame, her teammates gave her plenty of support. Some belated and lusty hitting to the tune of 14 runs helped Conrad pitched for the Bell-Sargents and was going along quite nicely when counted (and it took a full month) it was interesting to note that the Girls' Council Softball Series, Mercury and Tunney won the poll.

Con Smith declared that there have been many greater sports events than the back-paddling of Tunney and Referee Dave Barry's alleged long count at Soldiers' Field before 104,943 frenzied fans on the night of September 23, 1927. No doubt there have been, but who are we to contradict and say "Yer nuts, Con?"

Here's how they voted.

Asked for the six greatest 20th Century sporting events, here's how they voted:

1. The Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney "Long Count" fight in Chicago, September 22, 1927.

2. Bobby Jones' Grand Slam of the four major golf titles in 1930.

3. Jesse Owens' triumphs in the 1936 Olympic Games.

4. Deciding game of the 1926 World Series in which Grover Alexander struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases full of Yankees won the championship.

5. Babe Ruth's 60th home run against Cuban Pirates, Jacksonville, Fla., March 30, 1927.

6. Red Grange's five long runs for touchdowns in one game against Michigan at Urbana, Illinois, October 18, 1924.

Are Next Ten.

4. The Jack Dempsey-Luis Firpo fight in the Polo Grounds, September 14, 1923.

5. The second Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout in New York, June 22, 1938, in which Louis scored his revenge K.O. in the first round.

6. Jim Thorpe's victories in the 1912 Olympic Games at Stockholm.

4. The 1914 World Series in which the Boston Braves, after Philadelphia Athletics four straight, for the first time in baseball became World Series history.

5. Johnny Weismuller's two successive no-hit games for the Chicago Athletic Club in 1928.

6. The Chicago Bears' 70-to-0 rout of the Washington Redskins in the 1940 professional football championship game.

7. Cornelius Warmerdam's 15-foot pole vaulting, 1940-43.

8. Gertrude Ederle's English Channel swim, August 6, 1926.

9. Whirlaway's Kentucky victory in record time in the 1941 Kentucky Derby.

10. The performances of Knute Rockne's Four Horsemen of Notre Dame, Gallagher, Stein and Layden Bowl victory over Stanford, 27 to 10.

No further ahead.

Bristol "Bombers" could have well advanced into the league softball semi-finals last night in the eleventh frame, but Manager Hook's company had to be satisfied with a 5-5 draw with Bristol Marines. The Bombers had two on and none out in the last half of the eleventh but they couldn't produce that much-needed hit to assure victory. After playing nine games these two teams are still right where they started, insofar as the league is concerned. They'll try and settle the issue tonight at 8 o'clock.

Last night it was pretty much Connie Harris versus the Marines, who got all of the runs in the third. Harris opened Bristol's host on the mound, batted in two runs and scored two himself, his last one coming in the first of the eleventh. That seems like just about enough for one night, but no Harris whiffed-13 to Hook's ten as the Bombers out-hit the Marines. But they're still no farther from deciding a winner than a fortnight ago.

Rookie Johnson...

Tommy Fox, cocky British Empire heavyweight boxing champion, arrived in New York six years ago and won the world championship bout with Joe Louis. Fox-fight ready gave the Brown Bomber little chance against the Detroit negro. Fox crossed words for critics by staying 15 rounds although he lost the decision.

SWACO leads loop.

Forced to come from behind with a six run splurge in the fifth, the SWACO leaders not only downed Bell-Sargents 14 to 9 last night, but moved into first place in the league and are now perched alone on the league's lofty perch. Steady hitting in the fifth by Tommy Cooke's charges told the tale. Incidentally the Girls' Softball belt now rests at the Armouries tonight when the Mercury (WD) and C.A.P. lasses meet the Bristol girls.

This and That.

When Promoter Frank Tunney remarked Al Dunlop and "Tex" Rickard over Jimmy Monahan's backliner at the Home Arena he didn't realize that he was back-paddling himself in for . . Morgan had beaten Jimmy Monahan, while the only popular George (I look like Lon-don) Tufalo, tangles with "Tex" Snyder . . . Monday night's only one game was played in the International Softball League, the Buffalo Bisons chalking up their fourth win of the season against the Rochester Red Wings . . . "Tex" Rickard, the famed old boxing "Tex" Rickard, the famed old boxing "Tex" Rickard, the famed old boxing

Your favorite screen performers starring in a new film which has romance, drama, hilarious comedy sequences, a wealth of songs, and all the other ingredients that provide socko entertainment — that's the good news at the Capitol Theatre where the Weaver Brothers and Elvira's latest picture, "Mountain Rhythm," opined yesterday in the first of a three day run.

"DESPERATE JOURNEY"

Dashing Errol Flynn, who has become famous for his action-packed roles, is now cast in a part that is more fraught with adventure and excitement than any he has played here-to-fore. He's in "Desperate Journey," which is now at the Capitol Theatre, and in it Flynn plays the role of a Flight-Lieutenant in the R.A.F.

Other famous players in the cast, as members of the British Bomber squadron, of which Flynn has command, are Ronald Reagan, Alan Hale, Arthur Kennedy and Ronald Sinclair. It is as brusque, devil-may-care, and as hardy a crew as has ever set out to bomb Germany.

The latest Universal News completes the bill.

Most people can do something well but few people can do most things well. Alice Faye is the exception to this fact. The honey-haired star reads as Hollywood's leading singer of ballads old and new, she can dance, has a line of routine with the best dancers and she has proven her ability as a dramatic actress of high quality in outstanding motion pictures.

In her first picture in over a year, "Hello, Frisco, Hello", filmed in Technicolor, Alice has a real opportunity to indicate her versatility. As a belle of old San Francisco's Barbary Coast, Alice is called upon to render a number of songs, appear in several spectacular dance sequences and carry the romantic lead opposite John Payne.

Now on the Bella Theatre screen, "Hello, Frisco, Hello" proved no obstacle for Alice, thanks to her early training in the theatre and motion pictures. The blonde star's earliest ambitions centered around the stage. Arriving in New York, tried to interest her in Quick Relief From school theatrical work but Alice had her cap set on a singing and dancing career.

When she was just a kid Alice applied for a chorus job in the Ziegfeld Follies only to have a sharp-eyed dance instructor recognize her extreme youth and refuse her a tryout. However, a year later she managed to get into a Chester Hale chorus line and was started on her career.

Later Alice secured a job as specialty dancer at the Hollywood Gardens, famous nite spot of its time. From this she moved into a feature spot in George White's Scandals in which Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees were appearing.

If it wasn't for a phonograph recording that Alice made, and which was heard by Rudy Vallee, the little star might have been lost in the shuffle. As it happened though, Vallee was impressed with Alice's now famous style of singing and put her under contract as vocalist with his band.

It was while a member of the Vallee troupe that Alice first came to the film capital. Vallee and the unit were cast in a film version of the Scandals and when the leading lady balked at her part, and walked off the set, Alice was tested and immediately cast in the role.

"Hello, Frisco, Hello" is Alice Faye's twenty-ninth picture for the 20th Century-Fox, which establishes a new record for the star—and the studio.

Jack Oakie and Lynn Bari are starred with Alice and Payne in "Hello, Frisco, Hello," a lavish, colorful story of the gay tempo of life in old San Francisco's riotous Barbary Coast as a background. Music, song and spectacular dance routines abound in the picture.

Rounding out the featured cast for the exciting new musical are Laird Cregar, Edgar Havoc, Ward Bond and George Barbier. Bruce Humberstone directed the lively hit.

Many Outstanding Events Feature RCAF Sports Meet

(Staff Reporter)

Trenton Air Station removed the barriers surrounding its precinct Monday night and extending the head of greeting to well over two thousand civilian and service sports fans and offering to them a fine program of aquatic sports and races and many events.

The meet got away to a good start at 6.30 p.m. with the first heat in the sail-boat event which was followed by canoe races, mixed, single and doubles. A novelty race called a "basket race" and greased pole walking contest filled the time between the start and ending of these various boat races. Crowned the finals of the water sports, an exhibition of platform diving was performed by Pit.-Lt. Johnny Teti, D.F.C., of Toronto, who stunted his dives with perfection and ease.

The Grand Finale featured Lieut. Bobby Pierce, RNCDS, Star Instructor, P.O. John Gendzwar, Canadian Champion, AC2. Johnny Fitzpatrick, the Canadian Husky Champion, in an exhibition scull-ing race. Inter-Service boxing and wrestling kept the fans entertained throughout the day and the regatta with P.O. Terry Evans, Canadian Empire light-heavyweight champion and The Masked Tornado putting on a good show as the feature wrestling event on the athletic card.

Resplendent in their new P.T.I., uniforms, and noticeably effacing themselves from "Joe-jobs" were four former N.H.L. stars, Lloyd Gronsdahl, Bonnie Boland, Ian Wycherley, N.Y., Americans, Roy Connelly, Boston Bruins, and Wally Stanowsky of the Toronto Maple Leafs, and husbanding these huskies around the scenes of activity was Henry Merrin, former sports announcer for CKCL. The N.H.L. stars will finish their training at P.T. Instructors in a few weeks and will leave Trenton for other stations where they will give physical jerks to airmen and airwomen, all over wondering why they were back playing hockey.

Tonight will be another evening of sports events terminating in the finals of the previous night's fights

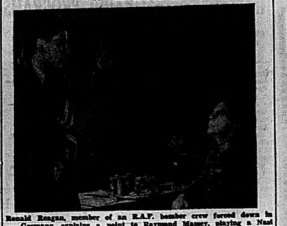
Minesweepers



J. L. Hodson talking on "Minesweepers" in the BBC's overseas service: "Despite all our care and ingenuity, this work of minesweeping is not done without loss. We have lost over a hundred minesweeping vessels since the war began; many of our fishermen from the East Coast and from the Western Isles have given their lives; but there's no lack of men to take their places. And men of all sorts are minesweeping who never thought to join the King's Navy—men from undertakers to cotton operatives, from chemist's assistants to barrister-at-law. A number are in the Fleet sweepers built especially by the Admiralty and sometimes accompanying our mighty men of war, and others are in the converted drifters, paddle steamers and the rest. These later often have pets aboard —in one case a duck which waddles about the deck quacking defiances at the seagulls, and they paint their scars of exploded mines on the ship's funnel—a white chevron for the mine, a red one for five, a blue star for twenty-five and so on. If she brings down an enemy aircraft—several have done this—and some more than once, she paints a swastika below. The record for mines exploded is held by the trawler Bolle Royce with a hundred and fifty to her credit. There are some skippers who are as good at finding mines as they were at finding fish."

Brazilian Letter

By G. L. LANDSBERG
Canadian Press Correspondent

Rio De Janeiro, July 20—(CP)—A flurry of enthusiasm swept across Brazil when the news broke that the pro-Axis Argentine government of President Ramon Castillo had fallen. The exultation was natural. Unfortunately, it was short-lived.

Argentina under Castillo had become the headquarters for Nazi intrigue in South America and an efficient espionage centre operating primarily against shipping, including Brazilian shipping.

It is not generally recognized abroad to what extent Brazil is dependent on its coastwise shipping and that the inroads of U-boat attacks have been serious enough to result in real hardship to the population.

Strange Sight

It was a strange sight not many weeks ago to see the gloom, characterizing in the sun, to get their sugar ration — this in Brazil, one of the greatest and oldest sugar bowls in the world. There was an amazing and that the inroads of U-boat attacks have been serious enough to result in real hardship to the population.

Brazilians had clung to the hope that the German defeats at Stalingrad and in Tunisia had sufficiently shaken official Argentine faith in the myth of Nazi invincibility that the country would be persuaded to alter its isolationist policy and join the other South American countries in opposition to the Axis. That hope was entertained here, but the overthrow of the Castillo government apparently did nothing to hasten the move.

CHURCHILL GIVES

(NOT TO BE PUBLISHED UNTIL DELIVERED)

"Mr. Roosevelt agreed and the first communique from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters on the morning of July 10 (Saturday after the invasion began made it clear that the forces of the United States, Canada and the United States, as directed by Sir Archibald Sinclair's Test of Statement.

The text of Mr. Churchill's statement follows:

"As I understand it, the point of the Canadian Prime Minister's remarks was that in the initial draft of the communique prepared by Allied headquarters in North Africa for issue as soon as news of the landing in Sicily could be released, reference was made only to allied forces.

"On seeing this draft Canadian authorities asked that at the earliest possible date reference should be made to the fact that Canadian forces were taking part in the landing. Despite some possible security objections, this was at once agreed to by Gen. Eisenhower and the initial communique when issued referred to United States, United States and Canadian forces.

"Owing to the great distance of London from Ottawa and the six hours difference in time between them, information in this effect reached Ottawa from Washington sooner than from London, but this was not due to any slothfulness or lack of attention on the part of any British authority.

Fullest Tribute Paid

"Since then the fullest tribute has been paid in all public statements here and elsewhere to the valiant and successful part the Canadian 1st. Division is taking in this enterprise.

"Our hearts also go out to the rest of the powerful Canadian army in this country who for more than three years have guarded the centre of the Empire from invasion.

"We have had a very agreeable exchange of telegrams with Mr. Mackenzie King on this subject and the misunderstanding for which no one is to blame can now be regarded as closed."

The War Today— Highest Motives Inspired Raid On Military Targets in Rome

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Notwithstanding the "wild beast" propaganda (writes the Axis is trying to give to the bombing of military objectives in Rome the fact remains that the highest humanitarian motives inspired the first raid which the Eternal City has experienced.

The Allied object was to prevent necessary sufficient for the destruction of the conflict. A quick surrender would shorten the agony of the Italian people themselves. It would put a topmost on the casualty list of Allied and Italian boys who must die by thousands if the battle for Italy is long continued.

Had Mussolini seen fit to remove prime military objectives from Rome and declare it an open city, the bombing could have been avoided. He had fair warning. But he has chosen to use it as a sanctuary to protect himself and his main supporters from danger.

Having cringed in the dust of gunfire until Hitler had crushed France the Duce stabbed his fallen neighbor in the back and then sent his warplanes to help finish off Britain. It may have been his bombs which tore at some of the world's most historic and hallowed places—Westminster Abbey, Old St. Paul's, the ancient Canterbury Cathedral and others.

Rome Crawls for Sanctuary Inside

Each time he has committed another crime against civilization he has crawled to security behind the walls of Rome. There, too, he has shielded his political associates or gangsters, marched his troops, maintained the central machinery of his transport system and created sinews of war.

The immunity of Rome was accepted as a certainty by many, despite warnings from the Allies. A million Italians from other parts of the country sought refuge and moved into the capital to avoid bombing of their home cities.

Probably never before has so great care been exercised by bombers as in the raid over Rome. The pilots, navigators and bombardiers were carefully selected from among thousands of prospects. They were chosen not only for their military experience but for sterling qualities which would guarantee that only military objectives would be bombed. To make them better perfect, they were trained for some months and memorized the map of the Italian capital. The raid was in broad daylight so that mistakes wouldn't be made.

No Bombs Fall in Vatican City

The assignment of bombing Rome party was one of the most trying which could be given to airmen. The skulking Mussolini had built parts of his war machine close to Vatican City. It was unthinkable that a bomb should fall within the Pope's domain—and none did. The bombers appear to have done as skilful as job as ever has been recorded.

It's to be hoped that the people of Italy will understand what has happened, and act accordingly to ease themselves out of the plight into which Mussolini has thrust them. Judging from the enthusiasm with which the folk of Sicily are welcoming the invasion Allies, there's a chance that the inhabitants of the mainland will follow suit.

Four Italian prisoners of war who escaped from a camp in England were dressed as civilians when they were recaptured two days later. Their suits had been made from blankets.

Hour of Grace

CHAPTER 14

Adele said, "The old cats are at it again and I'm not surprised. Naturally you and your mother will be the last to hear. About Toby and Clare, I mean. They don't care enough about decency to be discreet about it. A lot of wild stories are circulating. I don't care what they say about Toby, but Toby is your brother and somewhere in him there's good stuff. Now I'm a cat because what can you do about it?"

Meegan's brows, darker than her hair, came together. "What are they saying?"

"Well, they think that Pippa is either smart or a darned fool. He's no darned fool, not that one! One of your mother's dearest friends saw Toby and Clare in a cocktail lounge in town last week. They kissed each other several times until the manager came over and politely but frigidly asked them to stop. And it seems that on some many people are getting their summer entertainment chiefly by noting when Toby goes in Clare's and when he leaves. There aren't house parties there all the time, you know!" She drew in deeply on her cigarette and said, "Wouldn't it be funny if she really loved Toby! But I don't think she does. Apparently, though, she doesn't care two pins for the gossip will of anyone here. She didn't come back to mak. a big scene publicly, so came back to get Toby. She'll ruin him."

Meegan said, "Maybe he'll ruin her. Oh, I hate it, Adele! Our last summer here, probably, turned into a whispering campaign against us. I'd like to run away from it. I'd like to run away from all my feelings and look for new ones."

"I'm a fool to worry you. I guess I've said all the vile things about Clare I can say. But why doesn't she get caught sometime? Why don't some of the things she does catch up with her and slap her down? Why does she always get away with it? She just seems to go on to better and better things."

"I hope I find out what she really is. You're never known."

"I know what she is. Shall I tell you? She's a murderer and a suicide more than her own physical liquidation will make it right. It isn't only murder. It's Van, too. Yes, Van . . . She met her in town for lunch one of those last days last week. Wouldn't Sue die if she knew? Van's going to pieces. I tell her? A man with a wife and two children just doesn't take his old flame to lunch even if she is married. That sort of thing won't do, dear child. You know that. Does it mean much to you, Meegan? Van had to call Clare and invite her without Sue knowing. He had to want to see Clare so much that he was willing to risk Sue's temper."

Meegan arose from the grass, her face a study of thoughtfulness. "I hope I know what she is before the summer is over . . ."

"You keep saying that. I told you what she is." Hising, she grinned. "I'm going in for a swim. You know, she's beginning to get the urge to do something for defense. If anyone could take the place of a man in industry, I can. Do you feel what I feel? That while we play tennis and swim and gossip others are at work to change everything we've known. No matter what our personal problems there's one great personal problem that is one bigger thought: the survival of our country and the saving the war. I think our consciences are cottoned and our bones, by Gar, want to go to work to win it!"

Meegan said, "Maybe one of the good things about war is that it's a test and that when we're in it and we know we have to win it, it will be though the whole country were one heart and one pulse and one strong body. A mother from a high place with a son in the service and a mother from a low place with a son in the service are equals for the first time. They can either be nerve to gether or cry together but they are together." She smiled. "We do talk, don't we?"

Adele said, "I wish I could feel that Clare was so insignificant in this bigger thing that I wouldn't think about her more. But that's an old score to be settled, too, just as the war is."

Meegan walked home and went to her room and changed into a blue bathing suit and yellow sweater. She did not see Toby and took it for granted that he was still asleep. Finding the car keys in the hall above, she took them and went out again, waving to her mother who was busy in the garden cutting perennials for the house. For there were only faithful perennials left. Of annuals there, as they seemed, despite gross neglect, continued to appear year after year.

She stopped at Sue's house first and blew the horn. The two children rushed out with their sand buckets and shovels and climbed into the car. Then Sue, looking as unruffled as always, came out and got out by the car.

"They are so pleased they can go," she said. "How are you, dear?"

"Fine . . . I'm a little house-bound, Meegan said.

She hesitated an instant, then, "Have you seen Clare?"

"Not since her party. Slave you?"

"No, and I don't think I'm going to. There's too much drinking around. Sue, darling, put down your feet. You know you are not allowed to put your feet on the upholstery of our car and you're a guest in Meegan's. Clare left this morning by the way, with her husband and secretary. I took Van to the station and saw them off."

"Perhaps they went away for the week-end." So that was why Toby was staying home today.

She said slowly and doubtfully, "Perhaps. But why did they take the secretary? Perhaps I'm peculiar but it doesn't seem to me that they have a normal family life. Have you agree with me?"

She wanted her to tell her what she knew of Clare.

"I suppose you'd say their lives were complicated," she said carefully. "It's natural we should think of Clare's."

"Even so," She said, "I still think it was odd to see them going away and take the secretary with them and for Clare's head to be on her husband's shoulder. But I won't keep you any longer. We must get together for a bridge foursome."

She smiled at her children and Meegan and then turned and went into her perfect house and her perfect life.

Meegan drove next door to the Lesters and blew the horn again. Presently Helen Lester came out, leading her small daughter by the hand.

"Hi!" she called vigorously, her red curls in motion with her thick body curls in motion with her thick body and what seemed a hair-raising ed plaxform. "In you go, kids. Now I know you've got a smashing suspicion that you had something to do with it."

Meegan looked as puzzled as she looked pleased. "I had nothing to do with it, I promise you."

"Okay, I was wrong. That's even better. Maybe the summer won't be such a wash-out to Erica after all."

Meegan did not see Toby until that afternoon when she and Clare and Payne and Miss Willoughby left this morning.

"Hello," he said, looking down at his plate and nodding. "I know. You've gone for a swim. Fine. You get around, don't you? How do you hear all these things?"

"The things that happen in that house are magnified. Even what it says gets around." When he looked up she asked, "Others are you taking Erica tonight?"

He laughed. "You know that, too."

"Helen told me. Helen is her brother's wife. She thought I had something to do with it."

"But you didn't. I just remember-ed she was kind of cute. We'll together this evening. There's no music here tonight."

"If I stay, would you take her?"

"Sure. Why not? There's nothing the matter with her except her right jab. I'll see if I can't tone that down a little."

"Tone what down?" their mother asked, coming from the kitchen with their dessert on a tarnished silver tray. "Dear, I don't know what happened to the custard. I followed the recipe to the instructions on the box and look at it, it's watery."

Toby scratch a dark brow at her. "Who telephoned you in the meantime? Was a bridge game, darling?"

Meegan sat in Sue's living room that evening while Van and Sue went to call on friends. The children she supposed, were asleep. Even if they were not, they would not dare to make a sound after their mother's promise of dire reprisals if they gave Meegan any trouble. She had tried to read but the words made no impression and her thoughts gravitated from Toby to Erica to Sue and Van, lingering long upon the latter.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN M. BUNDESEN

President, Chicago Board of Health.

Prenatal Care Will Prevent Three Complications.

Records prove that the expectant mother who has the services of the doctor from the early days of pregnancy is less likely to have trouble.

According to Dr. Cecil W. Seibert of Iowa, intelligent care of the expectant mother is one of the biggest things in the prevention of accidents and emergencies occurring in childbirth. When the doctor first comes to see the physician, he will take a history of any symptoms she may have, paying particular attention to any infections which could cause damage to the kidneys. Then the patient is given a careful physical examination and a search is made for general infections, such as may be located in the teeth, tonsils, sinuses or elsewhere in the body. Of course, if such infections are present, efforts are made to clear them up. Next the pelvis is measured to determine if it is normal and will permit the passage of the baby without any obstruction. In special cases, X-rays of the pelvis are taken, for by this means these X-ray accurate measurements of the pelvis may be obtained.

Records have been collected to determine what the average size of the pelvis should be. Even though the pelvis may measure slightly below these averages, it does not necessarily mean that there will be trouble and that a cesarian operation will be necessary. However, these are definite signs that the opening is too small, plans for a cesarian operation may be made.

As a part of the examination during prenatal care, a blood test is made. There is a tendency for anaemia—a lessening of the coloring in the blood—to develop during pregnancy. If there are signs of anaemia, treatment with iron preparations can be carried out and the mother's diet planned to include foods rich in iron such as meat, egg yolk, green vegetables, fruit and peas. The diet during pregnancy should include a quart of milk a day. If there is a tendency for the patient to gain weight excessively, skim milk may be substituted for whole milk. Leafy and other vegetables, fresh fruits, eggs and meat should be included in the diet. Foods and cereals should also be included. Unless the patient gets plenty of sunlight, cod liver oil or tablets containing Vitamin D may be administered.

In regard to clothing, the patient should wear low heels for comfort's sake and should avoid tight garters and rolled stockings. She also should not have high heels and a maternity corset may be worn if it adds to the patient's comfort.

Attention to these simple matters will go a long way to prevent unpleasant complications.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was reading her paper and pop was reading his, saying, yes gods this is awful, I dont see how we can possibly win this war, we've got to figure this thing out, he said, and he put the envelope out of his pocket and started to make marks on it with his fountain pen, saying By gollies it's worse than I thought, the situation is far more dire for us.

Why are we for land sakes? ma said, I thought everything has been going with flying colors for our side, she said, and pop said, That's because you haven't got a education and 3 and a hundred together. The Russian allies they brought down another hundred and 2 German planes yesterday, and the Germans claim they're bagged a hundred and 3 more allied planes in the paseed 3 days. Now that set me to thinking and I've done a little figuring here and my guess is suspicions are confirmed. If the claims of both sides are correct, the Nazis have brought down 40 thousand and allied planes since the beginning of the war, and the Allies have shot down ninety thousand Hatler planes. At that rate neither side can have a single plane left. The jig is up, we're finished, he said.

Now William, even if such an astronomical loss as possible, neither side would have any advantage, ma said, and pop said, That's it, it's well known we are without air supremacy, and if neither side has any planes how can there be any supremacy? We're sunk, he said.

Oh, the whole thing is ridiculous, ma said, and pop said, By gollies I'm glad to hear you say that. I'll bet the whole publicity over mein's gift for arithmetic anytime. You make me feel much more optimistic, he said.

And he got in back of his paper again and ma got in back of hers.

RAF Station Receives Official Crest Approved By His Majesty, The King

Picton, July 20 — An official crest, approved by His Majesty the King, was presented to the R.A.F. station here by Air Vice-Marshal L.S.D. McKean, D.S.O., with Air Commodore J. Fogarty also present for the auspicious occasion.

The Air Vice Marshal stressed the importance of the work carried on in the training commands. When compared to that being done on active operations it may seem boring, but it is most vital and important, he told a ceremonial parade.

The crest, which bears the certification in His Majesty's handwriting, 'Approved George R.I.,' was received by Group Captain J. Gulthgwood, D.F.C. It is in the form of a color painting which will now be used as a master design for production of those insignia associated with uniforms and stationery as provided by regulation. It bears the Latin motto. 'Martem inter nubes pars,' translated, 'I prepare for war amidst the clouds.'

The winning design, now officially approved, was submitted by Cpl. Shropshall, winner of an open competition conducted at the station.

Among the visitors present for the occasion was Group Captain J. McNab, Chaplain of No. 1 Training Command.

Sentenced To 2 Months Jail Term

Appearing in police court here today was Ralph Burgess on charges which it is said he was not entitled to. Pte. John Rosebush, formerly of Stirling and until recently of the C.A.S.F. stationed at Brantford, was sentenced to two months in the common jail after being convicted of failing to meet a recognizance entered into by the accused in city police court here some months ago.

Axis Propagandists Cry Loudly Over Rome Raid

By The Associated Press

Axis propagandists puffed out all stops today and proclaimed loudly that Allied air raiders had indiscriminately bombed church property, historic landmarks and educational institutions in Rome yesterday, but their charges were largely belied by reports from neutral sources.

The Berlin radio took the lead in painting a black picture of the destruction wrought in the Eternal City, describing the attack as "criminal" and lacking in military purpose, ignoring the fact that the San Lorenzo railway yards — one of the principal objectives — is a vital cog in the Axis war machinery.

One German broadcast said that Pope Pius XII already had forwarded protests to Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt — a statement that was not immediately confirmed by any other source.

Both German and Italian propagandists dwelt heavily on damage which they said had been done to the fourth century Basilica of San Lorenzo Fuori Le Mura — Situated on the Via Tiburtina near the San Lorenzo yards and on the same street where military barracks are located.

Axis reports of damage suffered by this ancient edifice were confirmed by advices from Stockholm quoting a dispatch filed through Italian censorship by the Rome newspaper Dagens Nyheter.

Claims Not Substantiated

The Swedish correspondent failed, however, to substantiate sweeping German and Italian claims that the Vatican itself had suffered damage, but declared was limited to the San Lorenzo railroad yards district, adding that the centre of the Eternal City appeared to have well known antiquarian and historic relics had been hit "as peaceful as ever."

Destruction in the bombed areas was described by the Swedish writer as heavy, and he said that all residents of the Italian capital not engaged in essential occupations had been urged to leave the city as soon as possible.

New front contrasted with the bitter declarations of the Rome radio, which described the raid as having "the quality worthy of a wild beast" and said that the united nations and other neutrals had been hard hit.

"Buildings of the medical chief, orthopedic clinic and institute of public health either were damaged or destroyed by bombs," said a Rome broadcast heard in London. "Devastation caused by the enemy in workers' quarters in San Lorenzo, Tiburtina and Prenestino is horrible."

A Swiss telegraph agency dispatch from Rome said the Pope spent 70 minutes yesterday visiting bombed localities, including "important districts in which structural damage has already extra-territorial rights."

The agency report, based on first-word-hee-word an account by Shastai, Italian propaganda agency, of the Pope's tour of the damaged areas.

Correspondent Finds Life at Base More Dangerous Than Front

An Allied Force Command Post in North Africa, July 19 (Delayed) —(AP)— Roderick MacDonald, War Correspondent of the Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald, landed in Sicily with British glider troops, went through battles with them, was captured and later freed when British patrols shot up the Axis guards, and finally flew back to North Africa—all without injury.

Today MacDonald went for a casual auto ride. The car was hit by United States army three-ton truck and he suffered painful head injuries, cuts and bruises, and is in the R.A.F. base hospital.

Berlin Radio Says Russ Amphibious Force Tried to Land

London, July 20 (CP)—The German radio claimed today that a Russian amphibious force had attacked the coast of Viasovsky Peninsula on the Sea of Azov.

The broadcast said the Russians had attempted a landing at the coast south of Yeysk on the northeastern shore of the Gulf of Taganrog in the Sea of Azov.

The attack was beaten off, the Soviet Union.

Berlin account claimed, after So- shore batteries which sank or damaged landing craft were shelled by aged many of the vessels.

Body of Toronto Man Recovered From West Lake

Preston.—The body of Leslie Weir, 22, of Toronto, who was drowned in West Lake, on Friday, was recovered Monday. The body was recovered by his uncle, Ellis Durant of Wellington, with whom he had been spending a holiday.

George Ashbrit, 68, of Toronto is expected to leave hospital here today, having recovered from experiences and shock, the result of clinging to the bottom of the overturned boat for 20 hours. This fact was substantiated by finding of a watch on the body of Weir. This had stopped at 12.15 Friday and Mr. Ashbrit was not found until 6.45 Saturday morning.

The boat upset in heavy seas while the men were fishing and Weir was drowned when he attempted to swim to shore.

Constable E. Marvin led large groups of searchers over the week-end and a plane from Mt. View Air Station assisted in the search.

The body was released and shipped to Toronto, where the funeral will be held. There will be no inquest.

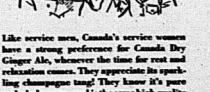
HAND-PICKED CREWS BEGIN BOMBING OF ROME



Allied hand-picked air crews have begun the systematic bombing of Rome, in a follow-up to the Churchill-Roosevelt ultimatum to Italy to get out of the war or suffer the consequences. They are avoiding all religious landmarks, but are bombing military targets in the Italian capital. Here is a view of Rome from St. Peter's Square.

ENNA FALLS; BRITISH AT DOORS OF CATANIA

JAP CRUISER, 2 DESTROYERS SENT TO BOTTOM

General Retreat From Centre Of Sicily Underway

Half of Island Is Now in Allied Hands—Many Units Of Enemy Cut Off

ITALIANS COMPLAIN

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 21 — (AP) — Canadian and United States troops have seized Enna — defence prop of all central Sicily — cutting off large numbers of Axis forces and forcing a general withdrawal as resistance on the island weakened hourly almost to the point of collapse.

To the east, British 8th Army units hammered at the doors of Catania — last bastion protecting the entire east coast — shattering another Nazi counter-assault with heavy casualties and advancing on the seaport, it was officially announced.

Half of Sicily now is in Allied hands, for all tactical purposes.

Enna is 47 miles out of Catania from western Sicily except for one long, rough northern coastal road.

Germans Speed East

Allied observers reported a general retreat along all roads leading up from the centre of Sicily and Italian prisoners declared frankly that German forces in the central sectors were speeding eastward for a quick getaway.

The withdrawal appeared intended for a last stand or possible evacuation in the Catania area of northeastern Sicily, or between Catania and Messina.

Italians complained against their own government as well as the Germans. The Nazis, they declared, were repeating their African tactics of abandoning them every time the situation became hopeless, fleeing in all available transportation.

They asserted their own Fascist government had given them too few guns and too little food, ammunition, transporta, armor and ammunition.

Thrust Beyond Enna

The Canadian and United States troops were speeding deeper into Sicily beyond Enna in a swift, powerful advance. They are only some 40 miles from the north coast of Sicily and they are rapidly cutting the island in two.

(The Italian communique announced earlier Enna had been evacuated. The German High Command bulletin said—that "in the western sector of the Sicilian Front, German and Italian forces unmolested by the enemy executed ordered movements according to plan. British attacks at Catania were repulsed, it claimed.)

The fall of Enna threw the whole Axis command system in the island city in jeopardy, and quick collapse of resistance in the west and central area was threatened.

The west coast, the main highway and railroad lines running east and west across the mountainous island, and the retreat of the German defenders of Catania of from contact with Italian forces in the west.

These Italian troops have been yielding rapidly and readily and surrendering in huge numbers. Most of the German troops apparently are concentrated in the Catania area, hailing Adolf Hitler to hold the 8th Army from sealing off the entire east coast of Sicily by plunging through Enna and on to Messina.

With Enna's fall, the only contact between Catania and western Sicily is by a single, winding road from Palermo and Termini on the north coast down through Mussomeli and Caltanissetta, or by a still longer way along the east coast through Taormina.

Paterno Menaced

Paterno itself is reported threatened by British troops, and the entire Messina-Catania coastal road is vulnerable to Allied naval bombardment.

The Canadian and American troops had thrown a powerful pincers upon the town by advancing from Caltanissetta, taken by the U.S. 7th Army units, and from Piazza Armerina, which fell to the Canadian 1st Division.

Enna is 24 miles north of Gela, and lies 30 miles below the north coast of Sicily. It is one of the keystones of Catania.

The American and Canadians drove on deeper into the island after Enna fell yesterday.

Allied Headquarters, Sir Bernard Montgomery's troops made new gains in the mountainous area left the fields carpeted with enemy dead. Frontline reports indicated the German rear was after were of troops and armor in strong counter-drives against the British advance.

Large numbers of both German and Italian troops were cut in the Enna area were being rounded up, indicating that the Canadians and Americans had swept in too fast to permit them to escape. The total number of prisoners was not stated.

Allied air forces were sweeping over the island in strength in support of the furious assaults aimed at smashing all enemy resistance in the shortest possible time.

Have Allot Ready

No Axis propagandist now dared make public predictions that Sicily would be spared from conquest and occupation. All of them were preparing for a land and sea and in the air—already the Axis had answered by Fascist leaders in Rome, who gloomily spoke of the prospects of retreat from Sicily to the Italian peninsula itself.

But bitter fighting remained in Sicily, and bearing the brunt of it, reports said, was the British 8th Army driving toward Catania on the east coast.

Germna armored units have checked momentarily the 8th Army's drive at the city's environs, but Nazi tank attacks were reported to have been thrown back with bloody enemy losses and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's artillery was gaining strength to smash that key city's defenses and continue on toward Messina, 50 miles away at the extreme northwestern tip of the island.

The United States 7th army which already had overrun Agrigento yesterday, appeared to be delayed in its northward advance aimed at cutting the island in half only by the difficult mountainous terrain.

25,000 Prisoners

More than 25,000 Axis prisoners had been rounded up in the Allied drive, some 5000 by Canadians, and evidence of the hatred the Italians hold for the Germans was mounting.

In some instances crowds had to be strained from attacking German prisoners as they were marched through the streets and the inhabitants habitually broke off their rest-cals at te sight of captured Nazis.

Units of fierce French Moroccan troops, long famous for success as guerilla fighters, have been in action in Sicilian mountains for days, closing details of their activities.

The great aerial war continued to strike at weakening Axis communications, the bombing being particularly upon airfields and hitting road transport.

'Send Us Canadians Every Time,' Says Royal Navy Engineer Officer

At South Coast British Port, July 21 — (CP) — "Send us Canadians every time."

That brief sentence, spoken by a Royal Navy Engineering officer at a Combined Operations Training Base, tells of the high regard in which Canadian men are held for this hazardous and important work they are playing in the Sicilian campaign.

The Combined Ops Navy press release says that intense training prepares them for the ordeals they are now facing front line. Their job was to go in, under enemy fire, and put the troops ashore.

"Assault landing craft aren't any call their little ships—and it's a good name.

"Canadians are just about ideal for this work, the officer quoted said. "They've got imagination, initiative and dash. There's a certain recklessness about the job which Canadians have. They can use as many as you send us."

These young Canucks already have proved their mettle under fire. In the November landings in North Africa, three of them — Lieut. Judd Whitfall, R.C.N.V.R., of Vancouver, Sub-Lt. G. Donaldson, R.C.N.V.R., of Toronto, and PO. (Motor Mechanic) E. Wheeler, R.C.N.V.R., of Montreal and Saint John, N.B.— won mention in dispatches.

Lieut. Whitfall singled out four men of his flotilla for special commendation "for initiative, devotion to duty and courage under fire". Sub.-Lt. Lloyd Williams, R.C.N.V.R., of Vancouver, AB. John P. Fevens, R.C.N.V.R., of Winnipeg, Leading Seaman E. D. Grimmon, R.C.N., of Melford, Ont., ciater lost when his ship was torpedoed and sunk by the German Angus J. Boyd, R.C.N.V.R. Lakevale, N.S.

Experience gained in that action is being used in the training of invasion craft crews and Canadians who proudly wear the special insignia of the Combined Ops" on the left sleeve of their uniform — a pair of Jet Force wings, a Tommy gun, and an anchor.

In special demand are motor mechanics, and the work they do now is undergoing advanced training on marine engines at the Navy's new training centre. While in the United Kingdom they are given pay in R. N. discipline, travel and leave regulations, but are paid in accordance with Navy rates of pay.

One group of Canadian ratings which arrived recently in the United Kingdom for advanced training, all of them sailors first class, included Francis McFarian of Perth, Ont., Arthur Patrick of Kingston, Ont., Leonard Ellis of Brantford, Ont., and Eric Keir of Georgetown, Ont.

RUMANIA FLATLY REFUSES GERMAN DEMANDS, REPORT

Says Nation Will Not Participate In Fighting Against Russia

NAZI THREATS

Istanbul, July 19 (Delayed)—Diplomatic sources said today Premier Antonescu of Rumania has flatly refused German demands that Rumania participate in the fighting this summer against Russia.

Nazi threats are believed to have told Nazi representatives two weeks ago that unless Rumania had made great sacrifices and henceforth would only defend her own soil.

The sources also said that Germany is irritated for this refusal, had threatened to turn pro-Nazi Hungarian troops loose on Rumania to continue anti-semitic activity and terrorist campaigns which Antonescu suppressed late in 1941.

Did Axis Dictators Reach Decision On Defence of Italy?

By RICHARD G. HEADCOCK
(Former Chief of The Associated Press Rome Bureau.)

Washington, July 21 — (AP) — More German legions for defence of Italy were believed here today to be the purpose of the meeting between Mussolini and Hitler at some northern Italian point on a day Rome was bombed. Whether Hitler agreed remains to be seen.

Allied observers heard in roundabout ways some weeks ago that the Germans intended to desert Italy after fighting only a rear guard action in Sicily long enough to permit evacuation of troops.

"It would seem to be the economical in manpower for the Germans to abandon Italy and take up defensive lines on the Austrian side of the Brenner Pass behind the natural fortifications of the Alps.

That was what Hitler had been expected to order.

Blow to Morale of Italians

But now it is thought he must realize the surrender of Italy would be a tremendous blow to the morale on his own front — if not in Germany — at least in the occupied and satellite countries. The Britons, Canadians and Americans, it seems would be able to march across Italy into Yugoslavia and establish the dreaded Balkan front.

Furthermore, Allied bombers could use northern Italian bases for assault against the war industries, communication lines and supply routes in southern Germany, Austria and Hungary.

For these reasons, it was felt that the two dictators may have decided to make a stand in northern Italy, then Italy, stringing a defensive line through the Po Valley.

Assuming this, it was considered not unlikely that Rome would be declared an open city, as was Paris when the Germans moved on the German capital and the government fled to Bordeaux in 1940. Rome presumably would be as hard to defend as Paris.

Says Hungary Half Way on Job

Berne, July 21—(AP)—Nazi pressure is keeping Hungary half way on the job for the Axis despite the Hungarian government's effort to follow its new policy of non-belligerency until the end of the war, Swiss quarters said today.

While Hungarian combat troops were withdrawn from the eastern front last winter after heavy losses other Hungarian units still are maintaining guard along railways stretching from the frontier into Poland and toward the east and to some degree into Yugoslavia.

Communiques published in the press of occupied eastern areas sometimes speak also of Hungarian parachute units but these apparently are small in number.

The railway guards are armed but are not officially regular army groups. The parachutists apparently are volunteers. Premier Nicolas Kallay to state that having brought back the regular troops from the front into the east, Hungary had become non-belligerent.

To make this policy more nearly complete, efforts have been made to win release from the guarding duties on the eastern front. Nevertheless, Hungarian quarters say the government is taking what steps it can to see that it does not get into fighting.

Russian Hungary Feels Helpless

The press is being permitted to speak more freely of the general situation confronting the Axis, and increased purchase of newspapers from neutral countries has been noted recently to give the people a better chance of getting news from the Allied side.

Allied observers continue to believe Hungary would get out of the war tomorrow if she could but that she feels helpless to do anything at the moment.

RUSSIANS ARE WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF OREL

Fighting Spreads Along 400 Miles of Front But Fiercest Battle Near the Naz Base

20 VILLAGES CAPTURED

(By WILLIAM McGAFFIN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, July 21 — (AP)—Fighting along the Russian front spread, to the southern Donetz and Mius River sectors yesterday as Red Army troops consolidated their after lost in their drive tp encircle the Germans at Orel on the central front, but limitation reported today.

(A Reuters News Agency dispatch from London said that the 22nd Red Army had reached Ermolaeva, which is located as less than seven miles east of Orel.)

Fighting Flares in River

Russian armies thus were on the move on a front extending some 400 miles south from Orel to a point southwest of Voroshilovgrad, where the Soviet midnight communique said Russian forces had crossed the Mius river, improving their positions.

Heaviest fighting still raged, however, in the vicinity of Orel, where the Soviet army was closing in around the German supply base. Advances of from four to nine miles were reported during the day's fighting which saw the Germans in their own futile counter-attacks in an effort to halt the Russian advance.

Among the towns captured by the Russians, Reuters reported, was Mtsensk, 21 miles northeast of Orel. Farther Russian advances also were reported pushing on to the west.

The Red Army force operating directly east of Orel meanwhile, the bulletin said, captured 20 villages in the day's fighting, including the railway station town of Vorsablino. On the southern flank a Soviet force took the town of Arkhangelsk, 39 miles from Orel, the communique said.

Constant Counter-Attacks

Russian advances were met by stubborn resistance all along the line, the war bulletin declared. Nazi counter-attacks were launched constantly, Red Army men routed one, two and three battalion strength at a time, the bulletin said.

Russians reported the desperate Nazi thrusts were accompanied by the same heavy loss of life which has marked the campaign which has marked the battle on the central front since fighting began July 5.

The Russians also reported action on the Kuban bridgehead on the Kursk salient in the vicinity of Belgorod. Here the Red Army has been engaged ersasing the gains which the German army made in the opening days of the battle.

Allied Bombers Attack Convoy On Way to Munda

Third Destroyer Believed Sunk and Another Destroyer And Transport Hit

FOUR BOMBERS LOST

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, July 21—(AP)—Allied bombers were credited with sinking three of two destroyers and a Japanese convoy attempting vainly to run the Allied sea and air blockade around the Munda airbase and the Solomons.

In the face of three cruisers, six destroyers and two transports, undoubtedly seeking to aid the hardpressed garrison at Munda, Allied bombers and fighters flung boats shortly after midnight yesterday in Vella Gulf just west of Kolombangara and Arundel.

The Catalinas followed the convoy and strong formations of heavy bombers arrived and blasted at least three warships in the harbors and sent the remainder fleeing or limping northward.

3rd Destroyer Probably Sunk

A third destroyer was listed as probably sunk, and a transport and yet another destroyer were damaged.

Four bombers were lost.

The action, described in today's communique from Allied Headquarters, served to maintain steady pressure on Munda, big airbase on New Georgia Island, which has been hit by land, sea and air attack since the Americans landed.

Yesterday's attack came to crack the Munda blockade brought to 17 the number of Japanese warships listed officially as having been sunk in the Solomons and adjacent waters since the Solomons. Five more are considered probably lost.

Allied air power has moved slowly in on Munda were aided yesterday by bombers which dropped 18 tons of bombs on Japanese gun positions along a perimeter about two miles east of the airdrome.

Another Destroyer Bombed

An enemy destroyer at anchor in the Harbor of Sarong, Dutch New Guinea, was bombed and damaged and set afire.

Sarong is the fuel dump at the Akyshaten airdrome on New Guinea.

DONALD STEWART WILL SUPERVISE BY-ELECTION

House-to-House Check on Montreal Cartier Enumeration

PROCEDURE

Ottawa, July 21. (CP) —State Secretary Gordon announced today in the House of Commons that Thomas Stewart, assistant chief electoral officer, will supervise the August 16 general by-election in the constituency of Montreal Cartier.

Mr. McLarty said there had not been time to make full inquiry into election procedure in the city by day by M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, that the voters' lists had been riding had been padded by including the names of deceased persons and babies.

Mr. McLarty said Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer, had recommended it would be inadvisable to have a complete re-enumeration in the riding, but he had suggested that supervising enumerators be appointed to make a thorough house-to-house check of the enumeration in each polling division. There would be two supervising enumerators for each division.

Under existing conditions in the riding, Mr. McLarty said "the failure and mistaken judgment" of choosing the supervising enumerators rested with the clerk should be named by the government candidate and the two political interests.

Begin Work Thursday

As there are two candidates running in opposition to the Liberal, Mr. McLarty, said, there should nominate one-half of the opposition candidates.

Each supervising enumerator will be given a certain number of instance of duty on a special form prescribed by the chief electoral officer. They will begin work Thursday morning, July 22, and complete it by Saturday night, July 24.

GEN. McNAUGHTON VIEWS INVASION AT FIRST HAND

Praises Canadian Troops Whom He Has Seen on Sicilian Front

INVASION PERFECT

Algiers, July 21. (CP)—Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Overseas Army, has been to the Sicilian front to see the Allied invasion in general by an officially announced last night.

On his return to North Africa from the front, Gen. McNaughton said the invasion "is the most perfect example of combined operations the world has ever seen."

Proud of the part Canadian troops played in the assault on the Italian island, he declared described the operation carried out by the Canadians as "a wonderful achievement" and "a pretty remarkable feat".

He also attributed the success of the Canadian troops in their first major action to two things—training, the fact that the Canadian Army is a "trained army" and secondly, because the fact every officer and man was at the peak of physical fitness after their long training in Canada and Great Plains For Attack.

Gen. McNaughton was his old familiar self—frank, energetic and keen, and full of praise for Canadians.

"It was a pretty remarkable feat to see the part of Canadians, who assembled our forces on plans worked out in England and Africa. Very few officers had any personal contact with each other. There was a great deal of planning which was transmitted to us in England, and then to Africa.

"Landings had to be scheduled with precision and timing and every craft had to be marshalled, vehicles and equipment and supplies loaded so the right materials would be able to come out as they were needed in the landing.

"The ships were marshalled in perfect order. The rendezvous was made to the minute. Intricate manoeuvres and plans had to be made and the forces touched down on the beaches at the exact time."

Legend of 'Undefeated German Army' Must Be Wiped Out by Allies

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 21 —(AP)— The German General Staff can not Hitler — will decide to call it quits. They may be already playing with the idea of writing off this war, he thinks, even though there's long and bitter fighting ahead.

But they believe, he said, would lead to the final decision when the German people are beginning to realize a horror of war they'll never forget; when fighting on German soil has ended everywhere.

Then watch out for their campaign to maintain to the myth of the "undefeated German army."

This observer said they probably would operate this way:

1. Eliminate Hitler — even at the risk of civil war with the Fuehrer's own S.S. Troops and the Gestapo.

2. Begin a campaign to win sympathy, arguing they were forced into waging war.

3. If the chance came to sow the seeds for another war, they would revive the same old tune, revive especially the German army.

15 PAGES COUPONS STOLEN FROM TRUCK

Despite the stiff penalties provided for anyone attempting to pass off loose gasoline ration coupons when purchasing gas at service stations, there appparently is some one in the Belleville district willing to try it. On Saturday Mr. Percy Ray of the Harold district north of Stirling packed his truck on the Belleville market and unwittingly left his gasoline ration book in the cab. When he returned to the truck 15 pages of ration coupons were missing from the book.

"That many coupons represents exactly 180 gallons of gasoline that I will be needing before the summer is out," lamented Mr. Ray as he made known his loss to the Ontario Intelligencer, Mr. Ray uses his truck principally to draw milk to his district cheese factory and indicates he would need all the gasoline permitted him by the rationing board.

Petty Complaints Annoy Railwaymen

It would be expected that with train delays increasing that there be a stricted on account of the war that there would be many complaints of the armed forces on leave and wanting seats in the trains and the government asking people to travel only if necessary, that people doing not absolutely have to travel themselves would be thankful if they could get a seat. Nevertheless the thoughtlessness of passengers who apparently do not see this aspect of the picture. He pointed to two coaches which were to be attached to the local train, and wondered why more people objected to riding in these coaches.

These he said were coaches who had arrived on a train a few days earlier. There were two days on her coach, and the one which she tried to leave by first was filthy. She complained loudly to the brakeman, who explained to her that this coach was being kept there for a safety precaution. She was not at all satisfied, and was shouting to the departing shot that she was going to report it and see if something couldn't be done about it.

Rather irked by such a fuss over such a small matter, the brakeman reported the affair to the station master. It was then that the crowning significance of the incident was seen and that was added to injury. The outraged conductor muttered: "Hmph! And she was travelling on a pass!"

AXIS PARTNERS MEET IN ITALY FOR CONFERENCE

Observers Believe Plans for Italian Defence Were Discussed

IN DILEMMA

By THOMAS HAWKINS
Associated Press War Writer

Berne, July 21 — (AP) — Informed diplomatic circles expressed belief today that Adolf Hitler had made an urgent appeal to Hitler for more help in the battle with the growing threatened country when the Axis partners met in conference in northern Italy — perhaps Verona.

These sources agreed that the immediate events in the Battle of Sicily had prompted the conference, which apparently was held after Mussolini was pounded Rome, but most of them felt the situation in Italy itself was the main topic of discussion.

In reaching this conclusion they pointed to recent Axis statements hinting that both Germany and Italy realized the supreme importance of Sicily as a lost cause.

The Italian command admitted that the Axis has given up hope of holding the island the next line of defence must be on the Italian mainland, and that the battle must now be found of withdrawing the remnants of the Sicilian force and reorganizing them on the mainland landing.

Obviously, informed sources said, one of the big problems of effecting this withdrawal is that of air power. They pointed out that even the Axis forces have overwhelming Allied air superiority in the Sicilian theatre, while still more have recorded only negligible resistance by their aerial assaults.

Military observers estimate the Axis has 5,000 to 6,000 planes in the Sicilian theatre compared with this approximately 1,800 to 2,100 Allied. It is said to be fighter planes, backed up by a reserve of unknown quantity.

They agreed that if the Allies are to be quarantined on Sicily and the Italian mainland saved by an effective delaying action on the island this reserve must be used in the battle.

They pointed out, however, that the question is a tough one for Hitler, since it is upon the strength of these which a larger and better trained than the Italian, that the brunt of the fighting would fall.

Would Ignore Plea

Military and diplomatic circles expressed the belief today that one of the purpose of the Hitler-Mussolini conference was to take up an Italian plea for additional help, it Duce probably did not get very far.

Since Germany's war resources are not unlimited, these sources said, they doubted Hitler could rush very strong reinforcements into Italy from Germany.

They also noted that Axis communiques reporting the meeting made no mention of decisions being reached, but failed to sound the usual note on "cordiality" of discussions and "unanimity" of decision.

It was considered significant, too, that Hitler flew to the meeting —indicating perhaps it was called hurriedly.

The conference coincided with reports from Sicily that Italian troops were revolting against their German commanders, with rumors of increasing uneasiness in the Balkan.

Meets Hurriedly

The Moscow radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Soviet Monitor here, said that the Bulgarian parliament met in extraordinary session yesterday and that all leaves had been cancelled and soldiers already on leave had been ordered to return to their units immediately.

The Moscow radio also reported that the Governor of the Banja Luka region in Yugoslavia had been killed by guerillas and Tass, official Soviet News agency, quoted an Istanbul dispatch as saying that the assassination had resulted in the declaration of a state of emergency in the area.

Compulsory Transfer Order Is Clarified

Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local Employment and Selective Service office, states that from enquiries received it seems that there may be some confusion as to who are covered by the Thirty Compulsory Employment Transfer Order, which was issued recently by the Minister of Labour under National Selective Service regulations. (A series of advertisements on this Order has appeared in all daily papers).

According to the Selective Service Manager, any contractor in the industries and occupations intended by the Order, probably arose over the method listing of certain wholesale activities and lines of manufacture. In the case of wholesaling, the entire industry is covered by this Order, except in those three branches of the industry which are specified in the Order. Reverse treatment is given in manufacturing, because the Thirty Order brings under the transfer system those divisions of manufacturing which it specifies. Apart from wholesaling and manufacturing, a few other occupations are also covered by the Order.

As a clarification the Local Employment Office gives the following list of activities as covered by the Third Order:

(1) Raising of special livestock, such as fur animals and dogs, goats and other pets; (2) flower growing; (3) commercial nurseries, except tree surgery; (4) leather currying, finishing, and boasting and japanning.

(5) Manufacture or sale of these lines: fur goods; (b) curtains and draperies; (c) rugs and carpets; (d) household furniture (except mattresses and upholstery); (e) awnings and signature frames; (f) hand bags and (g) leather goods.

Any wholesale activity not in the following lines: (a) food products, other than tobacco; (b) building materials; (c) plumbing, heating and ventilating supplies; (d) electrical equipment; (e) industrial use; machinery and equipment; gasoline, oils and greases; fuel and ice; farm supplies; furniture and household; (f) chemicals; paper and its products; books, newspapers, periodicals and sheet music; watches, clocks and timing instruments; (g) jewellery and leather; scrap metal, junk and waste.

It should be pointed out that any employers or employees who have previously unauthorized to do so should immediately get in touch with the Selective Service Office at once.

The Order requires the registration of men in civilian employment for the types specified, which are in the armed forces, and certain classes already designated under mobilization regulations. The Order requires persons 16, 17 and 18 years of age. Further, it is not to be applied to persons required to retain in employment men of the types specified except under Selective Service permit.

HOLLYWOOD'S Whipped Cream LATHER BEAUTY CARE

London Letter

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 21. (CP)—You can't get away from the war in London. Dover, Liverpool or Glasgow, but there are places in between that it is hard at times to realize the country is in the midst of history's greatest conflict.

War is written on the faces of people of the big cities and coastal areas. And Invasion target for hit-and-run raiders, for these people, war is their job, whether it be in a civilian defence or government office. On top of that there are queues, identity cards, fire-watching, allotments and sundry other volunteer jobs to be done in spare time. At night war plagues their dreams.

In Secluded Districts.

But the war seems parts of another world—in secluded districts of Wales, Scotland, Cornwall, Lincolnshire and the Isle of Man. Take a spot like Budleigh Salterton, a sleepy chalmy town of 3,000.

It's mostly a town of old folk, retired men and women living in flower-decked homes, content-minded their own business. Everything is peaceful and quiet except for the sound of mid-day chalk cliffs and hills which glitter in the sunlight, and sunshine.

Nobody stopping at this seaside resort for a day, a week or a fortnight, knows that the war is on—but not quite. Dashed wire coiling about the coast, or listening the controlling roar of R.A.F. planes heading toward France or coming home after completing their mission, serve as reminders. Serenity Broken by Rumble.

Sometimes, too, the serenity is broken by the distant rumble of heavy coastal guns as German batteries open up on a passing British convoy. But these things have become part of the atmosphere. They might have been going on in centuries ago, for all the longest they arouse.

German bombers have passed overhead, on their way to more important targets, but only a few have stopped to machine-gun or bomb the area.

Occasionally Canadian soldiers on leave find their way to this haven, but as sea-side hotels populated by persons too old to find a niche in the war effort. These people also mind their own business and the soldiers find it difficult to break down their natural British reserve.

While do Canadians and British people talk about when they meet for the first time? It depends on how long the Canadian has been in the country.

One of the first questions a British man asks: "How long have you been here?" If the answer is only a few months, the second and inquisitive will most likely ask about British-Canadian relations. Then a long and friendly talk about Canada. He figures that anybody living here can't help but have heard just about everything there is to tell. The appetite for Canadian news, however, seems insatiable.

Alleges Co-operation Of Electoral Officer In Voting Problem

Ottawa, July 21. (CP)— Defence Minister Ralston Tuesday told a questioner in the House of Commons that the officer of the department have asked the Ontario chief electoral officer what arrangements be being made for the absentee service soldiers in camp to vote in the Aug. 4 provincial election but that no reply has been received.

He said the Defence department had offered to co-operate in any way it could.

The question was raised by Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member for Leeds, who said it was apparent many Reserve army men would be in camp on election day and might lose their votes.

W. J. Prince (PC), Prince Edward-Lennox said between 600 and 700 men from his riding would be in camp on election day.

Col. Ralston said his department had apprehended the possibility of the men not being able to vote but it was their responsibility of the chief electoral officer of the province.

British Cruiser Smashes Sicilian Junction Point

By PAUL KERN LEE
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Aboard a British Cruiser Shelling Catania, July 18. (Delayed) (AP) —This cruiser took the road from the Catania main railway station this morning at the bullet-spit level.

The target was cleverly selected as it was a point where the highway and the railroad intersect, and a route along which the Axis must move troops, either south as reinforcements or north in retreat.

Intermittent bombardments of such Axis key points and batteries continued throughout the day. Meanwhile, artillery fighting again was visible ashore in the Primosole bridge area, a zone of Catania, only three miles from the city.

The Axis evidently is throwing a large force into the defence of the Catania area, as it is the best-defended city between Augusta and Messina.

Farther north, the rugged mountain country around Mount Etna, was considered likely more formidable than any fixed defences.

The mountain and lava bed fields should give cover for an advance in that sector.

Chinese Paper Urges Italians Heed Allied Call

Chungking, July 20 — (AP)— The Chinese Catholic newspaper, Social Welfare, today expressed the hope that the bombing of Rome would stimulate the Italian people to "wake up and live for Italy and Roman civilization."

The paper urged that the Italians heed the call of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt for an honorable capitulation. It regarded the bombing of Rome as a forerunner of the invasion of the Italian mainland.

Moscow, July 20 — (AP) — The Russian people hailed the American bombing of Rome which was reported fully in the Soviet press today.

Various Russians said they were particularly impressed that the Allies were able to send 300 planes over Rome after deliberately warning the Italians that they were coming.

Belfast, July 20 — (CP) — Prime Minister Eamon De Valera's newspaper, Irish Press, in the burning of Rome by Allied planes "will astound many in Britain, the United States and other nations.

"It is for us grievous tidings indeed," the newspaper said. "Surely it is possible even now to have Rome classed as open city."

The Irish Times and other Dublin papers suggested that De Valera ask the Italian government to declare Rome an open city and approach the British and United States governments at the same time with requests to cease raids on the city pending a reply.

10-Year-Old Boy Suffers From Bullet Wound

Pembroke, Ont., July 21. (CP)— Gerald Leblanc, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Leblanc of Cobalt, Ont., is in the Military Hospital at Petawawa Camp with a bullet wound in the head, and the police have to have seen suffered when a guard looking for an escaped war prisoner fired at the Leblanc truck as it failed to stop when a sentry challenged.

The incident occurred late Sunday night, but details were not available until today because of the absence of provincial police who investigated the shooting.

Police said the LeBlanc family, who have been in Cornwall, Ont., for the past year, were returning to Cobalt, the parents and daughter, Muriel, in the cab of a light delivery truck add Gerald in the back.

Highway 17 runs through the Petawawa camp and when the LeBlanc truck had gone about three miles from the camp entrance when it was challenged at a crossing by two members of the Veterans Guard of Canada who were stopping traffic through the area. They said that when the truck did not stop one of the guards fired a shot which struck the gasoline tank on the side of the head.

Search for fugitive Krebs, the missing war prisoner, is continuing. He escaped last week with another prisoner who has been recaptured.

Heard 80,000 Cases Less Than 40 Appeals

Galt, Ont., July 20. (CP)— John R. Blake, 77, who retired as police magistrate in January, 1942, died early today in hospital where he was taken Sunday after suffering a heart attack.

He was born in Elora but came to Galt as a boy and had lived here ever since. It was on Jan. 30, 1890, seven years after he had graduated from law school, that Mr. Blake became magistrate for Galt. His judgment on the Bench was later recognized when he was appointed magistrate for Waterloo County. He also presided for some time in courts at Brantford and Guelph. At the time of his death he was juvenile court judge here.

In his 43 years on the bench Magistrate Blake heard 80,000 cases and there were less than 40 appeals.

Dozens More Towns Fall to Russians

London, July 20. (AP)— Several dozen more populated places have been captured on the Orel front where Russian armies are advancing on the German base from three sides, the Moscow radio said early tonight.

The Germans were bringing up fresh forces and resisting stubbornly, the broadcast said.

Less than 24 hours earlier, the Russians said officially they had overrun 16 populated places in sweeps on Orel from the north, east and south. The base is 20 miles south of Moscow and just north of the Kursk salient where the Germans were frustrated in an offensive they launched July 5.

Overseas Proxies Arriving Soon

Toronto, July 20 — Major Alex Lesis, chief election officer for Ontario, said today that proxies from overseas are on their way and should arrive shortly.

"I had word this morning from G. H. Ward, our agent in England, who stated that the proxies were on their way," said Major Lewis.

"The reason for delay seems to be that the men are now in completing and returning their proxies. Everything was done in England to assist the men in completing their forms."

When the proxies arrive they will be delivered directly to the person authorized to vote on behalf of the servicemen and these people must then go before their revising officer to have the names of the overseas voters placed on the lists.

HOUSE OF LORDS GAVE FIRST READING OF BILL

London, July 21 (CP Cable)—The House of Lords gave first reading to the "British North America Bill 1943" which provides for appointment of redistribution of Canada's House of Commons seats until after the war.

Viscount Cranborne, government leader, said the Canadian Government had particularly requested the British Government that parliament pass the bill before July 24.

Alleges Irregularities In Voters' Lists In Montreal Cartier

Ottawa, July 21 (CP)—M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said in the House of Commons today that nonresident persons and babies had been placed on the Voters' List for the Montreal Cartier Federal by-election Aug. 9 and demanded immediate action by the government to end irregularities.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the government would take steps to see the by-election was conducted fairly. Election laws were made by parliament and the authority to enforce them or correct weaknesses must be assumed to rest with parliament, he added.

For more than an hour after Mr. Coldwell moved adjournment of the House to discuss a matter of urgent public importance—the alleged irregularities in preparation of the Voters' List—members engaged in vigorous debate.

Montreal members protested a statement by Mr. Coldwell that Montreal was "a paradise for telegraphers," meaning those who participated in the padding of Voters' Lists.

Following the discussion Mr. Coldwell said he was prepared to withdraw his motion that the House adjourn since he felt it had served its purpose by bringing the position into the open. The C.C.F. leader said he would ask Mr. King later what steps had been taken to ensure the election would be conducted fairly.

War Goes Well

The war is going so well that Prime Minister Churchill said to a private meeting of party members on Monday that "I am almost afraid to say how well," and J. H. Wooten-Davies one of the members attending stated that Mr. Churchill "left no doubt in our minds that the Allied armies are marching forward as a victorious army."

The progress of the war with the initiative in Allied hands is the result of the weight of the accumulation of the resources, material and spiritual, of the United free peoples. They have no evil on their minds for which to blame themselves, they realize that they have a great duty, to preserve for all time the freedom which so many of the nations have developed, so they give themselves, and their strength, their lives and undergo hardships for the sake of the freedom which they have known and for the expansion of freedom.

Never in history was the line so sharply drawn between the oppressing forces. On the one hand are lined up the peace loving nations, who did not want war. On the other is a looting trio of nations, recognizing no law but force of the most brutal character. No man nor group can stand in doubt where the duty of the day and the hour lies — it lies with the United Nations, the hope of the opening future. The enemy "people" have given proof of the law which is as true as life, that the soul that sinneth it shall surely die. Of nations that give themselves over to evil courses, that is same moral fact is true, just as it can be seen in individual lives.

Great moral principles have exalted the souls of the United Nations. In their victories they have no dishonor but they have the glory of faith and manhood. But on the enemy there is the double curse, that they have been following a course of evil reaching their hearts to evil and that they must go down to defeat and destruction because of their evil.

It is no wonder that in the long run the war is going well. This can be said without undue optimism. The full sweep of power in weapons, numbers of men and in their spirit must reveal itself as the weaknesses of the Hitler system stand clearly marked. Hitler's repression and cruelties gave him power in Germany as Mussolini's in Italy but they have left the Axis without those spiritual and moral fortifications and arms, which work to victory.

In a Northern Italian Town

Those who have been wondering about Hitler read on Tuesday that he and his partner in conspiracy, Mussolini, met in an unnamed town in "North Italy" to talk over the war. It must have been a gloomy meeting with the battered Mussolini, would-be hero of a war of aggression, blaming his conduct the evidences of defeat and disaster, and the Nazi chief not feeling in spirit for over them both hangs the dark cloud of defeat, Hitler unable to let go of the war in Russia to push on and unable to strike with oldtime power and the Duce facing invasion of Italy and imminent loss of the important island of Sicily.

Pictures were one time shown of Hitler dancing a jig before the captains of the Germanic host on French soil, in 1940, or gesticulating on the occasion of meeting Mussolini, or the Duce, goose-stepping down the "Unter Den Linden" in Berlin leading the Italian cohorts in the goose-step for the first time, though he late explained it by saying it was the Roman step or pace.

No one can imagine any of those antics when one of the guilty pair whose fate is ticking off the months, weeks, days and hours that remain of their evil ways, did meet on Monday. Gloom must have been a third party to their conference and they have been laced and whipped and disappointed if ever conspirators were.

Little consolation could have come out of that meeting. Mussolini could do or not tool what Hitler said or threatened or what Mussolini tried to explain or how they disagreed or parted. The world only knows that two men of evil passions who tried to bring the world to an eclipse will themselves pass to the darkness of night and that they cannot prevent the doom that will come to them.

The world shows it gets along without these men. They sought to rule mankind, but the united world decides the strategy of war that will wipe them out. They will not be the men who will decide the destiny of the world. Free people, of the spirit of Churchill and Roosevelt, Stalin, Chiang Kai-Shek and Madame Chiang, and the leaders of the Nazi-dominated nations and the representatives of the United peoples will make decisions that are winning the war, that will doom those pigmies, the two Axis dictators for they are infinitesimally small despite their brutal use of power.

Fire Figures

Fires in Ontario for the second quarter of this year caused the deaths of eleven men, one woman and three children and injuries to forty-four men, three women and five children. These facts are a reminder of the constant menace of fire to life as well as to property.

This quarter showed a decrease of 295 fires from the same quarter last year, or 3,708 fires against 4,003. The total loss which was $2,030,747 was less than in 1942 by $617,992. The insurance was was $1,796,202. This quarter carried on the reduction in fires which was noted in the first quarter, the half year total of 1943 being 7,321 against 8,419 for the first half of last year.

In the matter of prosecutions for fires, there were four convictions for arson, two acquittals and two cases pending, three convictions for attempted arson and one pending, one conviction of attempt to defraud and one acquittal, and one for conspiracy to defraud, one acquittal, and two convictions for perjury. In addition to these cases there was a fine set by an insane person and two children admitted setting fires but no prosecutions followed.

Of 3,676 fires listed for causes as usual the largest number were fires due to smoking, cigars, cigarettes, and carelessness in smoking, though the average loss was not as large as in case of other fires, the total loss being $113,734, but even this is a sizeable amount. Stoves and furnaces were the cause of fifty-five, defective rent, sparks on roof fourth in order and matches 223, causing $80,884 total loss. Hot ashes and coals followed as causes and chimneys, flues and stacks next. Lightning struck 75 places causing fire on unrodded buildings and in 2 buildings rodded before 1922. Fires on roofs were as follows, in case of wooden shingles 235, and fabricated roofs one.

How to Cut Grass

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

The best system is to keep the grass short by cutting it at least once a week. Then you won't have to rake up the clippings. But if the grass gets too tall, the cuttings will lie there and "burn out" the lawn. As grass grows tall it becomes tender, and after a cutting, the hot sun burns it up.

You can save a lot of raking and hard pushing if you will set the lawn mower blades higher, say, to 1½ or two inches from the bed knife to the surface of the ground — and cut the lawn at least once a week. Then the grass cuttings can be allowed to lie without interfering with the growth of the lawn. In fact, they will form a mulch or fertilizer. But if the cuttings are long enough to lie on top and turn brown, then they should be raked off.

ABOUT GARDENERS

I would not say they love a garden much
Who never stoop the gracious earth to touch
Or think the sun too furious today
At work among the marigolds to stay.

Not gardeners they, however large the place
Or filled with blooms above the common place,
If all the charm is left to others' toil
And they who own have never turned the soil.

Not gardeners they who call the flowers by name,
But have not known the pangs by which they came,
Their constant nurture and the war with weeds
Trusting to strangers all a garden needs.

Who loves a garden will have much to bear.
Who loves the flowers their agonies must share.
For them must work with patience day by day,
Learn all their moods and keep their hours at play.

"But we are in the midst of a war that will require his leadership to carry us through to a successful conclusion," Murray said.

Declares Fascists Could Have Made Bombing Unnecessary

Detroit, July 21. (AP)—Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Roman Catholic archbishop of Detroit, and chairman of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, in a statement Tuesday expressed horror and regret at the bombing of Rome, but added that the Italian government of Italy could have made bombing unnecessary.

The Fascist government, the Archbishop said, "could have declared Rome an open city and acted in obedience conformity with that declaration".

He took note of the "elaborate precautions" which he said the Italian authorities took to avoid damaging what all men of culture hold dear and hundreds of millions of Christians hold still more sacred, that is the sense of, surprise and regrets means".

She carried the younger boy a quarter of a mile to the family home where members of the local Hydro Electric Power Commission tested a safety over the body for more than an hour and a half in an effort to revive him.

Declares Fascists Could Have Made Bombing Unnecessary

Detroit, July 21. (AP)—Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Roman Catholic archbishop of Detroit, and chairman of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, in a statement Tuesday expressed horror and regret at the bombing of Rome, but added that the Italian government of Italy could have made bombing unnecessary.

The Fascist government, the Archbishop said, "could have declared Rome an open city and acted in obedience conformity with that declaration".

He took note of the "elaborate precautions" which he said the Italian authorities took to avoid damaging what all men of culture hold dear and hundreds of millions of Christians hold still more sacred, that is the sense of, surprise and regrets means".

"One shudders of think of the moral risks which the bombers take" the statement continued. "This war will not be won merely on land and sea or in the air. It will be won in the hearts and minds of men. A heavy bomb, even if it destroys only Rome may do moral harm to our cause that far outweighs the military value of the most accurate destruction of enemy supplies.

"May we not hope at least that having shown his inefficiency in every strategy in hiding supplies under the cover of sanctity and culture, we will not subject him further risk the moral idealism that distinguishes our cause from his pagan".

Archbishop Mooney described the

Jottings From Notebook Of War Correspondent

By ROSS MUNRO

Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians on Sicily, July 17 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable) — Sitting in a war correspondent's notebook:

Canadian troops have been helping to clean up Ragusa, Blackshirt headquarters and capital of Ragusa province which takes in the southeast corner of Sicily.

About 300 Italians had persisted in sniping from buildings after Canadians and Americans took over the city so a company of tanks went into the town to straighten it up. They patrolled the streets, shot a few snipers and established order.

Air support is one-sided during the daytime with the R.A.F. and U.S.A.A.F. sweeping the skies. We are getting careless about looking for aircraft while driving our jeep because we seldom see the enemy in the skies.

Snipers continue to be our worry. At along the front I hear stories of vicious sniping by Italian soldiers who lie in wait for small groups of men or lone vehicles. But only a few Germans and the Italian forces the Canadians and Americans had encountered surrender and continue as snipers.

On three or four roads coming to Ragusa I have seen hundreds upon hundreds of prisoners in gray or khaki uniforms, Germans mostly, are sailors among them. One night I spent at headquarters and chatted in a vaulted nobleman's mansion with a number of German officers and non-commissioned officers were sitting in the court-yard ready to surrender.

Prisoners are no longer a novelty to Canadians or of them trudge back without escort. I saw an auxiliary service driver lift and bring a couple of Canadians guiding 300 Italians down the hills.

In Modica, a town of about 40,000, I saw Italian soldiers wandering around the streets.

In the central square of the town which has three magnificent churches and winding streets crepting up the cliffside, there were piles of smashed Italian rifles and ammunition, littered with Italian helmets.

Frequently I talk with Italian civilians who say they have lived in New York, San Francisco, Toronto or Montreal. In Modica a crowd gathered around our jeep and a one-legged Italian scrambled and he had lived in New York for eight years. He said "The people here like you." They certainly are not unfriendly.

Italians who left their homes when the Allies landed now are returning with what they piled back with household goods, children, chickhickes. But only a few have arrived in Sicily and now the major problem is food shortages.

Heat is becoming worse. The sun is blinding and hot. Dust from roads piles up like a snowbank. Vehicles are chalky white, Flies, mosquitoes and the dust make a disagreeable combination. Water is used sparingly for meat clean.

We drink chlorated water now, while eating "compo" rations like those of the Tunisian forces.

Eisenhower Appeals to Sicilians For Help in Destroying Nazi Yoke

London, July 21 (CP)—A proclamation by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean Sea, appealing to the Sicilian people for quick help in the "final phase of the battle for Sicily" and promising them liberties of religion, speech and press was broadcast from Algiers.

Eisenhower's proclamation, as recorded here, repeated the statement of Gen. Alexander of September last Sunday that the Fascist party and all of its organizations and associations would be dissolved. The Allied commander went further, however, in promising to "restore Italy as a free nation."

"The Allied forces are occupying Sicily," the proclamation declared. "They are acting, not as enemies of the Italian people, but as the inelutable consequence of their own action in the task of destroying the dominating force of Germany in Europe.

"Sicilians, I call upon the people of Italy from the Fascist regime which dragged it into war. And, once this is done, to restore Italy as a free nation.

The Allied forces do not have designs on Italian territory, minimizing the laws and the traditional customs of the Italian people."

Bombing and Our Losses

From the London Spectator.

Bombing is an outstanding subtle activity which we must not forget the invisible, indispensable activity of the Royal Navy. Since the war bels has been comforting his countrymen with the statement that the admitted losses are such that the raids cannot be maintained on a large enough scale.

That would not be at all much consolation if it were not that the question were not being sometimes asked here whether we can afford losses of 44 a night. On that it may be observed that 44 a night is a maximum. The total loss of bombers in raids on Germany and Italy is not more than $30. That, of course, is not negligible. It means some thing in money, over 2,000 brave and highly-trained men are missing, many of them killed and prisoners of war.

How trifling is such payment for the immense damage inflicted when compared for example, with the slaughter of the Somme, which lasted for 141 days, and destroyed in the capture of a strip of territory thirty miles long and seven miles deep. Our total casualties must no doubt be taken into account, but that total is 300,000 British casualties.

How does that of aircraft compare with the supply? It is being steadily increased. Quite apart from the factories of Britain, the United States is producing at the rate of 6,000 a month, or twenty times our present losses. When all is allowed for the fact that only a proportion of these are heavy bombers, that they are based in combat in other theatres than Germany, that they are not based everywhere, and that much of the output must go to replace wastage and the Pacific theatre, it will be seen that the Air Force will remain the activity against Germany is far from even beginning to look like dawning.

ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA

Arrangements are being made to have the reading rights to Encyclopedia Britannica translated into Chinese and made available to libraries in China.

This will be the first time this great reference work has been translated into a foreign language. Eight Chinese characters are required in making the translation and the work is under the staff of scholars about two years.

The 24 volumes which will consist of the Encyclopedia Britannica contain about 37,000,000 words. The first edition consisted of three volumes, printed on "fine paper," which sold for six-pence apiece.

Five editions of the Encyclopedia Britannica were issued between 1768 and 1817 by which time the work already consisted of 20 volumes.

The library at Mount Vernon George Washington had a set of the third edition. The "supplement" appearance about the time of the constitution was adopted.

Ownership of the Encyclopedia Britannica has been controlled since 1829 by Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, which financed the publication because the destruction of the plates was threatened by the bankruptcy of the publishers.

Early this year Sears, Roebuck & Co. made an outright gift of the Encyclopedia Britannica to the University of Chicago. The mail order house explained that this was done because the enterprise "is not suited to our business."

The University of Chicago does not intend actively to operate the Encyclopedia Britannica but the university staff will act in an advisory capacity while the present encyclopedia staff continues to publish the work.

This is not the first time that the Encyclopedia Britannica has been identified with a university. The famous eleventh edition of the work was edited, in conjunction with the faculties of Cambridge University in England and was known as the Cambridge Edition.

The word "Britannica" is spelled with only one "t", it is caused by the written incorrectly with two.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Courtesy, Like Bread Cast Upon the Waters, Always Returns tw-o-Fold

Courtesy is like a boomerang. Every courteous word you say and every courteous deed you do, returns to you.

Watch yourself for a week and see if this isn't true. Watch courtesy in your heart, in your spirit. Then watch this in kind words and acts to other people. This is just another way of saying the old truth that manners is the spirit; manners are the expression of the spirit. Be considerate at all times, not just when it happens to be convenient to you or when you want to impress people. Keep this ideal close to you; don't take it on and off, as you do your gloves.

If it has been your habit to do and say only what pleases you, you'll undoubtedly pass through a period of self-consciousness. But keep practising this ideal of courtesy, and see what happens. If you're blunt with yourself, you will admit that some days you're more courteous than you think you should be, and other days you're not courteous enough. Be honest with yourself and with other people like you better, too.

Wherever you go and with whomever you are, be courteous—to your family, your co-workers, people who serve you in any capacity, large or small.

Remember to do the little kindnesses, to express the little courtesies. If your life be made of acting as you would like to have others act toward you, overlook it, and repeat this habit until it becomes natural. Your courtesy will defeat their rudeness.

You'll find also that, in this week in which you are trying to be ideally considerate to other people, you will tap inner fonts of graciousness that you never before realized existed. These discoveries will be of your life permanently, and as a lubricant that will make the social machinery run smoothly.

If at the end of this trial week, you have been better and kinder to other people better, you will transform your conscious effort into the habit of mannerliness. And this means you will be developing a fine character. Increasing your self-esteem and provoking a heart-warming response in your family, your friends, and others with whom you come in contact.

Thank-Yes Does All

My mother used to say that I should write notes of thanks for all the notes and cards of congratulations that I received for my graduation. I maintain that I should write thank-you notes only for the graduation presents that were sent me—and I have already written them, notes.

Roberta,

Your mother is right. Your sense of values is a bit off-balance, for your point of view is that you should thank only for material things, while your mother has the right and gracious point of view that kind words, acts, and written words, should be thanked for too. Please thank for these things—and make your friends proud of you, and make you proud of yourself.

About "Housewarnings"

1. We are soon to move into a house we have recently bought, and we would like to have a shower party as a housewarming. Is it proper for my husband and me to invite the guests, or should we wait for friends to plan a "surprise" housewarming?

2. Is there a difference between "housewarming" and "shower" house"?

1. Usually a housewarming is given by the hostess and host of the new home. Occasionally, their friends do get together and plan a surprise housewarming party, but you'd better not count on this.

2. "Open house" means just what the name implies: that you open your house to greet your guests on a party. A "housewarming" means that you open your new home, to greet it to your guests and to welcome them to its hospitality.

Mountain View Lassies Defeat Bristol Girls in Exhibition Softball Game by 11-10 Score

Season's Largest Crowd Treated to Best Game of Girls' Softball This Year

HILLIAR STARS

Group Captain Ripley's girls of the Women's Division of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. base gave the Bristol Aircraft lassies somewhat of a lesson in softball in a benefit softball game played at the Armouries last evening when the Air Force girls eked out an 11 to 10 win over the Bristol lassies.

In the early stages in the Air Force girls took a commanding lead, that Coach Bill Davis' Bristols out down considerably in the latter stages in come within one of knotting the count in the last stanza. The game was played for the benefit of an injured players' fund of the Bellville Ladies' Softball League with receipts of nearly $100, being realized.

The visiting player for Mountain View to take the eye of the capacity Bellevile crowd of well over 1,200 was "Vickie" Hilliar, the Bombers' pitcher, who showed a turn of speed that stamped her as a hurler of parts and one of past experience.

Heavy Early

The "Bomber girls" scored in the initial three frames and were leading by a 4-3 count as they went to bat in the fifth to push four runs across and practically clinch the piece. However, the Bristol basers rallied in the last four stanzas, scoring seven runs to pull up within one of tying the score. The only circuit blow of the game was hit by Clancy Elliott, Bristol first baseman, in the fifth inning. Pauline Colden hurled for the Bristol and after a shaky start settled away to fire steady ball in the latter stages as she limited the visiting Bombers to three runs in the last four frames.

Brastan, Hilliar, Kayser and Newton were the chief willow-

MAJOR LEAGUES SETTLE DOWN TO STRETCH DRIVE

Clubs Strengthen for Final Splurge as Player Swaps Are Seen All Around

BROWNS COMING

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The major leagues are heading into the home stretch today with strength and opportunity as well as determination to shuffle the standings before the end of the season.

More player swaps have been made in the last week than in any similar period since the 1942 campaign closed. Brooklyn Dodgers have undergone a house-cleaning that has sent pitcher Bobo Newsom to St. Louis Browns, outfielder Joe Medwick to New York Giants and catcher Dee Moore to Philadelphia Phillies.

Many other clubs have dipped in to the farm system for additional strength and some more moves of this character probably will be completed before the week is over.

Now all the changes will add up in the standings remains to be seen, but both the Browns and Giants appear to be strengthened and hope to rise.

St. Louis now is just half a game out of the first division and with the Washington Senators, tailend one of the National League's leading lights, which has been invincible in the revolt of the Dodgers, may yet get into the battle for the American League pennant.

9 Games Behind

The team is nine games behind the first place New York Yankees, but the Yanks will close out a set on the second place Washington Senators. Navy Petty Officer John Clark writes this one from the "jawbone breed record" from an army buddy who has just arrived from North Africa. . . Seems a month's supply of racing sheets were included in the bag of mail. Jawbone said there. Sewell Signed For 2 Years by Browns

St. Louis, July 21 (AP)—Officials of the St. Louis Browns are just oozing confidence these days in baseball, their club and manager, Luke Sewell. That confidence zoned to a new high record signing Sewell to a new two-year contract.

'INT' LEAGUE CLUBS UNDERGO MANY CHANGES

Players Are Shuffled in Trades That May Change Standings

LEAFS LOSE

Rosters of some of the International League clubs are undergoing a complexion treatment that may change not only their appearance but the standings.

In recent days Pittsburgh Pirates have recalled two star outfielders, Maurice Van Robays and Al Rubeling, from the league-leading Toronto Leafs, who a short time before had sold pitcher Dick Conger to Philadelphia Phillies.

Yesterday Jersey City Giants had to give up pitcher Tom Sunkel to Montreal Royals to complete the National League deal involving their parent club, New York and Brooklyn, by which Giants got Joe Medwick.

And last night Branch Rickey, President of the Dodgers, appeared ready to close a deal with Montreal and told them Brooklyn was planning to send the Royals additional players in exchange for Hugh Casey, dirigues Olmo, the slugging Cuban outfielder.

The Royals stepped out and beat Toronto 5-2 in the opening game of their series. They had to use three pitchers and received the help in critical error by outfielder Frank Zak of the Leafs to bag the victory, but Manager Clay Hopper-chelsea, with four runs in the seventh inning was completely submerged in the result of the season's high water-mark," revealed Rome, as he added all league games in Trenton are being played at the Dufferin Street School grounds this year.

"We have three teams in our league, an all-Trenton team, one from Batawa and the third from nearby No. 6 Repair Depot of the R.C.A.F. These teams will play-off for the Colsky Cup which is the town championship. In the O.A.S.A. playdowns, however, all three of our teams will compete in different groups. The No. 6 R.D. boys have elected to play-off in the senior 'B' series of the O.A.S.A., while our town team will again meet the Belleville winners in the Intermediate "A" playdowns, while Batawa has entered in the Intermediate "B" series, so it looks as though we'll have plenty of softball next month," admitted Mr. Taylor. Incidentally the Trenton league is not exactly a financial success this year, so-much-so that even umpires are being asked to work grats.

Umpires are named.

Secretary Ted Schwab, of the Brownies' baseball club announced in today to say he had forwarded the names of five umpires to the O.A.S.A. with league recommendations for O.A.S.A. playdowns. The names are: Harold Rawden, league umpire-in-chief, Eddie Schrieber, Clark Barrett, Cy Young and Ken Newsbor (Why the latter we'll never guess.) Incidentally at this point we wish to compliment Marshall Rawden for the efficient manner in which he has conducted the local league all season, along with the cooperation of Joe Sanagan.

An after-dinner story told at a local hotel:

A merchant prided himself on the integrity of his firm and ordered all his clerks never to make any deal that they could not justify with a friend's saying. One day he observed a clerk making a sale to a woman customer.

She was not satisfied with the yard goods he showed her, so he took it away, then returned with the same goods a little later and extolled its merita, putting a price on it twice as high as previously. The woman bought it.

Merchant (to the clerk, after the woman had gone) — Just what Biblical saying can you use to justify that deal, eh?

Clerk—That's easy. "She was a stranger, and I took her in."

No loser, here.

Rome Taylor, who helped to revive junior hockey in Trenton last year, dropped in to pay his department a visit yesterday and naturally the conversation dropped around to sports in general in Harry Moore's adopted town.

"How's baseball league going?" we asked.

"Well, not so good as it might be. We've lost a lot of players to the armed services and then our Bayside Park, situated behind the Pole Office is completely submerged as the result of the season's high water-mark," revealed Rome, as he added all league games in Trenton are being played at the Dufferin Street School grounds this year.

The name Johnson always has been identified with the American Baseball League, for the past quarter of its 40 odd years. There was Ban Johnson, founder and first president; Walter Johnson, one of the game's greatest pitchers, then Ernie Johnson, Henry Johnson and a few others who were only fair-to-middling performers. Now there is Bob Johnson of Washington, formerly with the Athletics, another Bill, rookie infielder of the Yankees.

Here and there,

It's three big bouts at the arena tonight.....there was quite a softball game the Bristol lassies and girls from the Mountain View R.C.A.F. base staged at the Armouries last night. . . . Al Mascha can say in explanation to his is "you must believe in me."

Inspector Gruber (Alexander Granach) of the Gestapo takes charge of the hunt for the patriot and has Mascha followed closely. To mislead Gruber and to save the underground leader, Who has sought refuge in Svoboda's house, Mascha and Svoboda stage a bedroom sequence which has all the implications of a clandestine love affair. Gruber confronts them with Mascha's fiance, and Mascha agrees in convincing even Jan that she has actually fallen in love with Svoboda.

Gruber takes Jan on an all-night spree. In the morning Jan suddenly realizes that the bedroom scene had been staged between Mascha and Svoboda, and he inadvertently lets this discovery slip to the latter. Both realize they have been face to face with the assassin. Jan tries to prevent Gruber from acting on this information. Gruber overpowers Jan and departs to capture Svoboda. Her grief is alleviated because at last she understands her father's teachings about the price free people pay for freedom. Now it is little people, who continue the fight against the conquerors of their country.

AT THE BELLE

"Young Mr. Pitt"

The many Robert Donat fans, who have been at a loss to account for the disappearance of the star's long truancy from the screen, have good cause to celebrate. For Mr. Donat, whose absence becomes noticeable when we remember that he is a handsome hearty Britton, is returning to the cinema, at long last, in a film made by many to be fully as engrossing as those that brought him fame, "Good-bye Mr. Chips", for instance, "39 Steps," and "The Citadel."

In "The Young Mr. Pitt," which comes to the Belle Theatre, Donat plays the part of William Pitt the Younger, as he was called, at early as Donat's screen virtuosity, will know at once that exciting entertainment is on its way.

Pitt's times were as turbulent as our own. Now it is the subjugated millions of young Canadians today.

That's the crux of the story. At 24, he heard his country's call, became the 3rd Prime Minister and sacrificed his one great love to lead his people to victory over the Axis of his day.

Robert Morley, Phyllis Calvert, John Mills and other outstanding favorites appear in support of Donat.

"Quiet Please, Murder" Thrilling

Murder, swift and ruthless, stalks the unruffled calm of a public library. A gang is discovered, lying crumpled on the floor! A priceless Shakespeare folio has disappeared!

This is the beginning, abrupt and startling, of what preview critics had as one of the season's most baffling mysteries, "Quiet Please, Murder" the added feature attraction on the same program. George Sanders and Gail Patrick are featured as a suave, merciless pair whose methods are direct and deadly as the path of a bullet.

Handsome newcomer R. Denning plays Mollyrue, a tough detective misled by his attraction for calculating Gail. Charming Gail Patrick is featured as Kay, the unsuspecting librarian who stumbles into danger.

"Hello Frisco Hello" Departs

Tonight is the last time to enjoy the big musical fun treat "Hello Frisco Hello," produced in glorious technicolor and featuring Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie and Lynn Barrie. The Belle News, color cartoon, and a topical film complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"George Washington Slept Here"

The Keystone Kops had nothing on Jack Benny.

Jack fell down two flights of stairs, was cracked on the head by a loose board, tumbling through rotten planks from the second floor to the ground floor of an old house, and dropped into a well—all for scenes in Warner Bros.' "George Washington Slept Here," showing next at the Capitol.

The head-over-heels sprawl down the stairs is a vitally important piece of business in "George Washington Slept Here." For the fall renders Benny unconscious and that's when he has the nightmare that results in the picture's dream sequence. Benny doesn't see pink elephants or gingham alligators; he sees himself as "George Washington and Ann Sheridan as Martha.

"Prairie Gunsmoke"

Rip-roaring action is in store for edventure fans when Columbia's "Prairie Gunsmoke" blazes its way into the Capitol theatre next with Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter playing the starring roles. Said to be a hair-raising saga of the old west, the new film was directed by Lambert Hillyer from a screen play by Jack Gamboro. In addition to Elliott and Ritter, the cast also includes comedian Frank Mitchell and Virginia Carroll.

A colored cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" completes another grand show for the whole family.

Many German Airmen Drawn From Russia To Sicily, Letters Show

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 21 — (AP) — An authoritative source said Tuesday that notebooks, letters and documents found in Sicily indicate that a large number of German airmen have been drawn from the Russian front to the Mediterranean theatre.

This source disclosed that an R.A.F. officer found a quantity of notebooks with Russian letters on their covers and some Russian dictionaries in a building used by German fliers as a mess hall.

KIDNAPPED

Jimmy Dimaggio, three, was kidnapped, kept three days, then released in an automat in New York. Mary Persora, 20-year-old divorcee, is held by the F.B.I. in connection with the kidnapping, which they believe was for the purpose of winning back the love of her former husband. Pictured ABOVE is Jimmy with Ann Buttacavoli, a little neighbor.

Hour of Grace

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 15

She looked around the room, soft in the lamplight and clean and vividly attractive. Sue was called a perfect wife. In nothing that she did could one find laxity and her patience with Van's neurotic father was commendable and undisputable. The things her deft hands touched were smooth and finished from the decoration of her home to her clothes and the clothes her children wore. Her meals were inspired and served with dignity and grace. Why then with such a wife Van went out Clare to drink and laugh with her at an off-hour in a hotel bar? Was it that Clare lacked a "humanism" that Sue lacked? Perhaps a woman could be so perfect a housekeeper and mother that she ceased to be a desirable wife. A wife has to be as many people at once.

She was guilty of what would have been to Sue an unpardonable offense, sleeping at her post, when she heard voices and sat up straight and smoothed down her hair. Van and Sue were coming in, the latter's clear eyes sweeping over the neat room with pleasure as though her home was the best of all possible places to be and as though, too, Meegan thought, she suspected some object might be out of place which must be put in place immediately.

"I hope we weren't too late," she said. "We didn't finish the last rubber because I felt it might take too long and keep you up."

"Why didn't you?" Meegan asked.

Van smiled. "You know Sue when she makes up her mind. I'll drive you home, Meegan."

"Please don't. It's no walk at all."

"Of course I'm driving you home. Blondes are not allowed running around loose on the island at this time of night. Demoralizing, influence."

Sue opened her purse. "What is it? Four bucks? A dollar?" When Meegan nodded. Sue took out a bill and gave it to her. "Thank you so much, darling. I'm going up, Van. You have your key, haven't you, dear? I put it on your ring."

"Yes. I have my key, Sue."

He drove slowly to Meegan's house as if he wished to prolong the night.

"Beautiful night," he said.

"Yes, very."

"Romantic night. Or shouldn't I say that?"

"Why not?"

He chuckled. "I've often wondered if second honeymoons are as romantic as the first. Probably not. In the middle of a love scene you'd probably stop to ask each other if the children are covered or your wife reminds you to pay your life insurance tomorrow else it will lapse. Then your wife reminds you that you forgot to shave and then you give her hell for putting on that perfume you can't stand. Excuse me. I forget you aren't married, Meegan. I forget that everybody isn't married."

She laughed quietly. "But I'd like to be, Van."

He turned his head and looked at her and smiled his tainted smile. "When you aren't married, it's perfectly okay to say that a night is romantic. When you are married and say it, you sound like a darned fool. You think it but you are supposed to keep it to yourself as if it were something to be ashamed of. It's funny, but in the scheme of things these days no space is allowed for a man to dream his silly little dreams. Substantial citizens shouldn't have such things. They should be all purpose and action and making money. If any of my friends here on the island found me sitting in the moonlight with a silly, satisfied look on my face, they'd think I was nuts. This particular civilization doesn't give you either the privacy or the time to conjure up nice thoughts of the kind of woman you'd like to live in. They are always talking about a better world but they never give you time to think just what a better world would be like. Well, here you are safe and sound."

"Thanks, Van," she turned to him. "I don't think you should care what your friends think if you want to walk in the moonlight and contemplate."

He laughed. "This is the kind of a dope I am, talking this stuff when I'm taking a beautiful girl home. A substantial citizen, didn't I tell you?"

Tony came in as Meegan was going up the steps. Surprised to see him at an hour early for him, she turned around and sat down on the steps, her face serious and curious. So many times tonight she had tried to imagine the things he and Clare might be saying. Somehow none of them had rung quite true. Because no pattern had been set for Erica and Toby, no precedent. He smiled mischievously as he lighted a cigarette.

"Looking for a black eye, by any chance? Take a good look I haven't one. She's a funny kid a kid with misplaced pride."

Meegan said, "She's the new rich and not to the new poor, Toby."

"She said she wouldn't see me again. Said the worst thing that could happen to her would be to fall in love with a guy on the island. She offered to accept my apology for an act you called brutal and to call off the date tonight. I thought it was a gag." He dropped on the step beside her and continued in an amused tone. "Then it came to me about her brother's invention and she has it down to the last screw and bolt. She understands it. She's not dumb. She's read a lot and she knows like a dream. She did not call the date off, you see. She was sorry. She reminds me of something that's been wound up and stored away. She has a funny little face that goes from cold to hot."

Meegan said, "She wouldn't be austere if you knew her a long time. She's very proud."

"She wanted to know why I wasn't in the service."

"You told her about your shoulder?"

"Oh, sure, sure. Then we talked about democracy, of all things. You should have heard her pounce on me when I said that democracy was an intangible thing. She said that democracy wasn't intangible, that you could see it and touch it in a hundred different ways every day in the free schools and open churches and labor unions. She's a new type of American, a new pioneer. She thinks and grasps every bit of knowledge that comes her way. It was the zerkiest date I ever had. Oh, yes, I met Helen, too. She laughed at my jokes. I'm sure she's a very successful wife.

Are you satisfied now? I know you would be waiting to know."

Meegan hugged her knees. "Not as bad as that, I was thinking of you."

"Where were you tonight?"

"At Sue's while she and Van went out."

He nodded. Then he said, "Erica said that her brother needed men at his plant. Do you think Mother would fold up if I put on overalls and got my hands dirty?"

"You mean a job in a defense plant?" She wanted to shout with joy. Toby going to work. He would not see Clare there. Toby in overalls with his hands dirty and the elegant Clare were completely unbelievable. What had happened to a relationship that had burned out as a fever burns out quickly?

There was a bite in Toby's voice, sharp as it can take up arms. I might and could take up tools."

"When? Not at once?"

"I've got a break now. Mother's summer I could start after Labor Day. I could sell Mother on the idea I'm doing my duty."

Meegan saw her face was thoughtful. "In the picture you are giving me I can't see Clare."

"I don't either. She's out." But there was a curious kindness in his voice. It had none of the harshness or bitterness attached to an abruptly ended love affair.

"I'm glad. You know how glad I am, Toby."

"We'd better go up. Mother will be waking up."

"Of course."

But when she was in bed she felt as she had many times in school when she had lied with "I" representing an unknown quantity.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit dirt this morning, asking to pop. On dear, William, when I think what a mizzyble woman has to go through and put up with for the sake of her figure, sometimes it hardly seems worth the game.

It does seem like a high figure to pay for a small figure, I see what you mean, pop said, and ma said, There's nothing I enjy more than a nice egg in the morning, and a couple slices of marmelade with a slice of toast or two, and here on the centinery I'm forcibly confining myself with a half of a sugarless grapefruit and I haven't even had that much as a bite in my coffee for the best part of a week.

It must be very hard on men like the worst part of a week, pop said. Well, if you stop to think of the poor devils adrift for weeks on end on a rubber raft in the middle of the ocean with nothing between them and starvation but cold stew made of salt water and hardtack, it ought to make your grapefruit taste like a juicy steak and turn your black coffee into sparkling champaine, he said, and ma said, That's true, William, you're quite right, who am I to complain? There were 2 poor boys in yesterday's paper picked up more dead than alive after floating for 30 famished days in the South Pacific with good reliable fish swimming mockingly by, and you can imagine what happened to their few drops of fresh water after it had been passed around a few times. It makes me feel weak and faint to even think of anybody in such a plight. On dear, I wish you hadn't brought the subject up, pop said. Really, William, I mean it, the thought makes me feel quite weak in my dieting endeavor. I think I'll ask Nora to scramble me a couple of eggs, she said.

Which she did, and pop folded up his paper and left for his office chuming it's a women's world.

REINFORCE DODECANESE

Izmir, Turkey, July 21—(AP)—A new German brigade was reported today moving down the Aegean Sea in the direction of the Italian Dodecanese Islands.

The first units of the brigade were said to have reached Rhodes in the Dodecanese on July 19 and further reinforcement was said to be following steadily.

The reinforcement of the Dodecanese Islands indicated the Axis may fear a new Allied assault from large Allied armies reported stationed in the Levant or perhaps a revolt of the Italian garrisons there.

Resurfacing of Station St. Part Of Program for All Pavements

Commencing a program of city street repairs, which, it is hoped, will ultimately see the entire paved thoroughfares system of Belleville, works maintenance department under the supervision of City Engineer Harold Armstrong, chairman of public works, yesterday commenced a double treatment application of asphalt and stone chips on Station Street.

Application of the asphalt is by the city public works department maintenance equipment, while resurfacing of the stone chip is being done by the H. J. McFarland Construction Company of Picton with their stone-spreading equipment. It is expected that Station Street will be finished today, after which parts of Cayman Street and East Bridge Street will be treated in a like manner.

Resurfacing of Belleville streets is a program which has been receiving the attention of the city public works department for several years, according to Mayor Frederick Mott. The entire 10 miles of city pavements has been laid 30 years and is badly in need of resurfacing, he stated.

"By resurfacing now the city will be protecting its original $1,000,000 investment," said the engineer.

Not Sufficient Asphalt

With the original city order of asphalt cut by 8,400 gallons by wartime restrictions, it was doubted by officials if there would be found than sufficient material to complete Station Street and one or two other parts of Sidney Street and Bridge Streets. An additional order of 22,000 gals. of asphalt had been placed, it was stated.

Application of the asphalt is by the pressure equipment, which compresses the stone chips with a spray of stone surface for the layer of stone chips which is sprayed by mechanical equipment owned by me McFarland Company. Two layers of asphalt and stone chip are applied with each application being followed by city street sweepers. In all the asphalt surface is applied providing a protective coating to exclude elements, and to withstand the wearing effects of traffic.

Trim flags divide the street undergoing resurfacing with the application of materials being done in strips approximately 150 yards in length. When one strip is finished the other side will receive like application. Traffic has been very cooperative in slowing down while passing the workers, it was stated.

38-Mill Tax Rate Is Set for Picton

Picton —(Special)— A tax rate of 38 mills, (38 cents special rate) sixty of one mill, was struck by the Town Council at a special session, for the current year, down from the last year.

The estimates revealed that the county requisition is up one mill, being 15 mills, with 10 mills public school; $3,979 for street debenture; $1,000 for hospital; $346 less for relief. Increases were $350 more for collection; $4,944.58 more for town purposes.

The sum for town purposes is increased due to the fact that the town must pay $5,375 over and above the highway grant, as the share of the cost of paving a section of road leading to the R.A.F. station.

The total assessment is $2,763,-661.71. County requisition of $23,-000.00; public school $131 mills; public school $18,500, for 7.20 mills; public library, $3,300, for 1.21 mills; public school debentures $1,510, for .50 mills; public utilities debenture, $3,196, 1.13 mills; street debenture, $1,297, for .51 mills; collegiate institute $10,000, for 3.62 mills; relief purposes, $2,400, for .87 mills; separate school, $11,000, for 14.33 mills; separate school, $1,750, for 10 mills.

WIFE CONFERS WITH MARIGNY

Talks to Husband in Presence of Counsel and Prison Superintendent

Nassau, Bahamas, July 21 (AP)— Nancy Oakes De Marigny conferred for 90 minutes in Bahamas prison yesterday with her husband, Alfred De Marigny, who is charged with the murder of her father, wealthy Sir Harry Oakes.

Going directly to the prison after her airplane arrival here from New England, the 19-year-old girl grew hysterical when she saw Marigny.

She talked to him in the presence of De Marigny's attorney, Godfrey Higgs, and Eugene Miller, superintendent of prisons.

Both officials said the talk was conversational. Higgs quoted Mrs. De Marigny as saying the meeting was "very friendly" and Miller added that De Marigny was cheerful in the face of it.

The marriage of Nancy to the Count De Marigny, who is 33, is a factor in the murder investigation. Sir Harry was known to Count De Marigny with a kiss.

Oakes was found slumped to death July 8 in his spacious villa, Westbourne.

By DANIEL DeLUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 21 (AP)— Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared emphatically today he was convinced of a complete Allied victory in Sicily but said the task facing Canadian and British troops in the east still was fighting with a generally slow advance.

"Due to the nature of the terrain and the tenacity of the enemy forces, the task facing the 8th Army, including Canadian troops, is one of bitter fighting with a generally slow advance," the Allied Commander-in-Chief said.

"The (American) 7th Army is making a more or less rapid advance through weaker resistance, thus over-running substantial portions of the island and confining the enemy to progressively smaller areas."

The German has attempted to establish a very strong line, Including Mt. Etna, on the east and we do so brought certain formations from the Italian mainland, he said.

The Commander-in-Chief made his statements at his first press conference since the last month when he told correspondents he had requested the retention of Gen. Henri Giraud as French North African Commander-in-Chief.

Adoption of Beveridge Plan Would Do Much to Ease the Heavy Burden Of the 'Little Men' Kiwanians Told

Returning to a more formal type of meeting this week, following their cruise to the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Mill last Wednesday afternoon, the Kiwanians met in their usual luncheon room at the Quinte Hotel, President Bruce Latimer called on Kiwanian Gordon Barclay to account for his delay in reaching the lumber camp meeting place. A tepid but satisfying explanation was accepted. Kiwanian Jack White informed the meeting that a fine, cool model sailing schooner had been contributed to the Kiwanis Club to be raffled by them at their Street Carnival on August 17-18-19th. The model had been the property of the late Mr. E.P. Milburn and is donated by the Milburn family as their contribution to the Kiwanis Blood Donor Clinic.

To Hold Beauty Contest

Plans are being laid for a repetition of last year's successful and highly entertaining Beauty Contest to select the "War Worker's Sweetheart of Belleville" which was won last year by Miss Kaye Lunniford, formerly of Foxboro and an employee of Belleville Surgical Lock Company. Following the same method of selection, war workers will nominate their late candidates as entrants to the contest who will be judged by a committee of visiting and prominent Judges.

Kiwanians were urged to attend the second night of the Sports Meet at Trenton Athletic Station. Kiwanian Jack White's words, "It is the best two-bit worth of entertainment I have ever had. President Bruce Latimer echoed the sentiments he had left and was followed by Kiwanian Aubrey Coe, who distributed approximately fifty tickets free to any Kiwanian who wanted to attend. Each tribute was paid to the Army, Navy and Air Force, the Kiwanians had just led in song with Kiwanian Harold Carruthers.

Social and Economic Reform

Dr. Bert Howard of Albert College was introduced by Kiwanian Chas. Hyde as the guest speaker for the week. Dr. Howard delivered an enlightening talk on Social and Economic Reform. He warned the Kiwanians at the opening of his talk that his subject was "not going to be humorous or entertaining, and it may not be interesting, but I trust that it will be at least informative."

Referring to the Atlantic Charter and the Beveridge Plan, Dr. Howard said: "We have witnessed in the last two days of the most momentous documents since the Magna Charta. In the first document our physical welfare, the welfare of peaceful countries is outlined.

It is a document which means a new deal under the "little men" of a nation make it their philosophy of life, and we are the little men of Canada. This document are the very things we have dreamed about and, today, the very best of our manhood are fighting for theirs and our dream. The Motherland loves to have us think that she is muddling through, but that is when she is doing her best work, and history in the recent days comes that tremendous shock and surprise when we realize that there was no muddling and but that the finest minds of the world have been working day and night to solve the problems of the human race. That is what was going on during the formation of the Atlantic Charter and the Beveridge Plan."

"Make Dreams Come True"

"The Beveridge Plan," continued Dr. Howard, "is not the plan of Sir William Beveridge who visited this country a few weeks ago; he was just the chairman of an organized unity of thought. It is a plan whereby the "little men" not only of the Empire, but of all nations might make their dreams come true, it is a book in print, if you wish, of a new life, a life you would all like to see, and as it is only in information, the full blossom, fruitage of this plant will not come for many years." Like a man who has firmly grasped his subject and feels his audience warming to him, Dr. Howard pressed on that, "In success resta upon adopting it as a whole rather than piecemeal, an all-out attack on the greatest enemy of the human race—"Want. The scheme was first advocated not by the closet co-operation between the State and the individual. Dreaming things and then sitting back and waiting for those dreams to come true will not do; it only comes true when we pay everything we have at the back of it."

Five Governing Factors

"Five major factors govern our social and economical relations and might be called evils or sickness," continued Dr. Howard, "First, the Physical Want." This needed state a fearless adjustment of lower bracket incomes, social insurance, mental assurance or insurance and a family allowance. Second, "Ignorance and abolition of disease," which is a prime cause of want, acute trouble for everyone when we pay. Everyone to quote figures and the cost of the caring for victims of disease we would stagger you all, and it is not the other fellow's problem to help the sick and poor, it is our problem to care for them and we must get rid of the evil, What are they going to do? They can go into another environment, another community, and there they will commit the same offence and the new community will have to go through the procedure and order them out of town. We are told that the slums are situated today and, yet, these slums could be done away with and all in our power for them and not transfer them elsewhere from one to another community."

"Abolition of Ignorance," he said, "is the only way to get out of the city. What are they going to do? They can go into another environment, another community and there they will commit the same offence and the new community will have to go through the procedure and order them out of town. We are told that the slums are situated today and, yet, these slums could be done away with and all in our power for them and not transfer them elsewhere from one to another community."

Abolish Squalor

"We have drifted into the idea that a certain type of people will live in slums and we do not want put up with them," was Dr. Howard's introduction of the fourth factor, "Abolition of Society, "Abolition of Squalor." "It is wrong, it is foolish and it is criminal. Those things need not be. Squalor rises from unplanned growth of industries, slums and war conditions. Intelligent planning will do away with squalor and squalor conditions and remove the slum conditions from places upon the financial condition of a country.

"Abolition of Idleness," said Dr. Howard, making his fifth point, "whether that idleness is the product of sickness or a refusal to work by a certain type of individual, that idleness destroys wealth. A successful society cannot exist without any kind. The great number of suicides on the banks of the wealthy is about five to one with a rise when men and women who have nothing to look forward to in life other than hardship, misery and squalor to a figure near to seventy to one."

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

The meeting in Northern Italy between Mussolini, Hitler and Mussolini could have brought little solace to the harassed Duce and indeed may well have savored of a pat too fond farewell to preparations in brigandage.

DNB, the German news agency, has indicated that this parley concerned the invasion of Sicily and the situation generally on the Russians on the eastern front, That would seem to be a certainty in the circumstances and no clear that one can almost call it a guess.

"I need more help, and need it quick," says Mussolini, trying to square his wobbly jaw and play the strong man. "The alternative is a separate peace."

"I'm much afraid, Benito," replies the Fuehrer, "that I can't provide any additional aid. The demonstrable Bolshevists have precipitated a crisis by their drive on Orel. As a matter of fact they're on the offensive from the Arctic to the Black Sea. You'll have to fight your own battle with what you have."

"But, Adolf," quavers the soft underbelly of Europe, "the only thing that they have left is a few revolting against me now and making peace with the enemy is the last step I can take to save my troops are in mutiny in Sicily. Without your help I shall stand self-destroyed. Surely the might of Germany hasn't lost control of its destinies? You can spare me something more."

Polish Flier Returns Safely After 9 Days in France

By RUSSELL LANDSTRON
London, July 21 (AP)—A young Polish pilot who was shot down in his fighter over France, spent nine days there on what he called "his own" and then made home to fight some more.

He hid out for 100 miles through areas well covered by German counter-intelligence, ate occasionally went to the movies, and registered at no hotels.

When he rejoined his squadron he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the decoration being pinned upon him by Air Vice-Marshal St. Vincent Sinclair.

This pilot, Flt.-Lt. Tadeusz Biedrzycki, 25, is built like a middle-weight sweeps over Nastland since his return, standing 5 feet 9 inches tall.

"Our formation went out as an escort to an Allied bombing expedition and over a certain French locality we were attacked by Focke-Wulfs. I spotted a German plane coming from behind to attack our bombers. I got on his tail—then, I hit him and the plane spiralled down in black flames and out of control.

"What I was getting that one, however, another enemy plane took after me. As I dived down they gave four feet wide in one of my wings. My engine was hit and burst into flames. I bailed out.

Raded Nazi Searchers

"I landed in a field and promptly went into hiding for several hours while Germans searched the area for me. Their search started within 15 minutes after I hit the ground. I could even hear some of them talking. Finally, when they could not find me, they were that close to me.

"At sundown I headed for a big French city — I cannot, of course, say precisely where I went— nor how I got there, for the sake of my escape were accomplished — and spent two days there strolling about the streets, eating in the best restaurants, visiting the sights, including the zoo, and at night I saw two film programs.

"Then I left the big hotel very suddenly, though, when the Germans began to search it, and I went to Pole. I just kept walking and occasionally "cut in" on a lift.

"When talking with Germans, I spoke French, although I have a considerable knowledge of the language. But somehow I got by with it.

"I suffered from hunger some of the time, but not all of the time. I went without food for three days.

The morale of the German troops in the occupied countries, he said, "very poor", adding that "most of the Nazi troops volunteered only for their western front duty. Today, Manager Leo Durocher announced.

Ottawa, July 21 — (CP) — Despite prospect discussion on a revised farmers' creditors arrangement act for the three prairie provinces, many members of parliament are counting on ending the 1943 session this week.

Last night, the decks were cleared for adjournment by the introduction of estimates of all but one government department into committee of supply in the House of Commons. The bulk of the business remaining before the Chamber is approval of the various parts of more than $500,000,000 in non-war estimates.

The importance of getting the estimates of different departments before a committee of supply is that on introducing estimates to that committee any member has the right to air any matter he may wish to discuss.

By consent of all parties last week-end, the proposed new agricultural war services were entered. That department was left out to give members a chance to look up some matters.

Argue Revised Act Insufficient.

The revised farmers' creditors arrangement act, designed to meet a situation created by a privy council decision invalidating provincial debt adjustment laws in Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, was under consideration by members of the whole throughout most of yesterday's sitting and will be considered again today.

It is understood reading Monday. Most opposition members from the prairie provinces argue the act was insufficient in meet the farm debt problem but Finance Minister Ilsley contends that the debt adjustment laws must remain emergency legislation and a permanent measure for whittling down debts was without precedent in any country.

Voters' Lists in Montreal Cartier

At the opening of the sitting, M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, called attention to the fact that there were "grave irregularities" in the compilation of the voters' list for the August 9 Federal by-election in Montreal-Cartier, where David Lewis, National Secretary of the C.C.F. is a candidate.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King replied that Mr. Coldwell's inquiry in the matter up and promised an immediate investigation. He said any offenders would be dealt with summarily, regardless of their office or the party to which they belonged.

Mr. Coldwell quoted from letters to the Montreal newspapers, affidavits and reports from investigators to support his claim that of 2,000 names on the voters' list examined 650 were found to be improperly listed.

Babies, children, non-existent dead persons were on the list, said Mr. Coldwell, estimating that of the 42,000 names listed at least 10,000 would prove to be there improperly, while others that should be there were left off.

There was evidence that some enumerators had admitted padding the list but their only punishment was to forfeit the $25 they were to have been paid.

Further discussion was known to be common in Montreal and this system of "telegraphing" votes had been illustrated in 1942 when Bishop John Farthing, then Anglican Bishop of Montreal, arrived at a poll only to be told his vote had been cast.

C.C.F. Leader's Complaint.

"The present lists are an invitation to dishonesty on election day. an invitation of which the election officials which I am told by responsible are not in the habit of refusing to take advantage," said Mr. Coldwell.

He said the returning officer, Lazarus Bavitch, a nephew of the Liberal candidate, had "shown" his complete incompetence in connection with the list and suggested an guiltant returning officer should be appointed by one of the candidates.

There should be two enumerators for each poll, representing opposing parties, and each voter should be required to take an oath, National Registration certificate, Mr. Coldwell suggested.

To make the guilty enumerator forfeit his pay was not enough—"those responsible for this corruption should be prosecuted to the utmost extent of the law".

The Senate met last night and gave first reading to a number of bills passed last week by the Lower House. It meets again today to consider the Bills and Second Reading.

RUMOURS CAUSE SHORTAGES

We all know the people who pretend to be "in the know" and want us that this or that will be rationed next. Those people are dangerous! By frightening others into panic buying they cause shortages that need never have existed. Decent people buy only what they need, confident that if rationing does become necessary, they will receive a fair share.

RESISTANCE COLLAPSING IN WESTERN SICILY

CROTONE IN GULF OF TARANTO BLASTED BY NAVY

Castelvetrano and Sciacca And Three Other Points Fall to American Forces

Reinforced Enemy Troops Offer Stiff Resistance To British 8th Army

(BY DANIEL DE LUCE, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 22 —(AP)— Fierce fighting continues between the British 8th Army and reinforced German troops near Catania, Allied Headquarters announced today, while on the western end of the front the American 7th Army has captured Castelvetrano and Sciacca on the Sicilian south coast.

In the centre, the communique said, "Canadian troops continue their advance in the face of determined resistance."

With collapse of resistance in the western section of the island, the Americans captured these other places in their sweep:—

San Stefano Quisquina, about 30 miles south of Palermo on the north coast and 45 miles west of Enna;

San Calerina, seven miles northwest of Caltanissetta and 36 miles south of the north coast;

Menfi, midway between Castelvetrano and Sciacca;

Caltabellotta, the Sciacca airdrome;

The airdrome at Castelvetrano.

Ramacca, 22 miles southwest of Catania, fell to the British 8th Army.

The American cohesion now were seven miles from Palermo, the capital of Sicily, with a last mountain range guarding that vital seaport.

Castelvetrano is 30 miles west of Agrigento and Porto Empedocle, towns on the south coast captured last Saturday and Sunday.

Sciacca is 36 miles west of them on the south coast.

The Americans were making swift progress in a drive toward Palermo on the north coast, herding panicky Italians and their German Allies into the northeast corner of the island, and the Italian 36th Assieta Division, said to be surrendering almost en masse as Axis prisoners mounted to more than 40,000.

Some Gains Made.

In the continuous fighting along the east coast between the Simeto river and Catania, Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British 8th Army made some gains despite the heavy demolitions by the enemy and thick minefields.

The Germans were reinforced by fresh reserves, including a parachute infantry battalion. The communique said casualties are being inflicted on the enemy by the 8th Army.

Allied air forces again smashed at Crotone airfield and Naples railway facilities, covering their targets with bomb bursts.

Heavy bombers visited Grosseto airfield, 90 miles north of Rome, unloading their heavy loads of explosives across the runways and buildings, while fighter bombers and intruders continued to sweep the island's railroads, highways and sea approaches by day and night.

Four enemy planes were destroyed during the operations, communique with the loss of two Allied aircraft.

The German 15th Armored division was reported in retreat toward the northeastern part of the island from the Biazza area.

Canadians Drive On.

The Canadians drove on in the face of determined resistance, but the American cohesion was said by the communique to be meeting only light and ineffective opposition.

Reports at headquarters continued to confirm earlier reports that German officers were shooting Italians who attempted to surrender to the American lines under white flags, and that in some instances the Italians had shot their German officers.

Booty captured in the American advance at Caltanissetta was officially stated to include 14 locomotives and 100 freight cars, in good condition.

An NBC broadcast from Algiers said the Americans were believed to be bringing up long-range artillery to pound Palermo, and Termini on the north coast, and Porto Empedocle and Sciacca on the south coast.

Canadian airmen of the night flyer Wellington squadrons have been ace-ists in and around the Crotone "airdrome and then finishing up with more bombs on the railroads and marshalling yards in nearby Naples, said they found enemy anti-aircraft fire much reduced although some had searchlights caught a number of aircraft.

Sgt. James Esdon of Toronto, who was one of those whose plane was thus spotted but emerged unscathed, said:

"We flew right through the lighted area and unloaded our bombs on the target," he said.

Sqdn. Ldr. Joe McCarthy of Toronto described the raid as "a piece of cake".

F/O. Ralph Long of Carlyle, Sask., said the Axis blockbusters splash in the very centre of his target. "What an explosion", he exclaimed.

Italian Morale Low

The Italian debacle in central and western Sicily appeared to be on a scale comparable to Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's defeat at the hands of Field Marshall Lord Wavell's British Army in the Libyan desert in 1940.

Every spark of fighting spirit appeared to have been stamped out in the ranks of an apathetic and disintegrating Italian army and new batches of prisoners complained that their officers were deserting them, wearing civilian clothes in an effort to escape.

Marsala, a city of 25,000 and one of Sicily's three biggest air bases, was captured in a pre-dawn infantry assault. An American armored column of medium and light tanks and halftracks exploded the gain, and an Associated Press dispatch from the newly-won city.

The city fell so speedily that the defenders had time to destroy only a few of the military installations.

It was believed that the badly resuscitated 10th Bersaglieri Regiment for the third time had been put out of action. It surrendered at Marsala "without firing a shot."

Report Palermo Evacuated

(The Algiers radio said this morning the Axis forces already had evacuated Palermo, on the north coast, and Trapani and Marsala, on the west coast. The broadcast also reported a Canadian-American spearhead striking northwestward from Enna toward Villarosa, nine miles away.)

The British and the German forces at Catania were slugging it out in one of the most ferocious battles since the famous 8th Army broke the Mareth Line, the Germans, undoubtedly supported with strong reinforcements from the centre of Sicily and the Italian mainland, were counter-attacking repeatedly, but without success.

German Puts Price Of 100,000 Marks On Head of 'Tito'

New York, July 22 — (AP) — The Berlin radio announced today that the German military commander in Yugoslavia had offered a reward of 100,000 marks for information leading to the capture — dead or alive — of Josip Broz, Montenegrin guerilla leader popularly known as "Tito."

The broadcast, which was recorded by the Associated Press, acknowledged that Tito's whereabouts are unknown, but said that "Axis military authorities suspect he is now trying to organize partisan resistance in Slovenia."

As a result of mopping up operations last spring, the broadcast declared, Tito was forced to abandon guerilla activities in Northwest Bosnia and fled to Montenegro with remnants of his force.

Axis troops were said to have pursued and annihilated most of his remaining forces in the mountains of Montenegro.

"Tito himself again escaped, however," the broadcast said, "with a few of his followers. He evaded pursuing Axis troops and his present whereabouts are not known."

GIRAUD CERTAIN ALLIES WILL BEAT GERMAN NAZIS

Warns Breakdown in Nazi Morale Cannot be Expected Soon

FRENCH LIBERATION

London, July 22 (CP)—Gen. Henri Giraud, co-chairman of the French Committee of National Liberation, declared at his first press conference that the Nazis "absolute certainty" that the Nazis would be beaten by the Allies, with the United French Army contributing to the liberation of France.

He warned, however, that a breakdown in German morale could not be expected soon, for two reasons:—

Because certain things done socially by the Nazi regime gave satisfaction, and because the German mind has the spirit of submission to "dual discipline."

Gen. Giraud emphasized there was no political mission to his trip which took him from Algiers to the United States and Canada before coming here.

"Only inside France can the future of France be determined, and we on the outside can only do our duty to France as soldiers," he said.

"There was an undertone of hostility in some of the questions asked the general and his eyes flashed when he was asked whether materials sent from America would be given to Charles Vallin's (Gen. Charles de Gaulle, the co-chairman of the committee) or Giraud's army."

"There is no Giraud or De Gaulle army," he answered. "There is only one army—the French army."

War 'Increasingly Dark' for Japan Thru Allied Air Power, Says Jap

NEW YORK, July 22 (AP)—The Tokyo radio broadcast today an address by a Japanese air force officer acknowledging that the war situation in the southwest Pacific is "becoming increasingly dark" as a result of fierce and tragic air battles," the office of war information reported.

The officer, who was not identified by name, asserted Japan had achieved some "overwhelming victories" in air engagements but declared that the Allies "persistently come back time and again with seemingly endless numbers of replacements, O.W.I. said.

"This illustrates that the enemy, too, is carrying out a counter-offensive with honest effort and with 'a power that we cannot ignore", the speaker added. "We must recognize that the South Pacific war has now entered a stage where a decisive battle must be fought to determine the victor.

Munro Gives Graphic Description Of Canadian Attack South of Enna

(BY ROSS MUNRO, CANADIAN PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT)

With the Canadian Forces Near, Sicily, July 16 —(Delayed) — (CP Cable)—Approaching Enna, key city of central Sicily, the Canadians battled the Germans in an all-day action, finally smashing through the forward line of enemy positions with heavy artillery concentrations, followed by infantry assault at the bayonet point.

(Canadian and American forces seized Enna July 30, it was learned since Munro wrote this story.)

Fighting is still going on in the hills and valleys in front of Enna, but it seems likely that the Canadians are trapping the German battle group which has been holding up their advance for 34 hours. This is the Canadians' first major action in their 100-mile advance from Pachino Peninsula, where they landed at the start of the invasion July 10.

Throughout the day I watched the battle from hilltop vantage points, seeing Canadian and British artillery plaster the enemy-held hills with hundreds of shells and then seeing the infantry sweep forward to finish the job. Batches of 30 and 40 German prisoners were coming down the dusty roads Sunday night under guard.

Advance Slowed

They were members of the Panzer Grenadiers and the Hermann Goering Division that the Canadians bumped into south of Enna. The Canadians' amazing advance into central Sicily slowed down and then on Saturday as this German battle group blew up the roads and then withdrew to strong positions in front of Enna.

Saturday night the Canadian attack was mounted. During the night a Canadian regiment prodding forward in the moonlight and encaged the Germans.

They continued these prodding tactics until mid-morning and the brigadier in command told me of his infantry's splendid job in preparing the way for big attacks. Another regiment went around on the enemy's western flank and then another regiment got ready to make a frontal attack. Meanwhile other regiments advanced on the eastern flank of the enemy.

Plan to Destroy Group

The aim of Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, Commander of the Canadian forces in Sicily, was to try to destroy this enemy battle group which blocked the speedy advance of the Canadians.

Driving to the front during Sunday morning I passed dozens of our guns deployed in the fields by the side of the road. Every few minutes three or four guns let go rounds as they ranged on the enemy positions seven miles ahead.

The Germans were holding a high range of hills and some lower hills astride the main road, six miles south of Enna and two miles west of the small town of Valguarnera. They were dug in and some lower hills astride the main road, six miles south of Enna and two miles west of the small town of Valguarnera. They were dug in and some lower hills astride the main road, six miles south of Enna and two miles west of the small town of Valguarnera. They were dug in and using mortar fire on our troops when the Canadians tried to move forward.

I reached a turn in the road by some hills where I could overlook a broad valley to the German positions beyond. The Canadian infantry was down in the valley at our feet and around the flanks as well. Our tanks were sheltered on the reverse side of the hills, out of sight of the enemy and ready to move at any moment.

We were up 3,000 feet here in the central Sicilian hills and mountains and the battleground was just fifteen burned brown by the sun with patches of trees, vineyards and scrub.

Nazis Did Not Know What Was Coming

The enemy apparently did not know what was coming. In several dust-ups before this they skirmished in delaying actions and then withdrew, but this time the Canadians brought them to battle and before they could clear out the artillery and infantry were upon them.

150 PLANES BLAST BAIROKO HARBOR NEAR MUNDA

Heaviest Air Attack That Has Been Executed so Far in S. E. Pacific

133 TONS BOMBS USED

By MURLIN SPENCER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, July 22 (AP)—United States bombers shattered Japanese positions at Bairoko Harbor, above Munda on the north shore of New Georgia Island, yesterday in the heaviest air attack ever made in the southwest Pacific.

More than 150 bombers, operating under a strong fighter cover, pounded the area in a day-long series of raids.

"One hundred and thirty-three tons of bombs were dropped and the area was extensively strafed," the daily report from Allied headquarters said. "It was the heaviest air attack that has been executed by the Allied forces in the southwest Pacific area."

A spokesman added that it also surpassed anything the Japanese ever had done.

RESERVES OF MEN FOR AIRCREW ARE GETTING LOW

Air Minister Power Says Big Reserves in January Are Dwindling

RECRUITING DOWN

Ottawa, July 22. (CP) — Air Minister Power said in an interview today that reserves of men available for aircrew are getting low and that the present rate of enlistment is below requirements.

"We are getting fewer aircrew than we require", he said, "At the moment we are down in recruiting and our reserves are getting low. We had big reserves in January but we are eating them up now".

Other R. C. A. F. officials, when questioned on the reduction in air crew recruitments, referred to an advertisement published yesterday inviting physically fit young men between 17½ and 33 years of age to enlist for aircrew training.

The advertisement mentioned the contribution of young Canadians now in turning out munitions and equipment, and then continued:

"But today the call goes out to every young able-bodied man to get into the fight—to hunt U-boats —to blast and burn enemy factories—to shatter the Axis on every front.

"No matter where or how you are employed, there's an opening for you as aircrew today".

Panzer General Bitter Over Panic Among Germans in Sicily, Order Shows

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in Central Sicily, July 18. (Delayed)—(CP) Cable)—The morale of the German forces in Sicily is low and there has been panic among the troops, according to a captured Nazi order signed by Gen. Conrath, commander of the Hermann Goering Panzer Division now in fighting here.

"I had the bitter experience of watching entire companies flee in panic," says which are not worthy of the German uniform, particularly non-soldiers of the Panzer division Hermann Goering", the order said.

"Persons came running to the rear hysterically crying because they had heard the detonation of a single shot fired somewhere on the landing area. Others believing in false rumors moved a whole column in the rear. In one instance supplies were senselessly distributed to soldiers and civilians by a supply unit that had fallen victim to a panic.

"I want to state in these instances that these acts were committed not only by the youngest officers but also by N.C.O.'s and Non-Com Officers. Panzer fear and spreading rumors are to be annihilated by the most severe measures. Withdrawal without orders and cowardice are to be punished on the spot and is necessary by the use of weapons.

"I shall apply the most severe measures of a court martial against such saboteurs of the fight for freedom of our nation and shall not hesitate to give the death sentence in serious cases. I expect all officers will use their influence to suppress such an undignified attitude in the Panzer division Hermann Goering."

Port As Base For Sending Troops and Supplie to Sicily— 2nd Naval Attack

NO WARSHIPS DAMAGED

London, July 22 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported today from Allied headquarters in North Africa, that the Royal Navy has bombarded the Italian mainland at Crotone in the Gulf of Taranto, on the inner heel of the Italian Boot.

Desmond Tighe, a Reuters Correspondent with the Royal Navy in the Mediterranean, reported cruisers hurled shells into the harbor for five minutes in the early hours of yesterday, causing a number of fires.

The British warships suffered no damages in the raid, he said.

The object of the shelling, which had been carried out by cruisers in London, apparently was to cut one of the routes by which the Axis could send reinforcements to the toe of the Italian Boot for transhipment to Sicily.

This shipment involves a circuitous route down the eastern coastal railway, and may be used more intensively since the bombing of Rome.

Still Sending Reinforcements

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a press conference yesterday in North Africa said the Germans were still sending reinforcements in Sicily.

The German radio said today a day and night shuttle service ferrying Axis troops across Messina Straits was using 38 fast motor launches.

The bombardment was the first on the Italian mainland since the invasion of Sicily and the second of the war. The first naval bombardment of the mainland was at Genoa on Feb. 9, 1941.

It was possible that some of Britain's newest and largest battleships participated. The Axis has reported the Nelson, Rodney, King George V and Queen Elizabeth in the Mediterranean. The King George V is of 44,ype completed since the start of the war.

Crotone is about 93 miles south of Taranto, on the inner heel of Taranto.

British submarines have shelled the mainland a number of times. Reggio on the extreme town into appears on some maps as Cotrone.

Sardinia So Bombed Can Hardly Export Lead and Zinc

New York, July 22. (CP) —BBC said the R.A.F. has so effectively bombed Sardinia that it is hardly possible any more to export lead and zinc from Sardinia to Britain. Sardinia was the bonanza which added that 90 per cent of Italy's lead and zinc came from Sardinia as well as almost all its production of nickel, cobalt and tungsten.

Gen. Montgomery Simply Delighted With Canadians

With the Canadians in Sicily, July 18 — (Delayed)—(CP Cable) —Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, Commander of the Anglo-Canadian 8th Army fighting alongside the American 7th Army in Sicily, sent a verbal message to Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, Commander of the Canadian 1st Division fighting with the British troops, highly commending the Canadians.

The message was sent through Lieutenant-Gen. Maj. T. Trumbull Warren of Toronto.

It said Gen. Montgomery was "simply delighted" with the progress made by the Canadians.

RUSS PINCERS THREATEN TO OUTFLANK OREL

Gains Up to 9 Miles And 90 Villages Captured by Red Armies

FIGHT TO THE DEATH

Moscow, July 22—(AP)—German reinforcements, rushed into the Orel breaches by forced marches, counter-attacked furiously in desperate efforts to halt the Russian onslaught yesterday but were smashed back as the Soviet offensive rolled on to within five miles of the German stronghold, the Russians announced officially today.

In a battle of increasing violence which raged 200 miles south of Moscow, the Russians said they beat down repeated enemy tanks and infantry for gains of four to nine miles and overran 90 villages.

The London radio said that Hitler had ordered Orel, hinge of the entire Nazi south-central defense line, held "at all costs."

The three-pronged Russian drive which first struck 25 miles from the city of 110,000 from the north and west and menaced it from the east, held these positions:

Driving from the north, the Russians had reached Buky, about 40 miles west of the city and within five miles of the crucial Orel-Bryansk railway at a point 35 miles northeast of Bryansk. Another column from the north had reached Opytnoye, nine miles northeast of Orel on the railway from Fallen Mtsensk.

Soviet forces smashing frontally from the east had driven into Zolotarevo, 11 miles away.

Tough Opposition

The southern advance on the city was meeting the toughest German opposition, the Soviet communique said only that the Russians had driven to Ilinka. That column was last reported west of Mala at a point about 30 miles south of Orel.

TWO WATSON SISTERS GIVEN PROMOTION

Belleville's three sisters of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, Isobel, Evelyn and Iris Watson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Watson, Octavia Street, are receiving comparatively rapid promotion since their enlistment only two months ago. Following completion of their basic training course at Kitchener, the oldest of the girls, Isobel, was retained at the station as an instructress while Evelyn now has her first stripe as a lance corporal. The two younger girls are now taking a typist-stenographic course at Ottawa.

RASPBERRIES TAKE SLIGHT DROP IN PRICE

Raspberries again took a slight drop in price on the local produce market this morning with the red variety being quoted generally at 35 cents instead of the former 40 cents. The blue variety brought 30 cents the box as did a few wild raspberries which were offered by one or two vendors. Huckleberries brought the usual 40 cents the quart.

Montmorency cherries were quoted at $1.50 the six-quart basket while bunched vegetables sold at ten cents with exception of radishes, which brought a quarter for the bunch. String beans were 15 cents the box with green peas and new potatoes bringing the usual 25 cents the measure.

HEAVY RAINFALL WILL BENEFIT CROPS

In one of the heaviest rainfalls of the year, exactly one and one half inches of water fell during the day of Quinte district during the night and up until ten o'clock Thursday morning according to the official rain gauge at the Belleville Water Filtration Plant.

The heaviest rainfall apparently was after midnight as only .33 inches of rain had fallin up until 12 o'clock, while since that time .97 inches was received.

With the haying harvest now well on its way towards completion farmers are also welcomed the rain which will do much toward the development of late pea and grain crops. Corn, peas and beans are also badly in need of rain, it was stated, while pastures will also benefit considerably.

GARAGE OPERATORS DISCUSS DISCOUNTS

Members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Garage Operators' Association met at their regular monthly meeting in the Hotel Quinte Wednesday evening when matters of importance pertaining to the garage industry were brought up for discussion. The program of discounts now in use in Western Ontario was the principal item under discussion by the members.

Diverting from the usual procedure of the meeting of business, members were called to order some directly after the dinner hour of the night. President Bill Davies presided over the meeting at which it was expected four new members would be welcomed into the association. Only those in Eastern Ontario from Brighton and one from Bloomfield, failed to attend the meeting. A Deseronto boy missed out on the 4-H Club tour which was drawn for, this amount now to be added to the prize for the next meeting.

Chicken thieves were thwarted in an attempt to steal fowl from the pens of James Govan, South Front St., early Wednesday evening when disturbances were heard on the premises. Police were notified and hastened to the scene, where they found several of Mr. Govan's fattened chickens in a nearby vacant lot. The chickens evidently had been spared, but apparently the would-be thieves were frightened off before they could snatch the birds. Mr. Cowan's fowl are back to roost.

TWO CYCLES STOLEN, ONE IS RECOVERED

One of the two bicyles taken in Belleville by joyriders during the past 24 hours was returned to its owner, police revealed today. A bicycle taken from the vicinity of the Armouries was recovered and returned to its owner, William Blandford, No. 3, Bridge Street. However, Miss Helen Holmes, R.R. No. 2, wants to know whether her parked bike was stolen from a parking spot on Front St. last night and was still missing today at noon.

Rotary Club Attends RCAF Sport Events

Trenton, (Special) — Monday evening's Rotary meeting will long be remembered by Trenton Rotary Klans and Rotarians. Fifty Rotarians accompanied by their wives met at Grace United Church where a dinner had been prepared by Mrs. Hunnisett and staff.

With Rotarian Ken Couch in the chair, in the absence of the President George Cobley, the meeting was cut to forty-five minutes and at seven o'clock twenty-five motor cars filled with guests proceeded to the main gate of the R.C.A.F. station where they were met by a reception committee and welcomed to the Sports Events provided by the boys of the Airforce Blue. There was some amazing diving by Fit. Lt. Johnny Pitt, D.F.C. of Toronto, who incidentally got some excellent clowning on the side, canoe racing, sailboat racing and sculling, featuring such notables as Bobby Pearce, Jake Gauldur and Johnny Fitzpatrick. Probably more being than ever witnessed in one evening by Rotarians, was seen as fifteen boats brought about the elimination for the finals on Tuesday.

Rotarians and Rotary Anns are indeed grateful to Group Captain McGregor for his kindness in making them guests at such an outstanding entertainment, and to Rotarian Hunnisett and staff for his part in helping to make the arrangements.

During the meeting on Monday an appeal for Blood Donors to go along to the clinic in Belleville on August 11. It is expected a large number will help in this important way of assisting the war effort.

Rollins Family Holds Reunion

Tweed (Special)—About seventy-five of the Rollins family gathered in a dinner picnic at Tweed Memorial Park Wednesday afternoon.

They were present from Coe Hill, Madoc, Napanee, Stirling, Shannonville, Belleville and other points.

At the noon hour a telegram was received from the McMillan Family, Toronto, expressing regret their regrets at not being able to be present. The latter was also read from Mr. John French, 96 years of age, from Vancouver.

After dinner was over, election of officers was held as follows: Stanley Rollins, Cooper, President; Mayor Harry Rollins, Belleville, 1st Vice-President; Mrs. Roy Rollins, Coe Hill, Stirling, Sec'y.; S. B. Rollins, Tweed, Treas. Mr. Cooper, being the retiring president, then turned the meeting over to Mayor Harry Rollins in the absence of the new president.

Short speeches were given by a number present, and S. B. Rollins, Tweed, said it was 94 years ago that his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Rollins, landed in Canada. Mr. George Rollins, a brother of his father's came at the same time.

The youngsters enjoyed themselves swimming in the lake and some motor boat rides and altogether had a real visit together. Mr. S. B. Rollins, of Tweed, was the oldest one present.

Fined $100 For Paying Off On Pin Ball Machine

Convicted of paying out ten cents on one chance on a machine playing a multiple pin ball machine on Front Street, Mr. Clarence Gaudette was fined $100 and costs in County Police Court here today. Gaudette pleaded guilty to a customer ten cents after the player had amassed a certain multiple number by playing an electric pin ball machine when he was arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd.

The case was brought before the court by Provincial Constables Dickinson and Hamilton of the Anti-Gambling Squad. Toronto Constable Tomlinson testified to the evidence of slugs into the machine, while Constable Collins played the multiple machine several times before he got "two free games" registered. Constable Collins asked for ten cents instead of the two free games and the Davis gave it to him," testified Tomlinson.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. asked for the confiscation and subsequent destruction of the machine after the conviction had been registered and the Magistrate His Worship granted the request.

Many Complaints Over Pools Of Water on Walks

With Front Street sidewalks appearing more like marshland in places reminiscent of the days when are really intended for that of paving purposes, the drizzle—then a few complaints have been heard following early Saturday morning the numerous puddles which appear in the middle of the walk.

To dodge these puddle, which appear during every shower, takes more than a little manoeuvring on the part of a parcel-laden pedestrian who may also drop shop windows and then steer a variegated course over a few blocks of concrete at the curb wall. The reason for all this inconvenience is the sidewalk at spot, sinking in the centre to form receptacles which catch the rain.

One pedestrian having a bit more difficulty than usual to keep from stepping into the puddles was heard complaining that merchants appeared insufficiently interested to seek the cause of the side-walk. "The city cannot go about replacing all the sidewalks," he said, "you'd think the merchants' would show interest enough to brush away the puddles."

U.S. Airmen Sweep Into Hankow Area

Chungking, July 22 (AP)— In three days of air activity, American aircraft attacked target in the vicinity of Haiphong and Hongay, French Indo-China, made a sweep in the Hankow area of Central China and bombed a Japanese advance base at Engchung, Yunnan Province, a United States communique announced today.

In the attacks on French Indo-China, the war bulletin said, the Americans covered direct hits on a floating dock and "with good results" bombed the port area at Haiphong.

All aircraft returned safely.

REVIEW OF WAR PROMISED

London, July 22. (CP)—Foreign Secretary Eden today told the House of Commons that the war situation, "which is developing not altogether unsatisfactorily", will be reviewed in the House before the next recess. He did not say whether Prime Minister Churchill would give the review.

MUNRO GIVES

At 11:45 a.m. our guns began to pound the German area. I hurried along the road farther and climbed a hill in an observation post with a British gunnery officer was observing the fire of the guns.

Shells swished overhead and there was the sharp crack of the gun behind us. Our guns would fire for five or 10 minutes and then let up for a while. Then it would be shells bursting on the hillside.

It was until 1 p. m. that the battle for Enna really warmed up. On the ridges of one valley scores of guns belched out their salvos together and terrific concentrations of fire crashed down on the highest hill held by the enemy, Noblett Artillery Range.

It was about three-quarters of a mile from the spot where I was lying among a cluster of thistles and trees when without pause I saw the slope covered with bursting shells. As the shells hit every patch looked flowered out and floated off in a gentle breeze to veil the hill.

It was the most terrifying barrage I have ever heard. For 35 minutes it kept up with deep bood of medium guns, the sharp crack field guns, the wail of the awful screech of shells going overhead, and resounding explosions where they were located.

The barrage moved slowly from the hill to the valley and then to the main road and each feature was plastered with high explosives that anything could live under that fire seemed impossible.

Field Day for Canadian Gunners

The Canadian gunners must have had a field day on this, their biggest action so far. Stripped to the waist, they sweated at the guns, loading and firing, blading and firing.

For one hour and a half the line of hills ahead of us was covered with the most concentrated shelling and then at 1:35 p.m. the artillery barrage was lifted.

I saw Gen. Simons on our hilltop, watching the effect of the shelling, and then the clouds of dust in a tank for a reconnaissance on the flank.

In a slight haze to the north I could see Assoro on its hilltop. The city controls road communications with the principal highways to Catania, Agira, Nicosia and Messina radiating from it.

GIVEN AIR SUPREMACY

United States bombers flew overhead, heading in the direction of Messina. Spitfires and Mustangs were also in the air. There were no enemy planes around all day.

As the fierce gunfire became less, I talked to the general who had personally directed the artillery fire. He was pleased with the way the battle was going and indicated that the German battle group "probably is in the hills."

Later I saw 20 German prisoners, most of them aged from 19 to 22 years, marched along and shaken and told an officer they were Panzer Grenadiers. One of them was conscripted soldiers from occupied countries. A lone Italian from the Livorno Division followed them at a distance. He was afraid the Germans might stop behind the ferries or they'd kill him.

As the night fell the Canadian infantry were systematically clearing the way to Enna and there was still fighting.

INGERSOLL WON'T RELEASE PLANE

Ingersoll, Ont., July 22. (CP)— Ingersoll let it be known, will not tolerate shirts worn in unorthodox group outdoor trousers. Notice to that effect served warning to this effect upon a group of teen-age girls, seen on Thursday Streets Sunday night, that their unconventional mode of dress must be tucked in.

The British Air-Sea Rescue Service has commissioned a new type of rescue launch with a maximum speed of 25 knots. The 71-foot craft carries a crew of 11, has a hospital cabin for rescued airmen.

150 PLANES BLAST

The communique said the raid was made "in support of our ground forces." This might indicate Allied troops are slowly advancing from Etnogal Inlet, two miles northeast, where last week they reported the entire Japanese garrison.

Balcombe is the supply base for Munda, key Japanese defence point in the central Solomons.

Only one sentence was used in reporting the ground action on Munda:

"Enemy ground forces launched strong counter-attack and were repulsed with heavy losses."

Over Madang, New Guinea, twenteighted fighters won a smashing victory against a much greater Japanese force. The battle took place during an intensive, low-altitude attack by Allied bombers.

"Enemy planes in force were engaged by our fighter escort," the communique said. "They were defeated and dispersed, 19 being shot down and destroyed and 11 probably were destroyed. Two Allied planes were lost but one pilot is safe."

Sharp fighting continued in the advanced patrols in the Komiatum mountains seven miles inland from Salamaua.

DEBATE LENGTHY ON COMMUNISTS AND 'WITNESSES'

Physical Fitness Training Program With Federal Aid

INCOME AND HEALTH

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 22 — (CP) — Hopes of ending the parliamentary session this week were brightened momentarily yesterday when the House of Commons passed the last remaining items of government legislation but dimmed again when the Chamber tangled down in a long debate over Communists and Witnesses of Jehovah.

To finish this week, the House must pass many hundreds of millions of dollars of appropriations for war and non-war purposes at a much greater speed than that far.

Yesterday, the House passed three all stages the new Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act designed specifically for prairie province farmers, and quickly passed a bill to set up and finance a national council on physical fitness.

That concluded the government's legislative program for the session, so far as any notice appears on the order paper. To be disposed of are only some scattered items in the $3,800,000,000 war appropriation for the current fiscal year, and non-war estimates of about $600,000,000. War Appreciation

Justice Minister St. Laurent's war appreciation was taken up in the evening but the debate on Communists and Witnesses of Jehovah, which arose last week when these entities were in question of the whole, came up again and there little progress was made.

Members representative of all parties have suggested that the ban on Communists and the Witnesses be lifted.

The same arguments were repeated last night until G. G. McGeer (Lib., Vancouver Burrard), who said he was in favor of lifting the ban, declared he should be a revision of debate rules to prevent endless repetition of arguments on this and similar issues.

Mr. St. Laurent repeated his explanation of last week that the lifting of the ban would invite those groups to announce that their loyalty had been confirmed by the government.

Main argument yesterday was on the Witnesses. The Minister said they were not banned because of their religious beliefs but because their teachings were subversive. He said they sought to discourage young men from joining the armed forces.

Spokesman for the C.C.F.

New Dewsbarry Groups pictured the Witnesses as a religious and harmless sect which went feuds were that they sometimes were nuisances. Even the Nazis had operated under the criminal code when they violated the law but there was no excuse for declaring the whole organization illegal.

The debate was on an item—eventually approved—of $85,000 for expenses of administering the Defence of Canada regulations.

Mr. St. Laurent repeatedly told the House that the regulations were administered by provincial law officers and his department could not be held responsible for individual prosecutions of which complaints was made.

Never Adopted

Chief argument for lifting the ban on Communists and Witnesses was the report of last year's Commons committee on the regulations which recommended that the ban be lifted. The report was never adopted by the House nor was his adoption moved.

Until it was moved and adopted by a majority of the House, said Mr. St. Laurent, he would continue to ignore it.

Victor Quelch (N.D. Acadia) asked: If it were possible, as some said, that action against the Witnesses was prompted by their attacks upon the Roman Catholic Church.

"There is no particle of evidence to support that statement", said Resources Minister Crerar.

Physical Fitness

The Physical Fitness Bill authorizes that government to grant $225,000 on a 50-50 basis with the province for the expenses of a National Council to direct and co-ordinate physical fitness training programs.

Each province will have a member on the council and only the director will be a paid official. The council will sponsor programs and a training school for instructors will be set up.

There was no opposition to the bill but a number of members discussed it and questioned the Administration plans.

Income and Food

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said nutrition was an essential part of any physical fitness scheme, and the broader question of the means by which all citizens would have the right to sufficient income to purchase the proper kinds of food to improve their health.

Part of the present health problem was due to the depression years when people had to live on relief.

Mr. MacKenzie said the main function of the council would be to give guidance and direction in a physical fitness program which would be as uniform as possible. A special school was proposed for the training of physical fitness teachers, and it would be under the direction of provincial authorities.

Dr. Wolf Angus MacInnis (CCF, Vancouver East) that a uniform division of the grant between provinces would be wrong.

Prince Edward Island $3,000; Nova Scotia $18,000; New Brunswick $6,000; Quebec $65,000; Ontario $72,000; Manitoba $14,000; Saskatchewan $18,000; Alberta $16,000, and British Columbia $16,000. Payments would be based on populations.

Provision For Gymnasiums

Mr. MacKenzie said he agreed with Dr. Adamson (Prog. Con., York West) that there should be gymnasiums in rural communities and playing fields for schools, including those in remote areas, would be provided.

Ralph Maslyn Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound), twitted the C.C.F. party on its stand, registered in the House at the start of the war, against the participation of Canadians overseas. He said the party had never repudiated that stand, although they now carry that had been in vain.

Mr. Slaght also aroused a furious protest from Grenver Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South) when he reminded that member of a press report in the Toronto Star dated last March which attributed to him the statement that "we will have to get rid of the Churchills in order to attain our ideals."

Mr. Gillis had never denied making that statement, but he had his party repudiated it.

Mr. Gillis gave a long explanation of what he had said at Hamilton but his explanation did not include the phrase attributed to him. He said he was not responsible for what was written by a "pin-headed reporter."

He observed that Mr. Slaght was "a young man" at the time of the First Great War, and the fact that Mr. Gillis had spent his 17th birthday in France fighting for this country.

Mr. Gillis was not in the House when Mr. Slaght began his statement. Mr. Slaght had left the House when Mr. Gillis began.

London schools can again ring their bells. The Nead teachers have been asked to have them sounded for morning and afternoon sessions.

ETERNAL CITY PROBLEM OF PRECISION BOMBING

Rome offers one of the most difficult problems to unharmed. The chart of the Italian capital shows be faced by any airmen in this war but Allied fliers how places which Allied bombers are anxious to save are proving themselves equal to the task of selecting are crowded closely among military targets legitimtheir military targets with deadly accuracy while ately marked for destruction. Italians were warned leaving Vatican City, historical spots and monuments that Fascists or Nazis might bomb the Vatican in an attempt to throw the blame on the Allies.

U. S. LIBERATORS ATTACK JAP PARAMUSHIRO BASE

First U. S. raid on the major Japanese base on Paramushiro Island, northernmost of the Japanese chain, is reported by the Navy. The attack was carried out by U. S. Army Liberator bombers, like that pictured at left. Although the bombers' base was bolrevealed, it was presumed that they took off from a field in the Aleutians, as indicated on the map below. Building, war stores and near hits scored on ship in Paramushiro Straits. — (International).

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Canadian Press War Analyst

It certainly gives one a grateful feeling of security to hear Vice-Admiral Frederick Horne, Vice-Chief of United States Naval Operations, say that the planning for a Pacific war "that will last at least until 1945" but it's equally good to note that he doesn't specifically state he believes the conflict necessarily will run that long.

Six more years might not mean much to a tortoise which has an expectancy of 200 years of life. But it's a long time to the average citizen.

When James F. Byrnes, Director of War Mobilization, was asked about the admiral's statement he replied: "If anyone else is planning on that basis, I do not know who they are." T. V. Soong, China's astute foreign minister in Washington, remarked that it's "anybody's guess" how long the fight with Japan will last — and that seems to be a fair assay of the situation.

One thing we're sure of is that whatever the duration of the war, it will be plenty long and painful. Its length and bloodshed and privations will depend mainly on civilian efforts in producing sinews of victory. We must neither allow ourselves to grow slack because of over-confidence nor become despondent—and therefore inefficient —for fear of a long war.

Unfortunately the amount of striking power the Allies could turn against Japan has been largely dependent on the demands of the European conflict. However, things are looking decidedly brighter in the Pacific as industrial efforts begin to pyramid.

As witness to progress we have yesterday's great Allied air raid on Bairoko Harbor, New Georgia, when 150 bombers dumped 120 tons of grief on the Japs. This was a companion piece to that Saturday's huge aerial attack by 192 aircraft on Rabaul, Japan's key base in the Solomons. More than twenty ships including a cruiser and three destroyers were raided.

The field of Allied aggressiveness covers the whole vast Pacific area.

Daily we are tearing at the vital heart of the Japanese eclipse. In his efforts to close in the vast expanse of islands which he grasped, he is extending himself so much he can't replace 'and can't afford to lose.

Since the attack on Pearl Harbor the Allies have destroyed close to 650 Japanese ships of all types, including some 230 war vessels. The enemy air losses have been grave.

The cumulative effect of this will be clear, when Japan's Anglo-American sea and air power is released from the European theatre and can be hurled at the Mikado.

DREW ASSAILS ONTARIO GOV'T

Says in Hydro Electric Matters it Has Shown Preference for Quebec

Smiths Falls, Ont., July 22 (CP)—Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative leader, charged last night in an election address that the Ontario government was attempting to "steal" the forthcoming general elections by having the names of voters off the voting lists to the benefit of the Liberal party.

Col. Drew spoke here after delivering addresses earlier in the evening at Arnprior and Renfrew. He said that the Liberal government's "extravagance" and chizzed failure to provide for agriculture and to adopt a health plan, despite the seriousness of a possible food shortage.

He proposed a conference of employers, employees and consumers as a means of solving labor problems and a farm system patterned on that which proved successful in England and which embraced county organizations to deal with individual county problems.

He said that his platform placed health and education as most important of Ontario's assets and said he would revise the vocational training program together with health through co-operation and collaboration with the federal government.

At Renfrew, Col. Drew said that in Hydro-electric developments and in the construction of highways along the Ottawa River, the Liberal government had shown a "marked preference" for Quebec as against Ontario.

He said that if his party were returned to power in the Ajax by-elections election it would cancel existing agreements and make a new one that would be "fair to Ontario."

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 22 — (CP)—A "Friends of Hansard" movement is designed to increase public interest in the official report of parliamentary sittings, has been formed with Viscount Simon, Lord Chancellor, as its honorary director.

At present only 2,500 copies of Hansard are distributed outside those which go to members and by documentary films and other methods of propaganda it is hoped to increase the circulation to 10,000. One film will show the work behind an answer to a parliamentary question.

Cheers and cries of "yoah" greeted George Hicks' reply to a question in parliament about the number of bricks required to be laid on a straight wall under the essential work order.

"For the most usual types of bricklayer," he replied, "a 9-inch wall, 1-2 and nineteen inch pointed both sides the Datum Line laid down under the payment by results scheme is 240 and 336 bricks per bricklayer respectively for an eight-hour day", said the parliamentary secretary, Ministry of Works, in best bricklayer's language. A former bricklayer himself, Hicks said he thought "such a comparison would be very unfair to other bricklayers" when asked what he could lay down, and he had no answer when a member wanted to know how many Prime Minister Churchill could lay.

Footnote to fame

Ernest Thurtle, parliamentary secretary, Ministry of Information, says 87 papers in foreign languages or under foreign auspices receive assistance from his ministry and from other government departments to maintain them. One of these is Narodni Osvobozeni, a news sume 27 4 "tons" of newsprint a week.

Luke Hogan of Liverpool gave these word pictures of two Labor leaders at the party's annual conference:

"Mr. Morrison died very well in the graveyard scene in the recent Old Vic production, but he's not dead yet by a long chalk.

"Mr. Bevin surrounded by coupons trying to prevent himself being crushed to death by civilians eager for an eight-hour day", said the parliamentary secretary, Ministry of Works, in best bricklayer's language. A former bricklayer himself,

L. W. Brockington, adviser to the Empire division of the Ministry of Information, has returned to London after a tour which took him to Australia, New Zealand and a number of Pacific Islands with stories of Japanese fanaticism that prefers death to capture.

He said he had been told about a Japanese officer with no feet who crawled up some rocks saying he wanted to surrender to the United States marine shot him dead. The marine was admonished by a fellow officer, but he had hardly finished speaking when the body of the Japanese exploded. It had been a living bomb.

He was also told that naval seamen were rarely able to rescue Japanese after a sea engagement because they preferred to drown.

Japanese airmen, he was told, never carry parachutes.

M. A. Balthasar, Belgium Minister of Transport, disclosed in London that about 25 per cent of the Belgian women who were serving when Belgium entered the war have been lost in action.

Lady Woolton, wife of Britain's Food Minister, is a names pig of sorts for her husband. He told a BBC research station at Aberdeen that he tries out food recipes on his wife until so far she has remained healthy.

MUNDA AIRFIELD IS NEAR CAPTURE

U. S. Ground Troops Within Few Thousand Yards of Position

South Pacific Headquarters, July 22 — (AP) — United States ground troops are within a few thousand yards of Munda airfield, which "now is in reach of capture," a communique said today from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, announced today.

Japanese defenders, clinging tenaciously to the key New Georgia Island position, are attacking behind screening mortar positions ringing the field, but the Americans are making "satisfactory progress," the spokesman said.

"This optimism indicated the American troops may have succeeded in moving closer more rapidly than the position two miles away which they have held for some time, and which was their nearest approach previously reported. Although two miles still may be few inches and yards are roughly synonymous, the statement by the enemy now is containing within the defences immediately surrounding itself and that its capture is in reach suggests a definite move has been made.

The majority of the enemy's artillery, machine-guns and small arms Japanese are fighting chiefly with mortars, machine-guns and small arms.

The spokesman said there was no sign the enemy could bring reinforcements by the ground, sea and air blockade of Munda and that no immediate Japanese forces have got through to relieve or reinforce the land force.

Japanese opposition was said to be deteriorating, steadily, but the spokesman was unwilling to estimate the time when a final breakthrough and capture is believed possible.

NIXON DEFINES 15-POINT PROG. FOR GOVERNMENT

Premier Also Outlines Post-War 'Chart of Our Course'

SPEECH AT TIMMINS

Timmins, Ont., July 22 (CP) — A 15-point platform to be described as a "pledge to continue the sound course which we have been following" was outlined last night by Premier Harry Nixon in an address broadcast over a network of CBC and private stations in Ontario.

He coupled announcement of the principles on which he said the Liberal Government seeks re-election August 4 with an outline of a post-war program designed to "chart for our course in the reconstruction period." Both C.C.F. and Progressive Conservative politicians declared his party would not appeal for support on a program of "political promises."

11. Encourage private enterprise in business and industry.

12. Continue to reform educational policies and standards to provide "equality of educational opportunity for all classes."

13. Continue educational grants to municipalities, especially those sparsely settled sections.

SAYS C.C.F. STANDS FOR FAMILY FARM

Jolliffe Says Program Only Hope of Freedom and Security for Farmer, Veteran

Mount Dennis, Ont., July 22 — (CP) — E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario CCF leader, told a public meeting here last night that the C.C.F. program is the only hope of "freedom and security" for war veterans and war workers.

He said if Liberal Premier Harry Nixon had "a grain of sympathy for the thousands of farmers who have lost their farms because of conditions under his government" he would be voting C.C.F." in the Aug. 4 provincial election.

"As a farmer, Mr. Nixon ought to vote C.C.F." said Mr. Jolliffe "because C.C.F. has always stood — and still stands — for the maintenance of the family farm. It will be maintained only if agriculture gets a square deal — which it is not — and industry gets a square deal—which it is not now."

Mr. Jolliffe said Lt.-Col George Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative leader was "wailing that the C.C.F. program is going to mean regimentation and bureaucracy."

"The fact is that the C.C.F. policy means democracy and freedom for the workers and farmers of Ontario," the CCF leader went on. "The only groups which have anything to fear from the C.C.F. are the monopolies which are being so well defended by George Drew."

Allied Military Government

The Allied Military Government which accompanied the Sicilian army of invasion on July 10th will show to the Sicilian people how the affairs of civilians can be looked after by an Anglo-American administration in wartime. The Sicilians have had no doubt very tragic experiences under Fascism and Mussolini. For those who are now in territory occupied by the Allies there is an end of Italian control which has no doubt been tragically inefficient in the time of war especially.

The new Allied Military Government of Occupied Territory or Amgot, as it is called, is thoroughly trained for the problems which it will face.

Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons on Wednesday stated that the Amgot in Sicily would permit no political activity of the Sicilians at the present time but that the government had the hopes the Sicilians would adopt democratic ideas of their own accord when delivered from Fascism.

The Sicilians are accordingly privileged to have the opportunity of seeing efficient and humanitarian administration of law and order, this body will administer it for the welfare of the territory.

This government is of a new type and will act for the period of the war or for the time when the problems of war are settled. It will show the people of Sicily and Italy something of democracy.

Democracy has proven in war time a power greater than the tyrannies of Hitler and Mussolini. It has shown it if not effete or worn out as the nefarious Hitler asserted on occasions but is a living growing political principle of freedom and justice and love of law and order and this unique government which has already been established will offer the proofs of this to those in the parts of the Axis countries which will come under Allied occupation.

Hitler-dominated Europe is the victim of treachery and tyranny and abuses and crimes of every kind as the universal feelings of the overrun peoples hating Germany prove with their great underground movements. Hitler tyranny is not government, it is brutal domination and a crushing force, armed to destroy.

The Allied Amgot is a new idea, never known before — its purpose is fair administration of territories wrested from the Hun and Fascist during the war.

Seapower, Trade, Freedom

With the arrival of the first Allied merchant ships at a Turkish port bringing lease-lend cargoes from North America through the Mediterranean, something of the greatness of the achievement of the North African victories must be realized. Everyone could see something of its importance for, the shipment of goods through the Inland Sea saved many thousands of miles of voyage and so makes it possible for ships to make more frequent voyages from Europe to the Far East and the South Pacific as well as to the Middle East and that it would assure naval control of the Mediterranean. But it also serves to restore to the world something of the peacetime flow of trade. It is helping Turkey with American lease-lend aid.

It is restoring spirit and courage and adding the sense of freedom that comes with the freer movement of trade. Italian aggression in the Mediterranean interfered with the traffic through the great sea.

It is a powerful influence for faith in the victorious march of the United Nations. Many lands will feel that betterment of conditions which proves that the Hun and the Italian are on the swift downgrade. Japan, too, must feel adversely the passage of ships by this route. China in the Far East feels the betterment.

As for the Axis powers in Europe their losses in North Africa were a deadly blow, the loss of materials and the loss of their power of interference.

Down the ages the waters of the Mediterranean have borne a large share of the commerce of the world. With the Suez Canal the commerce was expanded. It is the great waterway of the world.

Resurfacing the Pavements

Motorists will be pleased with the resurfacing jobs which have been started on the permanent pavements of the city. The initial work has been completed on Station Street which shows an undoubted improvement. Other resurfacing jobs are planned on Coleman and East Bridge streets.

Condition of the city pavements has been brought before city councils for the past several years by City Engineer Mott and now the opportunity has come for such resurfacing as will restore the smooth highways with the treatment of asphalt and stone chips.

It can easily be seen how effective a new surface will be for the foundation of miles of paved roadways in the city. The protective coating against weather and the wear of traffic should prove of great value.

What Will Returned Men Wear?

(Windsor Star)

The man's clothing business is reported to be in a dither trying to figure out what the men now in uniform will desire in the way of style after demobilization. Fancy is running wild. The clothiers wonder whether there will be a rush for loud colors, a prejudice against coats, or merely a return to pre-war tastes.

The industry, it would seem, is unduly alarmed. Experience has shown that it is not the troops but the stay-at-homes in wartime who are fascinated by extremes in styles. The fighting men, when they return, will be a sobering influence. See if they won't.

It's in the User

(Halifax Herald)

The English language has grave deficiencies," declares an Ontario clergyman, and a newspaper correspondent heartily agrees.

"One could quote," he says, "innumerable examples to show how inaccurate, involved and hopelessly muddled it becomes when we require precise expression."

Both these gentlemen might profitably study the speeches of Prime Minister Churchill, that acknowledged master of our language, and see how, with all its "grave deficiencies," he finds no difficulty in giving precise expression to what he wants to say without becoming "involved and hopelessly muddled."

The "grave deficiencies" are to be found not in the language itself, but in those who lack the knowledge how to use it.

Most People Are Honest

Ottawa Journal)

We see by a contemporary that a lost wallet was found and restored to its owner, its $43 intact, that this incident clearly demonstrated "that there are honest people in the world."

Probably this was written by a young cynic who just could hardly believe that anybody could resist the temptation to acquire $43 without working for it. Thus it is we are told of this piece of honesty as something exceptional.

It isn't exceptional at all. It is not true that most people are thieves, restrained from open crime only by fear of the law.

It is true that most people are honest and decent. If that were not the case organized society as we know it would be impossible.

After crosses and losses men grow humbler and wiser. — Franklin.

Cruiser Gunners Assist 8th Army In Demolishing Points of Resistance

By Paul Kern Lee
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Aboard a British Cruiser Off Catania, Sicily, July 20.—(Delayed)—(CP)—The fight for Catania has developed into the most important Sicilian battle for the Allies who are throwing the full weight of heavy artillery along with reinforcements of tanks and guns against the stubborn Herman Goering division and other German and Italian troops.

The fighting line as visible from drifted seawards, increasing steadily as the day wore on. At 8th Army regular, this ship accompanied by destroyers and other craft, has been hurling gunboats shelled German infantry and artillery concentrations miles inland southwest of Catania.

Simultaneously, planes cut out light heavily bombed the German Army concentrations.

Above the ground road about a mile south of Catania, a huge smoke of bombs could be clearly seen.

Two gigantic explosions indicated enemy munitions dumps had been destroyed.

Two Miles Off Shore

With several units ashore eager to have our supporting fire, the cruiser moved less than two miles from shore. As we swung north of Catania towards a little inlet the Germans suddenly opened up on us.

The shells, mostly four-inch, splashed so close that fragments rained on deck on the bridge, but we were not harmed.

Without even turning at high speed, maybe nevertheless seeming like a brilliant pace, the cruiser replied with her own heavy armament.

The two nearest shore batteries of our ships erred a fire but due to the great smoke it was impossible to tell whether they had been hit or merely feared to disclose their positions to us. The others continued to shell us. Destroyers engaged them as we pulled out of range.

Very Good Reply

The navy's instructions were to shell inclosed army targets first and to ignore shore batteries if possible. The captain of the ship almost gleefully signalled inquiring about the latter's presence, when eventually case this cricketer's reply: "Tell them we have a bat with one or two inside runners."

Translated into heavy shells terms this might read: "In and out pitching with some right over the plate."

As evidence that one was almost "bracketed," I have a small fragment in my pocket for a souvenir. Keeping clear of this area was Lieut. Navigator Lt.-Cmdr. Peter Charles Mowbray and Capt. Ronald James "Windy Gogger", we roamed shells her inshore for eight hours steadily.

Most of the targets were enemy infantry and artillery. A rather fall of smoke made observation difficult even when we were almost at target areas almost on the beach. The army resolutely signalled: "Thanks, good shooting," and once when the enemy commander thought our shots were wildly scattered the army replied, "Good shooting, all salvoes damaging enemy, stopping the move of his mortars, guns, and tractors".

Work Hard, Long To Keep Canadians Moving in Sicily

Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Sicily, July 22 (CP Cable)—Here are the names of some of the men working hard and long hours to keep the Canadians moving in Sicily . . . and the ers.

Maj. Norman Cooper, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Windsor, Ont., is head of the Canadian Provost Corps unit handling traffic. He whizzes about in a jeep covered with the dust and grime of days and nights on the roads.

Capt. Provostmaster of Halifax, assistant commandant at headquarters, is busy pursuing front headquarters. He has to keep convoys moving, select camp sites and see that everyone is fed.

Soldiers-bivouacking with this outfit say it's a regular outdoor hotel except that the ground is mighty hard for sleeping.

The chief clerk, Sgt.-Maj. A. N. Leighton of Calgary, is working as hard as anyone around headquarters.

PIDGIN ENGLISH

Two great American universities —Columbia in New York City and Brown in Providence —are offering courses in Pidgin English.

"Pidgin" is merely a Chinese corruption of "business." Pidgin English is business English.

Basically Pidgin English is a jargon consisting of English words adapted to Chinese phonetics and grammar.

The vocabulary, however, besides corrupted English, words contains a sprinkling or terms from Malay, Portuguese, Hindustani and other languages.

Pidgin English, sometimes called pigeon English, is the "lingua franca" of the ports of the Orient.

Authorities often define Pidgin English as the semi-English jargon used by semi-Anglicized Chinese. This definition is not entirely correct. Pidgin English is spoken by Europeans and Orientals alike. It resulted from the attempts of Chinese to speak English and the English to speak Chinese.

Pidgin English is a trade language and was developed from the necessity of having some kind of common commercial language by which Westerners and Orientals could transact their trade.

Corresponding trade languages, with English basic vocabularies and little or no systematic grammar have been developed in many other parts of the world; in many parts of Africa, in the South Sea Islands and even parts of the New World.

The Chinook Jargon is a form of Pidgin English. Of this curious jargon Clark Wissler says in "The Indians of the United States:"

"Chinook proper, however, was the name of a tribe of Penutian Indians near the mouth of the Columbia River. A trade language evolved, a combination of Indian, English, Spanish and French, once used all over the northwestern United States and even in Canada. This language came into notice early in 1690 and was studied in 1841 by the famous linguist Hale. At that time the Chinook jargon was limited to 300 words, but in 1894 appeared with a thousand words, about half of them English."

A few years ago the Carnegie Institution of Washington sponsored a project to preserve for posterity the vocabulary of Pidgin English, which was described as a "rude, vivid, picturesque trade speech of clips and fragments."

ELECTION LORE RECALLS P.P.A., P.I. AND SUCH

Many Groups Have Offered Their Policies and Panacea; Over 77 Years of Provincial Political History

Toronto, July 21.—(CP)—Indications are there will be few "dark star" or small group candidates on the ballots in the Ontario general election Aug. 4 but the province has had elections when as many as eight or nine parties or groups stormed the hustings and offered their services as M.P.P.'s to an harassed electorate.

In the present 31st general election campaign and Ontario's 77th year as a province it is expected that while there will be three-way contests in many constituencies the issue will be largely between the Liberal, Progressive - Conservative and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation parties.

Generally speaking, government of the province since Confederation has remained in the hands of either of the two old-line parties. Total years of power enjoyed by separate parties or groups follow: Union, four; Reform, one; Liberal, 46; Conservative, 26; Farmer-Labor, four.

Earlier Groups.

Reflecting differences of opinion on the form and operation of Confederation in 1867, the earlier Ontario elections were fought largely by Union and Reform parties, John Sandfield MacDonald's Union government of 1867 gave place in 1871 to the Reformers under Edward Blake, a member also of the House of Commons. Blake resigned the provincial leadership in 1872 to devote all his effort to federal affairs.

The election of 1875 saw the Union and Reform parties renamed Conservative and Liberal following the example of the Dominion House. The provincial Liberals were then led by Sir Oliver Mowatt, who had forsaken the judiciary for politics. Shrewd leader of men, he held the premiership 24 years, still an Ontario record. He was appointed lieutenant-governor in 1897.

Meanwhile, in 1894, the province saw the first serious break in the two-party system with the organizations of the Patrons of Industry and the Provincial Protective Association. The P.I. won 14 seats and the P.P.A. two in the general election that year.

Led by Joseph Hayrock the Patrons are recalled by many as the genesis of the United Farmers' political movements in Canada. For four years the P.I.'s were an effective group in the Ontario House and put the older parties on their mettle. Mr. Hayrock was defeated in the 1898 election. The new party broke up.

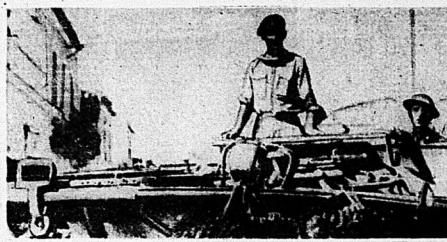
The Protestant Protective Association rose from the agitation born of the payment of $400,000 by the province of Quebec for Jesuit estate claims. It became an issue in the Dominion House and was echoed throughout Ontario. With the ebb of sectarian sentiment the P.P.A. movement subsided.

Later Governments.

The general election of 1906 ended a 34 year Liberal regime. Conservatives, first under Sir James Whitney and then under Sir James Pearis, were in office until 1919.

Post-war reconstruction and the election of 1919 brought Ontario's first venture in government outside the two major parties. The United Farmers elected 44 members, Liberals, 29 and Conservatives 24. With the help of 11 Labor members, E. C. Drury formed the Farmer-Labor Coalition which held the reins nearly four years.

Led by G. Howard Ferguson the Conservative party regained office in 1923, taking 76 seats as compared with 17 U.F.O., 15 Liberal and three Labor. George S. Henry succeeded Ferguson as premier on his appointment as High Commissioner to London.



In the election of 1934 the Liberals under Mitchell Hepburn swept the province and took over the government with 66 supporters in the House, a working majority of 42, the largest since 1908 when Conservatives were elected to 86 of 106 seats.

The Hepburn government was returned Oct. 6, 1937 with the following result: Liberal, 61; Conservative, 23; Liberal-Progressive, 2; Independent-Liberal, 1; United Farmer, 1—total 90 seats. Standing at dissolution of the Legislature June 29, 1943, was: Liberal 46; Progressive-Conservative, 19; Liberal-Progressive, 2; Vacant 19.

LEND-LEASE OVER BILLION

Washington, July 21.—AP—Lend-Lease Administrator Edward Stettinius reported last night that monthly Lend-Lease aid by the United States to other United Nations passed the $1000,000,000 mark for the first time in June.

RATION REASON

A large bomber travelling from England to Berlin and back consumes about 1,750 gallons of gasoline.

The Canadian Press told his mother what the modest lieutenant didn't write home.

Just winter Ross Munro, CP war correspondent, ran across Lieut. Desmond Gibson, in Tunisia. The 23-year-old son of Hon. Colin Gibson, Revenue Minister, and Mrs. Gibson, had just completed a tough engineering job. He is "the man who built the Medjez bridge." He was captured by the Germans and escaped three hours later.

He made his way back to the British lines loaded down with 12 watches which the Germans, by a ludicrous piece of reasoning, had taken from him and other prisoners.

Munro called to Canada the story of Lieut. Desmond Gibson. And it was all news to Mrs. Gibson when she read in the Ottawa papers of her son's experiences—his work under bombing and shell fire; his capture and escape; his droll recital of the incident of the watches—it was "exactly our Desmond."

Lieut. Gibson writes home regularly, like thousands of other soldiers, sailors and airmen. And like those same thousands he seldom tells of what he has done and the trials he has undergone.

But these stories do reach Canada—for you. Through Ross Munro, Louis Hunter, Maurice Desjardins and other CP men on war assignment come the tales of heroism, little incidents packed with human interest and the personal touches so thrilling to the mothers and fathers of Canada's fighting men.

These are the stories you like to clip from the paper and read over and over. They tell intimately of the active-service life of your son, your husband or your next-door neighbor. They tell the things he so purposely "forgot."

WOMEN OF THE EMPIRE

They stand, most noble figures,
In the shadows of the past,
Women of the Empire,
Whose influence for Time was vast.
They looked far into the future
Their lot with their country's cast,
They gave their greatest treasures
And faced life's bitterest strain
Behind them all pleasures,
And entered Gethsemane
With women of all measure
And bravec the pain.

The glory of the nation upon its knees
Her frame, though slight and fragile,
Has stood Time's strenuous test.
The silver and the golden
Who give the world their best
Prove thus the nation's trust.

The blood of many noble men,
Has stained the Empire's soil,
But loving women beyond ken
In sad but willing toil
Have bowed in misery o'er the slain
And grieved at the awful spoil.

Daughters of the Empire,
In these most noble days,
Within whose hearts there glows a fire
That lights the devious ways,
And hope for happier days.

By ALICE ALDEN

THE PRINT frock has assumed tremendous importance this year and appears frequently in every gathering, with a simple home luncheon or a big garden wedding. Beautiful prints, color schemes and interesting detail lift the print frock into the luxury level. Alexis Smith is very fond of this printed silk crepe frock. Look at the neckline and sleeve line and is made with short sleeves and a deep V neck. A suede belt is studded with black patent leather discs. The print is black on a white ground.

The Marry-Go-Round

Think Twice, Before You Re-marry

It has been said that twice as much you can possibly help it. If you can't help putting your thoughts on paper, it is possibly a real gift for writing.

And the same thing might apply to marrying. If you can't help wanting to marry again, it is possibly real love. I don't believe in "trial marriages" or "trial separations" or in separations of any kind for that matter, except as long as they can bear with each other.

Least of all, do I believe in those "trial reunions" so popular in New York and Reno. Surely by now you've not found out that you CAN'T live happily with each other, and because whatever made you decide to part is always intensified and more painful the second time.

Of course, I don't refer to the long partings of service men and their brides. These are not "separations" because the home is kept together in spirit, closer than many homes who live in the same house. They are never really separated, no matter how many miles, years or time may be.

I am speaking of the young husband and wife, who can't be a temper and divorce in a huff — and then re-marry just on an impulse. That sort of thing is a daily occurrence now. But the only reunions that ever re-unite are those of two people who have discovered life without each other is unbearable and who know that their re-mate, marriage is no experiment of "trial and error."

If you are still carrying the torch for the man you loved and left, and can't remember why you ever left him, then bliss is spread the week-end at your place or your summer hotel, before you rush to re-marry him.

It may CURE you! It will certainly enlighten you!

Time lends enchantment to an absent lover or an ex-wife and dims into soft colors all the faults and quarrels that drove you to distraction — and the divorce courts. You recall all the nice, endearing things about him — and forget all the rest. You remember wistfully that he used to bring you little gifts and surprises — and forget that you used to loathe to wait them at 2 a. m. You remember how charming he was at dinner, when a lamb he was when the dinner was late — and forget what a hyena he was at breakfast.

All the dark, domestic storms are blotted out, and only the memory of the bright, sweet moments remains to haunt you. But have him around, from Friday to Monday, and you'll discover that the only way he has changed in the interim, is to grow "MORE SO"! That's the only way in which a man ever changes!

So, be certain that you love him as he WAS, and that your re-marriage is not just a "trial", but a forever interest. Then you'll never have to re-marry or play with dynamite.

Q. Is there a ceiling on used radio tubes?

A. Yes, they must not be sold for more than the ceiling price in the same locality for the same size of tube new.

Q. I have a number of used fruit baskets. What shall I do with them?

A. If you know any fruit or vegetable grower in your district, he would probably appreciate them as these baskets are fairly scarce. There are fixed prices which growers will pay for used baskets varying from one to three cents apiece.

Q. What is the meaning of the maximum prices that have been set for various commodities?

A. These are the highest prices at which such commodities may be legally sold, sometimes in different areas or zones. This does not mean, however, that the ceiling or maximum price is always at the maximum figure. It may be lower or the manufacturer figure because of the article or the retailer to which he is entitled to add 4 certain amount when he is selling it to the consumer. It frequently happens that when that formula is followed, the selling price is below the maximum.

Q. My laundry has failed to return an article which I sent to it some weeks ago. Can the Prices Board do anything to help me?

A. I am afraid that is a matter between you and your laundry. The Board is responsible for laundries maintaining their prices and services but it cannot undertake to mediate in regard to articles which they may lose.

The Remington children of Dorland are holidaying at Mount Pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes, Mount Pleasant, are wearing smiles, damaged by the ordinary process of canning. With modern methods that exclude air from the tasting container in the canning process, vitamin C is retained to a great extent. Furthermore, storage of the canned food over a long period of time does not result in any great loss of the vitamin C. In fact, much more vitamin C is destroyed in vegetables cooked in the home cooking for canning when air is excluded.

Studies of the mineral content of canned foods have also been made. It has been found that iodine is retain as much lime, magnesium and phosphorus when they are canned foods as when they use comparable amounts of fresh ones. Other studies indicate that the vitamin C requirements of babies may be supplied at least in great part by canned vegetables, particularly spinach, cabbage and cauliflower.

There seems to be no good reason why canned fruits and vegetables cannot be used as substitutes for fresh fruits and vegetables wherever the latter are not available. It is certainly much better to eat these canned foods than to do without fruits and vegetables altogether. Of course, at present, in many localities fresh foods may be more available than canned foods, but under normal conditions, a good supply of canned foods is available and may well be used.

THE EXPLANATION why WHITE SWAN TISSUE

may be "out of stock" at your dealer's.

You go to your dealer for your regular supply of WHITE SWAN and find him temporarily out of stock. Naturally you are disappointed but please don't blame him, as he is only too anxious to keep on supplying you with Canada's most popular toilet tissue.

It is simply a question of supply and demand. He cannot keep enough WHITE SWAN in stock because we cannot supply him fast enough. We cannot supply him fast enough because our mill, in turn, cannot meet the increased demand from Government, war industries and the public.

We would like to be able to make more WHITE SWAN than we are turning out now, but war needs come before our requirements for new equipment. So, until the present crisis is over, we ask you to bear with us. We will do our utmost to see that any dealer out of stock for the moment will soon receive his supply.

Whacky Hats Cheerful

BY HELEN FOLLET

SAY WHAT you will about whacky millinery, it strikes a cheerful note in a saddened world. No two hats are alike these days. Maybe some of the designers did their modeling with their eyes closed, not knowing themselves what the results would be.

After years of simple, conservative modes, millinery has achieved a magnificent comeback. If you will look at the photograph of your great-great- grandmother, you will see her wearing a rule bonnet laden with feathers and flowers. Sweet to indeed too, with a ribbon bow under her chin.

One should have a knack for wearing a hat and get the right tilt means everything. The wrong pose is fatal. Some numbers are to be worn over the nose, some on the back of the head, others over one ear.

There can be no rules concerning hat shapes and facial contours. Hats are necessary to select the right model. Without taste a woman is likely to look dowdy and dated no matter what she wears or how she wears it.

A chic, becoming hat makes for morale. Though the balance in the check book is sinking fast, a smart hat will make one feel like a million dollars.

WEAR GAY COLORS

Crazy millinery has been the subject of many jokes these past years, but women have learned to be thankful for it. Sassy chapeaux get release from anxiety and worries.

They have a beneficial effect upon women who suffer from color fear, an affliction that keeps its victims grim looking and uninteresting. We need gay colors in all our clothes. A red feather in the hat of a middle aged woman will make her feel younger. In her heart she will be saying: "There's life in the old gal yet."

THE Marry-Go-Round

Streamlined Marriage

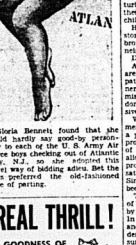
I am wondering if the faces of all those people who predicted the doom of marriage, a decade or so ago, are a bright crimson, now that the clerks of the marriage license bureaus are all on the jump out from overwork.

Don't you remember? That was about the time, when girls were beginning to feel so independent and sophisticated that some of them, actually, had the nerve to reason why an enlightened girl with no money and many good and cynical young men retorted that there never WAS any reason why an enlightened girl should marry? So what?

Ah, well, all of that generation are married or marrying, now; and they have discovered that independency is not all the bugaboo, they had thought it was. This is because marriage, like the radio and the automobile, has had to adapt itself to the times. It has been so completely modernized and reconditioned, that it is a up-to-the-minute as a bomber or a flying fortress.

The man of today is streamlined and is much more comfortable than the man, twenty or thirty years ago. You can't spot a wedded pair by looks, these days. They look alike. They are just a pair of ordinary food parts without having took much of starches, fats, and sugars and too many calories. Of course, an excess of food intake throws a greater burden on the body tissues, and this, too, may play a part in raising the blood pressure.

Civilized people have high blood pressure much more often than do the primitive races who live on foods that have not been kept in storage or preserved in one way or another. It has been noted that when these primitive people began to eat the same type of diet as we do they became subject to high blood pressure. This fact does not prove that dietary mistakes are the cause of high blood pressure but it does throw some evidence to the belief. It is possible that the giving of proper food in the diet may reduce the amount of high blood pressure and should help relieve the condition when it is just starting or, perhaps, lessen the severity of the symptoms.



UNDERGROUND FOOTBALL

London, (CP)—The Queen, on a tour of inspection in the London area, visited a great underground factory where girls of the Auxiliary Territorial Service each day turn out thousands from the war office to the war fronts, home comforts, dominions and allied nations.

SEALING RATS

London, (CP)—Food Minister Lord Woolton, announcing a "noisy-sad" campaign against rats, said the rats and mice each year destroy or foul 2,000,000 tons of food. The annual population of the country has been estimated at 40,000,000", he said.

FAREWELL, BOYS!

Gloria Bennett found that she could hardly say good-by personally to each of the U. S. Army Air Force boys checking out of Atlantic City, N.J., so she adopted this method of bidding them adieu. But the boys preferred the old-fashioned type of parting.

Fashion Flashes

PENCILS ARE BUSY writing orders for frocks that are nice enough yet simple enough to do duty for any daytime event. A nice typical model is in deep honey beige wool jersey made with tiny standing collar and bow-tie neck. Twisted gold color buttons for all the way down buttoning and for the links on the sleeves. Brown suede belt with two gilt buckles.

There's plenty of beige and brown around for late summer and autumn wear. A smart tricorne is in deep beige felt with thick puffed brim and a trimming of two tail quill clusters in beige and brown. Wide crown band and veil are brown.

BURNING TIME

The Anglo-Saxons in ancient times measured time by burning a graduated candle.

It's tope, say manufacturers and buyers as they cite the importance of the winter coat with lumpy tweed or bouclé. Woollen in a rosy red tone is used for a nice coat with widening tuxedo borders of mouta trimmed with soft draping across the shoulders. Big turn-back cuffs of the fur.

MOSQUITO CURSE

The United States normally has 100,000 annual cases of malaria.

After five hats for next season include the perennial calot in velvet or felt with delicate feather trimming or ribbon trimming.

Nothing simpler than dressing up a tailored suit with a lace blouse for dressy wear. Chantilly type lace is used for a nice blouse made with a full, petal-shaped jabot and frills edging the long tight sleeves.

Extremes persist in the black frock. Simple black sheers with pearl button fronts and self ties are wanted as are dressy blacks of crepe with low necks, puff sleeves of lace trims, satin underlays in color for lace inserts and big lace bows.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Figures Will Bring Back Swooning

Have you noticed that World War No. 2 is bringing back the hourglass figure, which Lillian Russell popularized some scores of years ago?

The "female form divine" went into an eclipse after the World War I. Corsets were advertised with "hoptah front," and the straight-line silhouette was the outline for which women cheerfully starved.

It's still novel to see girls with busts; they've been flat-chested so ed. But they are becoming so stylish that they are being bought at the counters for them by many in a hurry to "grow up."

The pendulum has swung full the hour-glass figure bring back swooning? When girls had 20-inch waists, swooning was an everyday—almost an hourly occurrence. And they did not swoon just because a good looking man happened to look at them. It was often as this occurred in fiction and real life).

They swooned because the diaphragm was compressed to the verge of breathlessness. And the end result was that they were at least little upset in the way of a shock—pleasure, surprise, chagrin, alarm—would send the lady swooning whether a likely male was at hand or not.

All the older novelists depict their heroines as in state of swoon most of the time in very nicest heroines.

Swooning went out of fashion in Queen Victoria's mid-reign. That lady was always kinda fat as broad as she was long (she was three feet five in height) but believed in being comfortable, and she let out her many English ladies followed suit. Our women followed England's queen in this form, either C.W.A.C., W.R.E.N.S. or W.A.A.F., being cut on hour-glass lines.

Question: will swooning be any help to that alarming ratio of spinsters which every country endured in global warfare is worrying over? That remains to be seen yet.

What To Do About Bad Neighbors Who Disrupt Peace of Community

"A bad neighbor is worse than the plague", ,here's a grim and terrible realism in this old saying.

There are no words powerful enough to describe the torture that bad neighbors can inflict on those who are chained to them by the inevitable ties of propinquity. When Bad Neighbors move into a community there is general rout. For Bad Neighbors are a law unto themselves . . . everything centers in a self-do's . . . Consideration for Other People may concern other people but not Bad Neighbors. And why in the world is it . . . no one has ever been able to answer this one. . . that they are not disturbed by their barking dogs, by their own yelling and obstreperous children, by their loud playing radios.

Here is a letter that tells a cruel story of the destruction of peace by the brutal thoughtless and selfish neighbors:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A group of my neighbors and I are appealing to you for HELP! Our patience has been so tried and our nerves are so frayed, that we don't mistrust our own judgment. We think there is cry for some impartial sire that we will regret.

We live in a "country development". Everything was ideal until a year and a half ago when the property changed hands and a family of the newcomers who were then allowed the birds to keep all the dogs proven themselves to be most unsatisfactory and selfish neighbors. Since they have come, there has been no peace!

Their barking dogs are the bane of our existence . . . they are a menace by day, "nightmares" all night. In these war-torn days of unbalanced nerves, unbalanced tempers and demanding days, there isn't, I am sure, a more nerve-wracking sound than a barking dog . . . a high-pitched, shrill, nerve-wracking howl.

The women of our group who have lived here for some time do their work very hard all day. . . . some in defence work, some in war service activities, many in not doing these jobs as well as doing their housework and taking care of their children. When night comes we need sleep, but we've had mighty little of that blessed commodity lately. Human endurance can go just so far . . . and we are at our wit's end. Especially some of the group who work at night, or part of the night.

We love animals . . . I have a dog, but he is fed properly and regularly, is never permitted to disturb anyone, and is not allowed to run at night. I see no reason why people can't discipline their dogs, and I am convinced that a great deal of barking is because the dogs are hungry. They root into our garbage cans until often our yards look like "disposal grounds".

And some of the children of these neighbors are as undisciplined as their dogs. They run wild, break across our yards, drawing their express wagons or anything else across our walks and gardens, and show absolutely no regard, let alone respect, for property.

Talk about having Victory Garden! For my own part, I'm not with the prowling dogs and the rampaging children.

Now it seems to me that all these "money's worth" we read in newspapers and listen to over the radio about this and that "contributing to the war effort" are all very well as far as they go. But to many of us there is a slack and terrible realism about the nerve-wracking conditions that do so much to destroy necessarily close proximity to other people, thoughtlessly and selfishly inflict on their neighbors, thus destroying the very peace our neighbors from contributing their best efforts to the war effort.

Mrs. X. E.

My first advice is that you run, not walk! . . . to your telephone or desk and report the barking dogs and their garbarage- activities either to the Police Department or to the city or county Board of Health. If as I can well understand, you and your group want to avoid having your names for fear of the reprisals often conceited by this variety of neighbor, suggest you write a letter to either department explaining the facts, but giving definite facts! You must get some sleep, and this is a matter of health. So for the strong words and the direct efficacy of the "no pregnant".

Since the new management has been deplorably lax in "manager-ing" all these Bad Neighbors, couldn't you war workers get together and form a protective and non-pussy-footing pressure group to relieve nerve-wracking annoyances that are sabotoing your war efforts, destroying your health and Gardens, crushing your health and spirits?

May your letter start a Crusade for Good Neighborliness . . . . . right next door!

What Type of Institution Should Receive Mental Sufferer?

Although many should now be no humiliation about entering a mental hospital for observation and treatment, by the patient or the husband's family, the general public is not yet ready to believe that neither the patient is insane if a hospital, hospital treatment can be of great benefit. There are two types of hospital the patient is admitted and treated before the specified time of incarceration.

Now what type of patient should be placed in a mental hospital? Wouldn't a patient highly confined be better off in the care of his own home? Also, why should a little nervous breakdown involve treatment in a mental hospital? Maturity is violent patient should be placed in a safe ward or room in a mental hospital.

In an article dealing with the matter of the type of patient that should be placed in a mental hospital, Dr. T. Tolonest, Northeastern, Boudoir, Psychiatrist" states that the following types should be admitted to hospital:

1.—Patients with psychoneuroses —thinking they are mentally ill which are not really present —are put in hospital only if their anxiety is acute, their fears have become obsessive, or their fears have led to a suicidal attempt.

2.—Patients with a history of manic, cyclical and depressive attacks, suicidal tendencies, and inadequate for treatment should be placed in the proper superstructure.

3.—Patients with excited states should be admitted early to have the best chance for cure.

4.—Patients with a persistent dream state who think their manner of living is right and that all the rest of the world is wrong. By placing them in hospitals, this patient can be re-educated and become the old self again before he loses all touch with real life or reality.

5.—Mentally patients with delusions, a frequent cause of mental illness, require hospital treatment.

In all the above, consideration early admittance to hospital benefits the patient. Some of the best results in treatment started before the symptoms become so severe that they cannot be removed.

As mentioned before, the sooner the treatment for mental illness is begun, the better are the chances of curing the patient. It will be remembered that this is particularly true of the new shock treatment—insulin, metrazol, and electric. The earlier the treatment is begun, the more effective is this form of treatment

High Blood Pressure a Result of Unbalanced Diet

Doctors are giving more and more attention to the influence of nutrition because we are constantly finding that faulty nutrition is responsible for many disorders. Hith blood pressure is now believed to some extent to be caused, in part at least, by unbalanced diet. There seems to be a growing list of evidence that the kidneys have something to do with the high blood pressure of high blood pressure. It has been shown that when the blood supply to the kidneys is reduced by narrowing of the arteries which carry blood to the kidneys, high blood pressure develops. It is thought that when the blood supply to the kidneys is cut down, not enough oxygen is brought to the kidney tissues, and this results in the formation of what is known as a pressure substance which acts to increase the blood pressure. Moreover, cutting down the blood supply to the kidney will also reduce the supply of a number of substances needed for normal nutrition of the kidney tissues, and it is, perhaps, the lessening of these substances which causes the high blood pressure, rather than the deficiency of oxygen. Blood type and diet plenty of oxygen, but not enough of the various glandular secretions, minerals, and vitamins required for normal activity of the body cells.

It is on the basis of this idea that Doctor Nathan S. Davis III of Chicago believes that improved nutrition may have something to do with the occurrence of high blood pressure. Infections, digestive disturbances and the failure to eat enough of the necessary food parts all may lead to a deficiency of vitamins, minerals, and other essential substances in the blood that is brought to the kidney.

Failure to have a proper diet is all too common. It may occur because of dietary habits, fads and fashions in selecting foods. During these days of rationing it is important to pay special attention to balancing the diet to make sure that all of the vitamins and minerals in enough potenia from such foods as meat, milk, eggs and whole grains are supplied.

The modern processing of food, according to Doctor Davis, makes it difficult to get "enough of all the necessary food parts without having took much of starches, fats, and sugars and too many calories. Of course, an excess of food intake throws a greater burden on the body tissues, and this, too, may play a part in raising the blood pressure.

Civilized people have high blood pressure much more often than do the primitive races who live on foods that have not been kept in storage or preserved in one way or another. It has been noted that when these primitive people began to eat the same type of diet as we do they became subject to high blood pressure. This fact does not prove that dietary mistakes are the cause of high blood pressure but it does throw some evidence to the belief. It is possible that the giving of proper food in the diet may reduce the amount of high blood pressure and should help relieve the condition when it is just starting or, perhaps, lessen the severity of the symptoms.

Lady Luck Was Kind to Oakes But She Made Him Pay Dearly

The death in Nassau of Sir Harry Oakes and the arrest of his son-in-law, Alfred de Marigny, on a charge of murder have been in the headlines for more than a week. It is a big story. But behind it is another big story: the life of Harry Oakes. This is it.

By SIGRID ARNE

New York, (AP) — Lady Luck seems nothing more than a poet's whimsy until men like Sir Harry Oakes come along.

Then she becomes real, a vixen with supernatural powers, who occasionally takes a hand in men's lives, seemingly just to amuse herself. She does it only for Sir Harry Oakes, and his ilk, and there aren't many like that.

She and Sir Harry were a fabulous cat and mouse. He wandered around the world with her pennies, etcetera.

He had snared rabbits just to eat. He had lost his last $30, just when a fortune lay in his grasp. And then he found the $30 again.

Lady Luck finally tired of tantalizing him like three open fortunes. He became one of the world's richest men. He had luxurious tastes, and all it took to satisfy them. His reported fortune was around $200,000,000.

He had lived since 1935 in Nassau, in a palace surrounded by palace grounds. He still had a boy's zest for a world, a sailor's salty love of life.

But he was found dead July 7. His bed was partially burned. He'd been beaten badly on the head. Age of 66.

Lady Luck had cut him off at the age of 66.

Sir Harry seems to have taken a simple formula from the start: He would find gold and until he found it.

He came from a remarkably conservative background for such a pirate's dream. He was a Bangorville Maine, boy, graduated from Bangor High College, in 1896. He stayed safely home for two years more. Then he joined the Klondike rush.

From 1898 to 1912 he chased his chimera of gold through the wilderneses of half the world.

In Alaska his Lady Luck pulled a cruel trick on him. He and his Swedish partner found a good streak of gold. They rounded up twenty miners to get it out. But the streak turned out to be only a pocket, that held about $6,000 in gold dust—just enough to pay off the crew. They came out of the wilderness on river rafts—the crew rich, and Oakes and the Swede broke.

That was a story he loved to tell on himself later, with Canadian chuckles. He was a medium sized man, but with a big head, generous features, live brown eyes, and a shock of pepper-and-salt hair. He seemed big. He talked big, but he also lived big.

So he left Alaska. There was news of gold in the Philippines. He followed. And on to Australia and New Zealand. Back to Alaska, down to Cripple Creek, into Death Valley. Always chasing gold.

Flax Farmer

Just once he seems to have stopped his hunt for a while. He became a flax farmer in New Zealand, and sold his crop for $30,000. That would have been enough to tie down another man. But not Oakes.

He was 37, still hunting, when he arrived in Swastika, Ont., in June, 1911.

There's a Lady Luck story about that. It may or may not be true. It says that Oakes was going through, but he was thrown off the train for lack of fare. It says further that he met a Chinese who convinced him there was gold in the area.

That certainly must have been the place where Lady Luck took a hand and decided to reward her faithful Oakes. By January, 1912, he had begun to stake his claims, on a gold mine that became the second largest in the world. Others had prospected there. Sir Harry found the gold.

But even then Lady Luck couldn't quite let him have it on a platter. He started to walk to the recording office. He had exactly $33 in the world. It wasn't quite enough for the recording fee, but he started the trek. He had gone almost the whole way when he discovered he had lost the money.

He must have been in agony. But he retraced his steps, kicking tall grass, poking through brush. He found the wallet, and rushed back to town to record his claims.

The news of his strike spread like wildfire. But Oakes had served his apprenticeship in the gold fields. He knew better than to sell out for an easy wad. He took out gold from a proved claim and poured the proceeds into further development.

Now Executive.

By 1932 his fortunes had turned him into an executive. His rawhide boots, lumberjack shirts were a thing of the past. And he'd remembered a beautiful Australian girl, Eunice McIntyre. They were married and Oakes looked around for a home.

He was a home in keeping with his life, a palace which cost $300,000, in Niagara Falls, Ont., with a magnificent view of the American restless Horseshoe falls.

But he couldn't settle his restlessness. He rambled about the world. He built a home at Palm Beach. He obtained another in the old home town, Gaberville.

The couple had five children. Three died of two girls.

Oakes spent huge sums on gifts to Niagara Falls, Parks, recreation ground skiing field and a skating rink; and assistance on a reforestation project.

He gave money to build bridges to relieve unemployment. He contributed to hospitals. He gave an athletic field to the city.

Then he left Canada.

Taxes had been growing steeper and steeper. He reputed income was around $2,000,000 a year. He got a chunk right into taxes.

He once told a Toronto Star reporter about it. He was extremely ill with bronchitis. It had driven him out of Canada many winters. He lay in his Niagara Falls home and thought of what might happen to his family if he died suddenly. He saw them getting very little cash.

But as he was, he got on a train for Florida.

Choked in Palm Beach.

He said he "choked around Palm Beach for a few days". Then a friend lawyer told him of the low taxes in Nassau. He went over. In the Spring of 1935 he moved in with his stock and barrel, family and furniture.

It was still the restless builder. He bought 5,000 acres, built a magnificent home. He brought lions from Britain and the natives, who had waited 300 years, rode. He became a member of the Bahamas legislature.

Still he couldn't settle down. He took summer trips to Britain and bought a town house and a country place. He donated nearly $500,000 to St. Georges Hospital, London, and the King made him a baronet in 1939.

He was a stunning figure riding around his Nassau plantation.

He dressed the part of the patrician. He'd step out in gleaming white whip cord trousers, white silk shirt, a dashing white sombrero, and would be proudly proclaimed came from the best shop in Piccadilly.

The day he died he'd planned such a tour. It may be, if he hadn't had such a consuming enthusiasm for his land, he might be alive today. He had planned to make an air trip to the United States. But a chance to show his place came up. He put off the trip. He was found dead.

A few days later the police arrested his son-in-law, Alfred De Marigny, who denied the charge of murder, but was held for arraignment.

It was summer and the family were scattered on vacations. None of them was there when, somehow, his bed started to burn, and he was beaten. Lady Luck probably had tired of her game.

Norwegian Shipping Losses Are Reported To Be Declining

(From News of Norway)

In London last week Norwegian Minister of Shipping Arne Sunde disclosed that the Norwegian merchant fleet had lost 4,000,000 tons gross during the month of June. This is the first time since the outbreak of the war that Norwegian ships have come through an entire month without loss. Up to June the Norwegian merchant marine's "best month" had been last April during which losses sustained were less than in any month since the invasion of Norway in April, 1940. On August 22, 1941, Mr. Sunde announced that no Norwegian ships had been lost so far that month—"a way suffered by far her biggest losses both in ships and men during the early months of 1942. The situation is now considerably better. But this record will not stand—the last twelve months losses have been less than those sustained during the first month period from January to July 1942. The losses for the first six months of this year were considerably less than one-third of last year's losses.

During the first World War, Norway lost 49 per cent of her merchant marine and about 2,000 sailors. During the present war Norwegian losses have also been heavy, but considering the greater size of the fleet and the fact that Norway is at this time actively at war with the Axis Powers, the losses are proportionately less than in 1914-1918. Up to now about 2,600 Norwegian seamen have given their lives in the war.

Ship losses have been estimated at about 40 per cent of the Norwegian merchant fleet at the beginning of the war was the fourth largest in the world, being surpassed only by those of Great Britain, the United States and Japan. Some observers contend that the Norwegian fleet is now the largest of the fleet and the fact that Norway is at this time actively at war with the Axis Powers, the losses are proportionately less than in 1914-1918. Up to now about 2,600 Norwegian seamen have given their lives in the war.

Up to now about 2,600 Norwegian seamen have given their lives in the war.

Norwegian ships were comparatively far more frequent in 1917 than in 1942.

When the present war broke out Norwegian shipowners had over 1,000 ships installing 303,000 tons under construction in Swedish shipyards. These contracts were taken over by the Norwegian Government, and the Norwegian Shipping and Trade Mission, an official agency of the government now charged with administration of the merchant fleet, has taken over inspection of the new ships and is paying for them in regular instalments.

Norway, in common with other Allies, has been permitted to participate in Great Britain's new ship building program. To date she has taken over three motor tankers, three steam tankers, five motor cargo vessels, and one steam cargo vessel—a total of 137,000 tons. In addition, Norway has obtained from British six former American steamships totaling 61,000 tons. Also the United States Norway has up to now taken over the Dutch ships and is now sailing under the Norwegian flag.

Mr. Sunde declared that collaboration with the Allies in regard to shipping has been excellent. "Here in London", he said, "we have formed a joint Allied Merchant Shipping Committee, and a corresponding committee has now been established in Washington. It has representatives from Norway, the United States and Great Britain."

In commenting on the "turning point" in the Battle of the Atlantic, Mr. Sunde said this was due to the factors contributing towards the smashing of the German U-boats. "We are the new corvettes which have proved highly effective in the long fight he added, the corvettes of the Royal Norwegian Navy have played an important part.

Jottings From War Notebook

(By ROSS MUNRO)

Canadian Press War Correspondent with the Canadians in Sicily, (Delayed) (CP Cable) — Jottings from a war correspondent's notebook:

War has taken one group of Canadians from the Arctic wastes of Spitsbergen to the scorching heat of Sicily. During this time Sir Bernard Montgomery's inspection of the Canadian forward area here . . . met a group of men of the Royal Canadian Engineers whom I knew in Britain more than a year ago, the summer of 1941.

They included Sgts. Alex Kerr, Owen Sound, Ont.; Joe Kennedy, holder of the D.C.M., and the Croix de Guerre, Toronto; and Sappers Gerald McGarry, Toronto; Bill Dickinson, Kingston, Ont.; Bert Gray, Victoria, and J. R. Whelan and Ernie Beard both of Ottawa.

Laugn of the day: Rear headquarters moved into a farm and took over a hovel as a house. A man, his wife, three children, a donkey, a dog, a cat and some guinea pigs were all living together in this squalor. Then along came the Canadians noticed on the wall was a photograph of the man and his wife, taken at Queen and Yonge streets in downtown Toronto.

After the Canadians had taken one of the hamlets for their initial landings on Sicily July 10, two flags were flying from the mayor's office, the navy and The Netherlands' flag. The Dutch skipper of the boat gave the flag of his country to a naval officer asking him to plant it on land. And this request was duly carried out.

The Italians held a few Canadians prisoners for a short time and one I met at Modica was Pte. Jack Werner of Oaklyn, Sask.

Rough and Ready Bouts Seen, 'Toar' Morgan Beats Dunlop For Third Time, Hectic Show

Everything Goes Including Referee, Who is Main Target of Attack From All Sides

MONAHAN LOSES

When Promoter Frank Tunney advertised last night's wrestling card at the Hume Arena as "rough-house night", he must have been clairvoyant, because that's exactly as things occurred from the top to the bottom and back again. Then to make the evening all the more pleasing the favorites won and upwards of 2,000 frenzied fans weeded their various ways from the local place de sport and thought little of the ensuing rain on the outside.

It was a real old-fashioned slapbang, knock 'em down and drag 'em out affair that terminated with Wilbur "Toar" Morgan, the Tennessee fighting Marine, triumphing over the villainous Al Dunlop for the third time in as many starts. However, the main scrap wasn't all cessided as Dunlop got in his share of gymnastics attacks on both Morgan and Referee Bert Maxwell before the climax with Maxwell punching Dunlop out of the ring in retaliation for an attack and then Morgan finished the job by smacking and we do mean smacking Dunlop to a fare-thee-well and finally the Toronto villain was counted out while still prostrate and unable to rise on the floor of the Arena after each had won a previous fall, fcreing the fight to a 2rd decision, that Morgan won handily.

Dunlop Aggressor

Early in the scrap Dunlop hit Morgan with everything but the kitchen sink and at times looked as if he must have thought "Pugnacious Al" must have thought "Pugnacious Al" must have brought that kitchen utensil now in play. Two or three times during the rough-house last night Morgan appeared to be in agony, but the contestual grunting was always over, with Dunlop occasionally pleading for mercy when "Toar" retaliated in kind. Dunlop picked the first fall but only after Referee Maxwell was in trouble more than the contestants. Dunlop kicked the Referee Marine in bodily and crashed him against the ring posts on two or three occasions to soften him up and make him an easy victim for the boys when it happened.

Before Referee Maxwell could cease the ring in the second round the boys were at it hammer and tongs slugging matters out before Referee could get matters completely under control. Dunlop started matters when he tore off a piece of Maxwell's shirt. Maxwell then started the ball rolling with a single punch that sent Dunlop sprawling and followed with a single to send two runs scampering across the platter. Dunlop's next move stands at two games to one in favor of the Referee-baiting Dunlop when he tried to sling the kids in their neat game. Juniors were not eligible for the ring but to stay in the running.

Villainous Al" fell backwards to the mat Morgan hurled the ropes and hopped aboard the prostrate body for a fall and by now the fans were in a frenzy as "Toar" evened matters.

Referee Helps Out

Came the final round by which time Dunlop felt he had to beat both Maxwell and Morgan, so he went into the ring in just that manner to attack both simultaneously and once came within an ace of doing so. Only a quick right to the jaw, Maxwell retaliated by knocking Dunlop through the ringside circle and that was Morgan's tip. The gangling Marine heroically kept away from Dunlop in the pass each and every time he tried to return to the squared circle with the result that Dunlop finally decided discretion was the better part of valor and took the fatal toll of ten and bundreds of fans swarmed the ring complete to see the villain thwarted and the hero a winner, which is the way all melodrama should end. So folks next week Referee Tunney will try a new angle to please the patrons, when Billie Watson is pitted against Numa's hand in token of victory while Floyd Caswell screamed and howled "I was robbed". The fans were so excited and that was that. In the opening bout George Tofalis of Greece and Texas' Dick Bishop wrestled 30 minutes to a draw, which was quite alright, except with the whole colony, who maybe had reasons to suggest "We was robbed."

CLEVELAND FIGHTS

JUNIORS BEAT RELIANCE 3-2 IN PLAY-OFF

Grant Wright Limits the Reliance to Six Hits as Kids Extend Series

RALLY STRONG

Army and Navy Veterans' Juniors prolonged the city softball semi-finals series with the Reliance nine at the exhibition park last evening when the two clubs battled games seen this season the kids played superb ball before the six-hit hurling of Grant Wright to keep the pacemakers by a close 3-2 count.

At that the kids spotted their opposition a one run lead in the second inning and then,saw the balance go two up in the fourth. In the fifth however when Luffman went in the mound to relieve Reardon who started the game for the losers, they got a single counted back and won the game in the 8th as three hits and a fielder's choice was the winning runs chased across the platter.

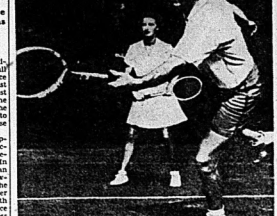
Wright is'scattering the Reliance six hits pitched one of the best games of his short career. His splendid support on the part of his teammates worked to the opposition for seven of the nine innings played. The Reliance nine was walked only one while Bawden was nicked for two singles and a double after five to be chalked for the loss after entering the game enjoying a two-run lead.

The Scoring

Juniors got their first run without a semblance of a hit when Mooney Green got aboard on the right fielder's error and worked his way around on successive passes to cross the plate in the fourth. Morrey turned the trick when he counted on Green's hit to get aboard to score on an infield out. Jim Bartlett was Reliance's batter better to get more than one hit, but Wright and Mooney Green and Luffman conged the others.

Juniors came to the rescue with in the fourth following three singles by Wright and Bawden and Luffman to score on a fielder's choice by the Incorporated Canadian Radio Association pitcher to the Agriculture Department's Livestock Records in Ottawa and one of the hockey Club in New York. How the average outsider can get to know the Reliance contrives to make the drawings uniform is one of nature's mysteries.

Frank Soike believes there is a middle ground, namely, a thoroughbred breeder in his own right, lays Ottawa may eventually be accepted as clearing house for all registrations. Fred Kiers, Ayr, Ont., can reportedly, tell you the New York organization would be agreeable.



"It may not come until after the war," said Soike. "It would mean more work for Ottawa and they're shorthanded now. But I think it's coming."

Toronto, July 22 (CP)—Advancement of the Canadian Open golf championship, awkward foal into a sizable, striking animal capable of winning a $50,000 handicap and fleckive offers in the inevitable careers lies. Let remember those double - headers? is no easier than stuck-in-the-mud. Add to a limit field of makers. One of the lesser hazards is registration. Every thoroughbred must be registered by Oct. 31 of the year of hoping before competing in a recognized track. Each owner of a thoroughbred submits three names showing the foal's name—one to the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association prior to the Agriculture Department's Livestock Records in Ottawa and one to the Jockey Club in New York. How the average outsider can get to know the Reliance contrives to make the drawings uniform is one of nature's mysteries.

PIRATES GAIN ON DODGERS BEATING PHILS

Pittsburgh Hottest Team in National League, Browns Blank Yankees 1 to 0.

CARDS WIN TWO

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The housecleaning of the Brooklyn Dodgers may have made them as neat as a pin, but not nearly as sharp.

Even before their rebellion they had practically no chance of capturing the National League pennant from St. Louis Cardinals, but now they look likely to have trouble finishing second or third.

Their immediate danger looms from Pittsburgh Pirates, who are the hottest thing in the senior circuit and have won six of their last 7 game. Yesterday the Buccaneers battered the faltering Phillies 10-2 with Bob Klinger pitching five-hit ball. This shared their distance behind the Dodgers to a mere three games.

The Dodgers divided a doubleheader with Cincinnati and were hardly impressive. They were smothered 11-1 in the opener as Elmer Riddle amassed his 12th victory and then trimmed to a 2-0 decision in the nightcap with the help of fielding lapses by the Reds.

Last Scheduled.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, lengthened their margin on top of the Dodgers to 4 1-2 games by sweeping a double bill from New York Giants 3-1 and 14-6. The Redbirds were held to three hits in the opener, but made all of them count for runs. In the second game the champions banged 18 safe blows and salted the game away with nine runs in the fifth.

In the other National League game Hiroo Bilberto, the Puerto Rican righthander, bagged his 11th triumph as Chicago Cubs beat Boston Braves 6-1.

St. Louis Browns gained a 1-0 verdict over New York Yankees in the 10th inning when Vernon Stephens opened with a single and scored on a wild throw.

Letty Al Smith pitched and batted Cleveland Indians to a 7-0 shutout over Philadelphia Athletics, allowing only two hits and getting a triple, double and single himself.

Chicago and Boston divided a doubleheader as Hughbell Mahlo got the first for the Red Sox 3-2 and Oreal Grove posted the Chicago White Sox' 8-6 triumph in the nightcap.

A three-run rally in the ninth climaxed by George Case's single in the third and winning runs brought Washington a 8-5 edge over Detroit in a night game.

The Commons was told that, compared with Wast End London restaurants, miners' canteens receive 2d. more per meal, 40 per cent more sugar and 26 per cent more fish.

AT THE McCARTHY

Having two men on her hands invites unusual adventures and plenty of trouble for heroine Anna Lee, who becomes involved with Brian Donlevy and Dennis O'Keefe, in the startling, suspense-filled melodrama, Arnold Pressburger's "Hangmen Also Die," which opens today at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

Catering to the perennial "rich uncle" (Charles Coburn) is one of the high spots in Warner Bros.' current Capitol Theatre picture, "George Washington Slept Here." The caterers are played by Jack Benny and Ann Sheridan, the added attraction bit "Prairie Gunsmoke" stars Wild Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter.

AT THE BELLE

Robert Donat who charmed you as "Mr. Chips" will thrill you in the role of "The Young Mr. Pitt," exciting romantic story of the man who smashed the armed tyranny of another generation. Lovely Phyllis Calvert is the romantic interest in the story, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Breakfast Time Game Is Won By Bears 7-4

Newark's experiment of playing a morning game in the International League apparently was a success yesterday. In any event the Newark management announced before the game was over that another 9:30 a.m. tilt will be played next Wednesday against Buffalo.

The game attracted 910 customers who watched the Bears beat Jersey City, 7-4, behind the eight hit pitching of Frank Hiller, former Lafayette College star. It was Hiller's seventh victory against four defeats.

Bill Trotter came up with a one-hit pitching masterpiece to lead Rochester to a 1-0 shutout over Buffalo in the only other league game scheduled. Trotter retired 16 men in a row before Jake Turchin got on in the sixth through an error.

The only run came in the first inning on Al Schoendienst's single and Gerry Burmeister's triple.

AT THE BELLE

"YOUNG MR. PITT"

In his first role since his unforgettable "Mr. Chips," Robert Donat is delighting Belle Theatre audiences with his forthright portrayal of "The Young Mr. Pitt," whose stirring deeds in times much like our own spurred men to a world-changing victory.

The happy combination of Donat's return to the screen and the picturization of the fighting Mr. Pitt's timely life story proved to be film fare of an altogether magnificent order. If the celebrated star charmed you as "Mr. Chips" he will thrill you as the Boy Prime Minister who put romance on the side to help whip the dictators of his day.

Portion artist that he is, Donat makes of Pitt the Younger's loves and struggles a thing of absorbing drama and breathless romance. The film is notable, too, for the superb performances of Robert Morley, Phyllis Calvert and John Mills. Morley appears as Pitt's political foe, comedy Miss Calvert in Pitt's one great love, and Mills his dread-fast friend.

Carol Reed (Night Train') Reed directed the film with characteristic skill, while Sidney Gilliat and Frank Launder adroitly contrived to translate Pitt's exciting life into an equally absorbing screen play. The film, a 20th Century-Fox release, is "EXCITING, PLEASE, MURDER" EXCITING.

A gripping, exciting mystery tale, "Quiet, Please, Murder" is the perfect companion feature. Set in the contrasting quiet of a public library, it is heightened by its touches of slight into a professional criminal's motives.

Swiftly - paced "Quiet, Please, Murder", tale of a brilliant but utterly unscrupulous man and his selfish, coldly beautiful partner, George Sanders and Gail Patrick excel in the top featured roles.

A newcomer, handsome young Richard Denning, appears as Mc-Byrne, a tough detective sub-tracted by his attraction for Gail.

Smartly written and ably directed by John Larkin, "Quiet, Please, Murder", is compact and adult, an absorbing film, taut with excitement.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hangmen Also Die"

Fresh from the front page headlines, Arnold Pressburger and Fritz Lang have snatched one of the most dramatic episodes of the war and made an exciting, inspired film, brimful with daring action and colorful romance. "Hangmen Also Die," which opened yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre by United Artists release. Co-starring Brian Donlevy, Anna Lee and Walter Brennan, this fast-moving melodrama is packed with adventures and thrills so breath-taking that "Hangmen Also Die" is to be ranked with the outstanding dramatic films of the year.

It is a drama of love, passion and courage of the Czech people in the terror-ridden days of Heydrich, the hangman, Nazi protector in Czecho-Slovakia. More specifically, it is the story of a man and a woman who, along with other patriotic members of the Czech underground, undertake a relentless fight against the Nazi regime. A powerful blow against Nazism is struck when Heydrich is murdered by Brian Donlevy, a prominent surgeon, also a daring member of the underground. Seeking refuge in the house of Anna Lee, who had helped him a short while before, Donlevy so involves Anna that she and Donlevy are forced to stage one of the tensest scenes ever seen on the screen to disprove the Gestapo's suspicion that Donlevy is the man they're hunting for. In fact, their remaining moves to so convincing that Anna's fiance, Dennis O'Keefe, believes it's the real thing. How Donlevy finally manages to escape the Gestapo and how the romantic entanglements of lovely Anna Lee work out provide a stunning climax to this super melodrama.

The leading characters, those of Dr. Svoboda and Masch Novotny, are brilliantly portrayed by Brian Donlevy and Anna Lee. Walter Brennan as Professor Hurasch, hands in a notable performance and Dennis O'Keefe makes an admirable Jan. A fine supporting cast includes Alexander Granach, Gene Lockhart, Margaret Wycherly, Billy Roy, Tonio Selwart, Jonathan Hale, Lionel Stander, Arnold Pressburger and Fritz Land have given Hangmen Also Die a noteworthy production. Also directed by Mr. Lang, the man who is the master's touch. "Hangmen Also Die" emerges as a sensational hit.

LESSON NO. 136

BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

What is a kibitzer and how did the name originate? Writers do not agree on its beginning. They hint at odd rumors. They suggest vague theories. They agree on nothing.

Some say it is the name of a chattering bird. Others claim it is a foreign word for nagging woman. Still others think it refers to an annoying fellow.

That ain't the way I heard it, Johnny. The way I heard it for the first time was while I was watching a pinochle game in the back room of a Bronx cigar store. That was at the turn of the century.

A number of onlookers were noisily heckling the players. Every time a player made a wrong bid or lead or play, some spectator would make some derisive remark.

The proprietor poked his head through the doorway and yelled: "Say, I wish you would not kibitize so much the pennokleers." What he meant, of course, was criticize.

The gallery picked up the word on the spot and started calling each other kibitizers. But they soon shortened it to kibitzers. And it seemed to me a new word was born at that moment.

Thus, a kibitzer started to mean a bored spectator who gave unsolicited advice. Or one who heaped abusive criticism upon the players.

While originated in seriousness, the word has been kept alive in the popular spirit. In time it became a dignified word to designate any onlooker at any game, even though he did not abuse the privilege.

Many persons have been pronouncing the word with the accent on the "kib," incorrectly, that is incorrect. The accent should be on the "kib," like the "grit" in grits.

Let's kibitz this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A 8 6 2
♥K 9 5
♦8 5 4
♣A Q 5
NORTH
♠J 9
♥A Q 3
♦K 6 5 2
♣K 10 9 7

South starts with an opening bid of one no-trump. Such an opening shows at least five no-trump tricks. North responds at once with a bid of three no-trump.

Each ace or king or queen is known as a high card. Each high card is counted as one no-trump trick. It takes nine no-trump tricks to make a game of three no-trumps.

North has four no-trump tricks. With the five promised by south, he can see enough tricks for a game in no-trump.

As easy as falling off a log.

CHAPTER 16

Clare was away for a week and little missed on the island where slowly but surely new notes of soberness and responsibility were injecting themselves between pleasures and sports. The excitement of Clare's return had palled as a thrill that is short-lived. Perhaps in normal times, Meegan thought, when people do not think of friends and brothers and sons in the service and the headlines reveal nothing more or less than a murder or robbery, the excitement of Clare's return would have been sustained throughout the summer. But perhaps Clare herself was a little out of fashion these days when few could afford to live on a grand scale and entertain lavishly. Clare had come back to find herself out of tune with her old friends. The islanders were more shaken by Hitler's assault upon Russia than by Clare's mysterious departure. It was somehow, in spite of everything, a little sad that a woman still so young and beautiful and rich had lived after her heyday to see war and machines supplant her. In the club house Meegan heard the ladies around the bridge tables talking about the Red Cross and letters from their boys. After a hard game of tennis Adele always spent of grilling Jon in a defence plant. The caddies and waiters were having to put on uniform, causing the service, always scrupulous, to be noticeably poor. It was not the summer Meegan had foreseen.

Indeed she had not foreseen Tony's taking a strange girl named Erica Lester to the club to dance. For Erica had seen him not once but several times the week that Clare was away. They had stopped at the cove where she and Adele were playing and after the game Adele had asked "Who are you? I've never seen you around here before!" Her bluntness was a thing that Erica understood and liked. Toby had laughed and Erica had smiled with new warmth.

Looking at them Meegan had wondered. Toby had never liked a girl of Erica's sort before. She was too ingenu, too sensitive to offense, too quiet about her thoughts. Clare was just that. Clare would come back. Clare always came back. But that she would never again come back! But if she did not then, she, Meegan, would never know the simple, innocent, exquisite pleasure of seeing Payne again. Better so, she thought.

That same afternoon when Meegan had taken the children home and gone down to the beach to swim she found Tony and Erica grilling hamburgers over one of the several grills on the beach. Adele had come over to join them and they had eaten hamburgers and made jokes and laughed. Erica's sullen face softened and she was already looking at Toby. It was like "old times" Meegan thought. They were all having fun and laughing. They were laughing because Clare was away. When she came back as she always came back, they would laugh no more and Erica would look sullen again and Adele would sever again. Later Adele said, "She's a cute kid and crazy about Toby. But she's not only pie I've seen him with in ages who didn't look as if she spent her evenings undressing."

The same week Toby had done an astonishing thing: he took Erica to his home to have tea with his mother. Meegan had been at the beach with the children and when she came home, her mother said, "Toby brought a girl to tea today. I do wish you and Toby would tell me about the new people on the island. I really should call on them. The girl Toby brought today was, well, a bit different but very sweet. She looked foreign. But I am glad, dear, that you reminded me to polish the tea service."

Meegan could not remember the last time Toby had brought a girl to meet his mother. Visualizing the visit she could see her mother poised and pretty and looking as she had been born to look, with Toby ensnared at it all and Erica afraid that she would make a mistake. But even if Erica had committed a trifling social error, Elinor McLean would not have been aware of it. She was too certain that the people who came in her house were incapable of social error. And on that Saturday evening Toby had taken Erica to the club to dance.

One Sunday afternoon Meegan was lying across her bed reading when she heard a car approach and stop. Getting up, she went to the window and saw Clare walking toward the house. Clare had come back. Of course. Clare always came back when the fear of her and the strange force of her were beginning to lessen. Why did her heart beat so? Because when she saw Clare so many things rushed to her, not the least of them the fact that she was Payne's wife and because when she was with Payne she felt that she lived safely and to be awakened her. She could see Erica's face light again and Adele's face pinched, as if hate were a bond that disfigured her. She could hear no more of Toby's gay laughter and Clare, wearing a lemon colored dress, was walking toward the house.

In the downstairs hall Clare called, "Hello! Is anyone home?"

"Yes, I am," Meegan said. She was wearing her pink sharkskin playsuit and she made hastily thrust her bare feet into the straw sandals. And she was trembling. Why? Why was she trembling?

"I'll come up," Clare said. "It's been years since I've been here but it's just the same, exactly the same."

Meegan met her in the hall. Clare came up the steps trembling, her black hair like an arrogant, shining wing. There was such a glow to her that the house with the faded wall paper looked shabby in comparison. She looked as freshed as one does when one has slept long and well in a cool place.

"Come in my room, Clare," Meegan said.

She led the way and Clare followed her, selecting the only comfortable chair in the room, throwing across the feet again and closed the book she was reading.

"I wondered what had happened to you, Clare."

"I had to go out-of-town for a few days to a wedding. It was a beautiful wedding with one flaw that turned out to be funny. The organist was given the wrong cue and when he played the wedding march, the bride's mother, very fat and jolly, marched down the aisle. I've been meaning to come up to see your mother. How is she?"

"Mother? Oh, she's fine. She's just the same, too."

"Where is Toby?" Clare asked brightly, too brightly.

"I don't know. He didn't say where he was going when he left." Clare had come to see Toby. "You have come back to stay for the summer, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes, for the summer. Perhaps for the duration. That is, I suppose we'll take an apartment in Baltimore for the winter and Payne will give up his small place in Washington and commute daily."

Meegan said, "The war is unsettling so many people. At the beginning of the summer we seemed to felt it here. It sort of creeps in and takes charge of you."

Clare sat still as a statue. It bore me. Everywhere now the country was disturbed. Buy this and that, the billboards scream, because it will give you more energy for your work. Put on a uniform and go out and get yourself killed. And the people are getting poorer and poorer. It's very dull."

"It's duller for those who are getting poorer."

Clare stirred restlessly in the chair and looked out the window. She fingered her silver cigarette case and car keys and the pearl buttons on her dress. It was obvious to Meegan that she did not wish to pursue the subject of the changes that national defence and Hitler had wrought in her country. Yet other thoughts, other subjects for conversation were stopped at the mind-filling beauty of Clare and the curious restlessness of her. She moved about at Clare's touch, Meegan knew and she found it difficult not to look directly at her. There was something in the planes of the bright and shining Clare comparable to the mesmerism one feels when looking into the eyes of a cat.

Finally she said, "I'm reading Martin Dias." Have you read it?"

Clare looked at her with annoyance. "I never read anything which makes me a completely uninformed person." Her voice deepened when she asked sharply, "Meegan,—what are you doing for yourself?"

Meegan looked up with a start. Clare said, "Why didn't you let me know you were in such distress and embarrassment? I could have helped you. You could have come ashore."

"I have my mother."

Clare's voice wanted to marry your mother?"

"Mother hasn't thought of marrying anyone."

Clare's face softened a little. "You see, you aren't doing anything for yourself. I don't want to offend you. But it seems to me that you are being wasted, you and Toby, so unnecessarily."

"Toby is going into a defence plant in the fall."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma cooked the dinner today on account of being Nora's Tuesday out and pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I was looking at the comic page, and pop said, I wonder what those distressing sounds can be? Can they be your poor mother cleaning up the dishes all by herself while we 2 lazy, healthy males are sprawling at our ease after gobbling up her delicious dinner? he said.

Well G, pop, she didn't ask us to help her, I said, and pop said, Gosh slackers wait to be asked to do their bit tords the common welfare. The only manly way is to march shoulder to shoulder into the kitchen and volunteer our services. Of course your mother may insist in her sweet womanly way that she can get along very well by herself, but that don't phase us like men just a tame instead of lolling here like lizards, he said.

Jimminy pop, she's libel to tell us we'll only be in her way, I said, and pop said, There's still a good deal best to be a help rather than a hindrance, in matters of duty duty should be only one guiding rule, and that is to follow the dictates of your consistence, he said.

Well pop then ma looked in the living room saying, Well I must say you 2 big husking things might at least ask me if I'd like for help! and pop said, That's precisely the right thing we were just discussing doing, and I said, Sure, ma, only we didn't know how you'd take it.

I'd take it with amused surprise mingled with unaffected pleasure for land sakes, ma said, and pop said, Then help Silver, here we come.

Within a end, both putting on aprons and having fun for talking colored, talk and pretending we were slaves and ma was Simon Legree bossing us with a whip.

Frankly, you can enjoy anything if you really try.

If Necessary Should Increase Power of All Stations to Limit of Agreement

CBC CONTROL

Ottawa, July 22 — (CP) The House of Commons radio committee, in a report tabled today in the Commons, recommended that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation should safeguard channels allotted to Canada under the Havana Agreement. It suggested, if necessary, increasing the power of all Canadian stations to the limit of the agreement.

The committee recalled that last year recommendation was made for increased power for the corporation's stations to take advantage of rights under the Havana Agreement. This year evidence had been given that "there is apparently no danger of losing the full use of channels allotted to Canada.

"We believe that the corporation should safeguard these channels and, if necessary, consider increasing the power of all stations to the limit of the agreement," the report said.

Private Stations

In recommending fair exercise of the powers of discretion by the CBC, the committee said it had "no doubt" that the regulations respecting control of private stations would be administered in that spirit.

News Broadcasts First

The committee said that it also had heard placed news broadcasts first in importance among CBC programs.

"The financial arrangements whereby the whole of the Canadian Press and the British United Press are placed at the disposal of the corporation are satisfactory.

"While anything of a scandalous nature should be avoided in news broadcasting we do believe that news broadcasts and commentaries could be made more full and informative. Particularly it should be brought to the listening public the great part that Canadian forces and the Canadian people in general are playing in the war.

"Let us always be conscious of our national identity."

B.N.A. Amendment Allows Postponement Of Redistribution

London, July 22 — (CP Cable)— The British House of Commons today passed through all stages the bill to amend the British North America Act so as to permit postponement until after the end of the distribution of Canada's House of Commons seats.

The bill came to Commons from the House of Lords and now goes to the King for the formal Royal assent.

Shortly afterwards it was announced that the bill had been given Royal assent.

It passed Commons after Mr. P. Ross Tufton had the Lord Chief Sovereign power in one of the Dominions had to bring this matter before the House in London was an anomaly which he hoped would be removed at the earliest opportunity.

Completion of Commons action in one day carried out Foreign Secretary Eden's expressed wish yesterday. Mr. Eden then said that the Dominion Governments concerned in the matter as urgent and for that reason he hoped it could be disposed of in one sitting.

R.A.F. Continues Sweeps in Burma

New Delhi, July 22. —(CP)— Meeting practically no opposition, R.A.F. bombers continued their sweeping attacks on enemy rail and troop positions in Burma yesterday, destroying locomotives, trucks, water tanks and supply sampans, a British communique said today.

Beaufighters in an offensive patrol along the railway in Central Burma damaged seven locomotives, about 75 trucks and five water tanks. Fighters said an oil tanks near Alon which they bombed on July 19 was still burning.

In the Arakan area Bisthtein Goodline Hurricanes and Spitfires decapled villages while Hurricanes blasted enemy troop positions. Lastnight Liberators and Wellingtons bombed Kelebyi targets at Selsa and Sagaing, near Mandalay, and at Taungup and Akyab. One Britishbased Liberator is missing.

British troops on patrol activity in the Arakan area have encountered superior Japanese force three miles south of Maungdaw and gave them a decisive beating, the communique said. One Japanese company and 30 men were known to have been killed, while at least 40 others either killed or wounded. British casualties were light.

More than 1,000 British girls between the ages of 15 and 17 have been recruited by the Government to be trained to look after babies whose mothers are on national service in the industrial areas.

17 Girls Make Good Students In Course on Machine Work

Belleville girls and young women are answering well their country's call to go to work on the production front that their brothers may be relieved to go to the battle front to face fighting forces of the nation.

At least this was the impression received today at the Belleville Collegiate when a class of 17 girls was seen eagerly taking instruction on 3 light machines and in elsewhere work under the Dominion-Provincial War Emergency Training Plan. The girls take a three-months course in machine work following which they enter employment in factories on war production.

Practically every walk of life was represented by the 17 girls. Two of were former office workers, ales clerks and a number of former restaurant waitresses. All were learning the fundamentals of operating the drill press, of filing and polishing, together with intricate operations of a more technical nature.

Questioned as to what lured her her new work, a former restaurant waitress enthusiastically replied: "Oh, I like to work in a factory, and the best part of it all is that we get paid while learning." This girl was anxious to complete her course and get into production work on the industrial front.

Class of 35 Men

Training of girls for production and assembly work is only a small part of the instruction given at the Belleville Dominion-Provincial War Training courses, however." Course director, Mr. Harold Howard stated that a class of 35 men, 18 of whom were taking instruction in lathe operation, six milling machines and planers. They also learn the rudiments of filing and drilling.

Three girls are taking welding instruction while seven men are taking the same type training. Three instructors are now on full time duty, the night classes having been discontinued for the summer months. They will start again in September, it was stated by the director.

One of the high points of interest in the present class of men taking instruction at the collegiate is the fact that three formerly were in the armed services are taking machine training. These men have been discharged from the services because of midical unfitness and are taking the course as part of a rehabilitation program.

Picton and District

Picton, July 22 (Special)—Walter Post, proprietor of the Quinte Hotel in Ameliasburgh pleaded guilty in Picton court this morning to three charges of not providing a customer with a bed, the charge for which a cancelled excise tax stamp was affixed. He paid the minimum fine of $25 plus costs on each of the three counts.

Walter Wescott, a waiter at Quinte Inn, also pleaded guilty to three similar charges and was fined $25 and costs on each count.

The constables in each case were of the R.C.M.P. Excise Branch, who had been put on the trail of the Ameliasburgh hotel by information given by a customer with a grievance because of which your committee apologizes.

Mr. Post said he had had no definite idea of the requirements of the act.

The Magistrate Mr. A. B. Collins said the offence was covered by sections 138 and 155 of the Special War Revenue Act, a comparatively new piece of legislation, but the ignorance of the law he said, "My sympathy is with the party caught with these complex regulations without being aware of the offence."

Abandonment Charge

Muriel Brown, 18, of Carrying Place and Walter Potter, 17, of Ameliasburgh, charged with unlawfully abandoning a child under the age of ten at Ameliasburgh, thereby endangering its life, appeared before the court. Constable Cochrane, P. L. Wark, K.C., of Picton asked the magistrate to decide in favor of trying the case in the police court. He said that the boy was a farmer, working for Mr. Brown, while his father also worked at an airport, that the two had been left in Brown's house and that the baby is now well and normal. The child is still being kept in the Prince Edward County Hospital.

But Acting Crown Attorney Lake said that the case could have been tried in Picton, that it be tried in a higher court so that it would be in the county.

Magistrate Collins, ordered bail to be set for the amount of $1,000 previously set and he reserved his decision as to the court in which the case was to be tried until August 11th.

Abduction Charge

Arthur Van Blaricom, charged with the abduction unlawfully abducting an unmarried girl appeared before the court and pleaded not guilty. He was remanded for one week with bail set at $500.

Traffic and Other Cases Are Heard In Police Court

Motorists who continue to disregard the provincial speeding regulations, as laid down under the War Measures' Act, found their efforts to evade the law a costly one in police court after being convicted. Today in County Police Court this fact was emphasized by Harry Stafford, Kingston, and Milton Sweet of Napanee, who were fined $17.50 each, including costs, upon being convicted under these regulations before Magistrate Ponton.

Other traffic cases resulted in Frank Allen, Napanee, being fined $7.50 after being convicted of failing to stop at a stop sign, driving through highway, while James T. Lee, Napanee, was fined $10 for driving without first having obtained an operator's license. The latter was also fine $10, the same as was imposed here. Traffic Officers Milton and Caldwell preferred the charges.

Albert Belmont, Point Anne, appeared on a charge of indecent exposure and was remanded in custody after Crown Attorney asked for a remand to allow investigation in order to prepare the Crown's case.

After William LaRue, Belleville, made restitution of $25, he had obtained from Mrs. C. J. Bremner of the R.C.A.F. at Deseronto, His wife, Lois LaRue, was placed under suspended sentence. "Bremner owes you $25," Magistrate Ponton told Mrs. Mr. Donnan assured him the court was "no collecting agency."

Pilot L. N. Chadwick of the Trenton R.C.A.F., appeared on a charge of obtaining $25 from Aircraftsman Sergt. Raymond Bradshaw, of the same unit, through the use of a worthless cheque. Sergt. Bradshaw, in his evidence, stated that Chadwick had appeared for the two sergeants and agreed to pay the $25 personally. Mr. Payne later agreed to a postponement in the cases for one week, remanding the accused in custody. Mr. Donnan, No details as to the nature of the charges were given by Pl. G. H. R. Gilbert, R.C.A.F., investigator.

Bernard O'Connell, Tweed, paid $10 and costs after entering a plea of guilty when charged with careless driving while Arne Gustavson, also of Tweed, paid $16.00, including costs, for the same offence upon conviction. Gustavson also paid a fine for having liquor in a place other than his residence, as did a Tweed woman. These cases were presented by Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed.

Charges of vagrancy were dismissed against John DeCarlo and Alex Asoph.

Nancy Oakes de Marigny Says She Will Fight By Husband's Side

Nassau, Bahamas, July 22—(AP)—Nancy Oakes de Marigny will fight by her husband's side against the charge that he murdered her friend, Lieutenant British Baron, et. Sir Harry Oakes.

She made this positive yesterday when she left Nassau after having ed the charge against Alfred de Marigny, 33, sugar planter.

Breaking silence after two visits to the Bahamas jail where her husband is being held, the slender Canadian heiress said she had faith in De Marigny's innocence from the time he told her he had helped to hear the statement from his own lips.

"I do not believe that it is possible he will be convicted," she said. "I am sure that justice will be taken to the highest court."

Surplus of Sailors Man U.S. Freighters Under British Flag

Washington, July 22 — (AP)— Britain, with a surplus of experienced seamen, and the United States, with a shortage of them, have decided to meet the problem by transferring British seamen and ships to British registry.

Transferred merchant ships thus transferred will be operated by British crews, Admiral Emory S. Land, Jack, but ownership will remain with the United States war shipping administration.

Lend-lease estimated today that about 200 British seamen manning 2,000,000 deadweight tons had been transferred, shifts that are continuing on a regular but unspecified rate.

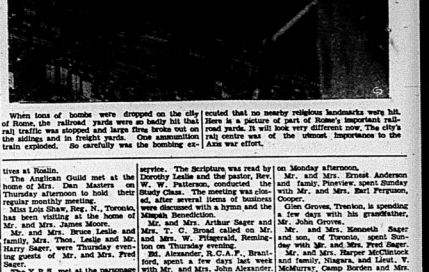
AS ARTIST SAW ALLIED INVASION OF SICILY



The greatest invasion fleet in history, which brought a mighty Allied army across the Mediterranean from North Africa to Sicily, inspired Artist Noel Sickles to draw this graphic illustration of the event for the armed forces. The perfect co-ordination which enabled thousands of ships to carry men and supplies to the doomed island is shown.

ROME RAILROAD YARDS BLASTED BY ALLIES

When tons of bombs were dropped on the city of Rome, the railroad yards were so badly hit that rail traffic was stopped and large fires broke out on the sidings and in freight yards. One ammunition train exploded. So carefully was the bombing executed that no nearby religious landmarks were hit. Here is a picture of part of Rome's important railroad yards. It will look very different now. The city's rail centre was of the utmost importance to the Axis war effort.

"My Nerves Were Very Bad, I Felt Tired and Rundown"

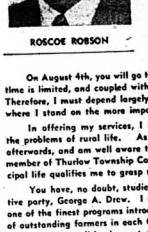
"Had No Energy From the Time I Got Up in the Morning," Says This Woman, Digestion Bad; Got Sick Headaches; Couldn't Sleep. Tells How Syntona Helped Her.

MISS GLADYS FOREMAN

At this time of the year many people begin to feel tired, easily fatigued and nervous; appetites are lost and they have no energy to do anything. They suffer from indigestion, dizziness, headaches and stomach aches and pains and the bowels become constipated. Now is the time to take Syntona for effective aid like that experienced by Miss Gladys Foreman, 128 Young Street, Hamilton, Ontario.

"My nerves were very badly run-down and I felt worn out and tired all the time. I had no energy from the time I got up in the morning. The least noise or excitement startled me and I would jump. I was nervous as well as tired, so I felt tired and my nerves made me feel that way. I had terrible headaches and I suffered a lot from indigestion and dizziness. After a while I got sick, lost appetite, and looked and felt badly. I was discouraged feeling. I used to get very nervous.

"I had been told that was for a short time and it was true. Then I read about Syntona. I decided I would try it. It wasn't long before my food seemed to digest and I began to enjoy it and feel better. I could eat regular meals and have them digest, so taking it my nerves calmed down and I began to feel better. Now I am like a different person. I have no more headaches, I sleep fine, I am getting rested, restful sleep at night and I have gained new strength and energy. I am very happy to recommend Syntona to others."



Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at BOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF

ROSCOE ROBSON

GEORGE A. DREW

On August 4th, you will go to the polls to choose a candidate to represent you at Queen's Park. Since the time is limited, and coupled with transportation restrictions, I shall be unable to see many of you personally. Therefore, I must depend largely on the press of the riding to convey my message. I want you to know just where I stand on the more important matters which should be the concern of every elector.

In offering my services, I feel that as a former for the past twenty-four years, I am well acquainted with the problems of rural life. As a returned soldier, I remember conditions which soldiers faced in 1919 and afterwards, and am well aware that there must be post-war plans to take care of their re-employment. As a member of Thurlow Township Council for 12 years and Reeve for the last six, I feel that my experience in municipal life qualifies me to grasp more intelligently the problems of an enlarged field.

You have, no doubt, studied the 22-point platform introduced by the leader of the Progressive-Conservative party, George A. Drew. I do not propose to enumerate on the various planks, but suffice it to say, it is one of the finest programs introduced in the history of provincial politics. His proposal to establish committees of outstanding formers in each County, to plan, direct and regulate production and distribution of essential agricultural commodities is most commendable. His proposed labor legislation, the development of Ontario's mining and forest industries and the removal of bureaucratic restrictions are well worth the study of any intelligent elector of this province.

Elect ROBSON on August 4

Flying a Kite

It is obvious that Hon. Harry Nixon is "flying a kite" for Mackenzie King. We do not want an Ottawa-dominated government at Queen's Park.

Riding on Hepburn's Record

The Liberal candidates and Cabinet Ministers are seeking re-election on former Premier Hepburn's record of administration. Hon. Eric Cross, speaking at Madoc, declared that the party should be returned on the strength of Mr. Hepburn's record. Does he think the memory of the people is so short-lived that we forget he was one of the very Ministers who tried to "knife" his former leader?

Drew is the Answer

GEORGE A. DREW is the answer to a return to stable, honest, and efficient administration at Queen's Park. The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion (Gallup Poll) shows his star in the ascendancy. Mr. Nixon is steadily losing ground. Mr. Drew's enunciation of the Progressive-Conservative Party's constructive plan for rebuilding Ontario now, and during the post-war period, is drawing new support every day.

"Feeding at the Trough"

Press reports of the Liberal convention at Madoc convey to electors the impression that the delegates were more concerned with "party patronage" than able representation from the riding. This was quite evident from reports that all delegates were not pleased with the "patronage" as administered by Mr. Brown during the past five years. If our democracy is to flourish after this war, this form of "feeding at the trough" must be eliminated. Our boys are fighting overseas to do away with such abuses.

Election Not Necessary

An election at this time is not necessary and should have been postponed until after the war. Why create ill-feeling on the beaches of Sicily and our thoughts are with them. Mr. Nixon is a political opportunist seeking renewed power as the Allied Nations face a new crisis.

Every Vote Counts

It is your solemn duty to exercise your franchise on August 4th. The future of the Province is at stake. We do not want a Socialist government or one which is interested only in flying a trial balloon for Ottawa. We want independent leadership. A vote for ROSCOE ROBSON is a vote for GEORGE A. DREW and a better Ontario.

The Proxy Method

THE LIBERAL PARTY SHOULD BE DEFEATED on the iniquitous method of taking the soldiers' vote, if nothing else. Those in every branch of the service have literally been disfranchised by this hit-and-miss plan of taking the service vote.

Probabilities

Lower Lake Region: Light to moderate winds; fine and warm. Saturday, moderate winds; generally fair and warm, followed by scattered thundershowers.

PALERMO CAPTURED BY AMERICAN FORCES

REDS CRACK LAST OF OREL'S NORTH DEFENCES

Enemy Trapped In West Section By Swift Advance

Installations of Port Are Found Undamaged

(BY HELMAN NORIN, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 23 —(AP)— An American armored division, overrunning a collapsed Italian resistance, has captured Palermo, capital and largest city of Sicily, thereby isolating the whole western end of the island, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Fast-striking units of the American 7th Army surpassed the expectations of even their veteran taskmaster, Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, by racing from Enna in central Sicily to the north coast port in 36 hours.

Thousands of Italian forces were trapped by the emergence of the Allied spearhead upon the north Sicilian coast.

By the capture of Palermo, Italy's sixth largest city, the Allies gained dominance of the Tyrrhenian Sea, the water approach to the western coast of Italy.

The Axis was being compressed into an area of northeastern Sicily little larger than Cape Bon where their Tunisian forces were destroyed last May.

The main American forces, despite the sweep over western Sicily, were about 30 miles south of San Stefano di Camastra on the north shore, where they could be brought to bear upon the remaining battle line.

San Stefano Di Camastra north of Enna, is connected by a major highway with the Lanoforex area northeast of Enna.

The American 7th Army up to last midnight had captured 71,000 prisoners, 250 guns, 300 vehicles and 10,000,000 rounds of ammunition and destroyed 84 tanks, of which 14 were 60-ton Tigers.

Italian forces in Palermo were stunned by the swift arrival of American armor, which had been last reported 15 miles distant.

When the big port was first hit by mobile forces which broke into the outer areas and paralyzed resistance, panic was said to have spread throughout the city, and when the main elements came up they met little opposition.

The Italians had planned largescale demolition of the port works and other installations but had no time to carry them out.

The defenders complained their own navy had limited its assistance to the sending of a single small speedboat which was rushed in at the last hour to transport a number of high-ranking Italian naval officers out of the area.

Among high Italian officers in Allied hands, it was announced today, is Admiral Priolo Leonard, who was Commandant of the Augusta naval base on the Sicilian east coast.

Palermo, which has a normal peacetime population of about 350,000, is situated some 50 miles from the western tip of the island and is the principal seaport.

By driving through to the north coast to capture the city the American forces effectively cut off, trapped to two parts, sealing the avenue of escape for the troops trapped in the west.

(The Moroccо radio said this morning that Axis troops had abandoned Marsala and Trapani, on the western tip of Sicily and were withdrawing eastward.

Rome said in its communique today that Italian forces in western Sicily had withdrawn.)

An official announcement said Palermo fell at 10 a. m. yesterday.

Palermo is the undisputed political and cultural centre of Sicily and its fall in Italian eyes would in all likelihood be considered almost the same as the fall of Sicily as a whole.

Shipping facilities provided by the port are important in the area's value to the Allies.

(The fall of the city was announced in a special communique which said the German radio had surrendered, according to an Algiers radio broadcast heard by The Associated Press.

(The broadcast said the Italian 26th division had surrendered and added the British 8th Army still was engaging in a bitter battle in Catania. In another broadcast, Algiers relayed a Berlin broadcast confirmed reports at Allied headquarters' that Allied parachute forces had been landed north of Catania while the Germans rushed up reinforcements by air.)

Fate of two other cities, Marsala and Trapani, was not mentioned in the dispatch, although yesterday's reports had said that in the face of the American advance, speeded by the fact that only negligible forces of Italian resistance protected the three centres.

HUGE NAVAL GUNS POUND JAPANESE ON KISKA ISLAND

Heavy Shelling Aimed Apparently at Softening Up of Island Defences

SHIPS UNDAMAGED

Washington, July 23 (AP)—Heavy guns of the United States Pacific fleet bombarded Japanese positions on Kiska Island Thursday, the Navy Department announced today. In the seventh surface attack this month against the enemy's Aleutian outpost.

The shelling apparently was intended to hasten the day when Kiska defences will be softened sufficiently for amphibious assault and a final campaign to throw the Japanese out of the western Aleutians.

The surface attack was made by warships which a navy communique described only as "heavy and light surface units."

Enemy shore guns returned the fire but none of the American ships was damaged.

A navy spokesman said that heavy fleet units could —include battleships with their 16 inch guns, older capital vessels with their 14 inch guns, or heavy cruisers. All those guns are classed in the 8 inch size. Such units are used by the navy as heavy guns. Light surface units include destroyers and light cruisers.

Sequel to Bomb Raid

The bombardment followed by 24 hours a raid of United States army heavy bombers on the Japanese heavy bombers on the Japanese runway and main camp area on Kiska. Numerous fires were stored and fires started in the air raid.

Word of the attack coincided with an Associated Press dispatch from Alaskan headquarters today reporting that the Japanese had finally completed a 7,700-foot runway on Kiska. The bombers obviously intended to undo much of the work accomplished.

Ontario Department of Health Orders City to Build Reservoir; Contract To Be Let by Aug. 30

More Material Sent Eisenhower Than Gen. Pershing Had

Chicago, July 23 (AP) — Lt.-General Brehon Somervell, commanding the United States Army Service Forces, declared yesterday a final campaign to throw the Japanese out of the western Aleutians.

"We're up to or ahead of our timetable on every front where we have the offensive and on other fronts we have established a strategic defence."

At a press conference he said "we've already shipped General Eisenhower more tons of material than Pershing had in the entire First World War, and we're already taking care of more pioneers of war than our entire army numbered in the First World War."

The Allies have a "tough job ahead of them, and were just beginning to realize it," Somervell said, "but we have the initiative and were going to press that initiative by keeping a steady flow of men and material to the fighting fronts."

GOT CAR AT LAST

Sonora, Calif., July 22 — (AP)— Two months ago O. K. Peckham reported his mar stolen. Today the state highway patrol said it had been located — in a vacant garage near Peckham's home. A service station which had greased the car returned it last May 27 to the wrong address.

Communication Read at Special Meeting of Council Asking That Public Utilities Be Given Authority To Proceed With Early Construction

A fifteen-month controversy over the proposed construction of a one million gallon water reservoir at the Belleville Water Purification Plant was ended at a special meeting of city council Thursday evening when a mandatory order from the Department of Health, Toronto, was read before members calling for the project to be initiated with the contract to be let not later than August 30th.

According to the order it is the opinion of the department that it is necessary in the interest of the public health of Belleville citizens that the reservoir be built. Council was asked to give authorization to the public utilities to proceed with its construction immediately.

Action Requested

At special council meeting last week a communication from the Department of Health was read urging the construction of the reservoir as a measure of safety. Failing at that time to get approval of the detention issue, council by majority vote asked in a recommendation to the department that the necessary authority be used to compel the construction of the reservoir.

Construction of the water reservoir has been a bone of contention in Belleville since it was first proposed many months ago. First the city council opposed its construction and when it appeared the Utilities would proceed without council's consent, council was granted an interim injunction restraining the Public Utilities Commission. After the issue was heard in court, council approved of the reservoir's construction but could not get the necessary three-quarter vote to issue debentures covering the estimated $36,000 cost.

Build Out of Profits

The Public Utilities claimed they could build the reservoir out of surplus profits but in order to legalize matters, it was necessary to issue debentures. It was here that councillors could not agree with a majority of the members opposing the Debenture By-law.

Despite the mandatory order from the Department of Health, the four members who have been opposed the debenture issue again remained. When the Debenture By-law was given its third reading last evening Aldermen Pringle, Potter, Follwell and Butler dissented but interpretation of the order by City Solicitor A. B. Collins indicated that only a majority council vote was necessary to proceed with the reservoir.

Allies Still Hope Foe Will Declare Rome an Open City

Washington, July 23 (AP) — Secretary Roosevelt said today the Allies still hope that the Germans and Fascists will declare Rome an open city.

The President told his press conference that the Allies had tried for a year or more to have the Italian capital rendered an open city and hence not subject to attack, but that all these efforts had failed.

Discussing the recent air raid on Rome, the President remarked the city contains airports and railroad marshalling yards used to transport guns, troops and ammunition southward. He also said the bombing was to protect British and American lives.

The President would not comment on the letter of Pope Pius XII to his Vicar General in Rome deploring the bombing. He said he had no communication from the Pope.

The comment he did make came in response to a question whether Rome should be made an open city.

Touching on the invasion of Sicily, he said it was clear that the Allied troops were in great danger in the matter of guns and other military equipment from the Rome area.

Latest Success Tightens Pincers Around Stronghold

Another Russian Column Is Within Eleven Miles of City on the East

BATTLE OF ATTRITION

Moscow, July 23 (AP) —Russian forces crashed through the last strongly-fortified link in Orel's northern defences yesterday on the 10th day of an offensive that has cost the Germans 50,000 killed and 6,000 captured, and closed the pincers tighter about the city despite desperate Nazi counter attacks, a Soviet announcement said today.

Bolkhov, 35 miles above the city, which a Berlin broadcast earlier said was down from the north had by-passed while driving to within nine miles northeast of Orel, crumbled before the attackers and its fall "completed" the liquidation of strongly fortified districts in that direction, the Russians said.

Another Russian column pounding within 11 miles of the key German defence city from the east, and a southern column moving up to complete the three-headed drive, beat back Nazi tanks and infantry in continuous heavy counter-attacks, according to the Soviet announcement.

Altogether, the Russians said gains of four to five miles were registered in the Orel sector yesterday while the Germans lost 2,500 killed and 20 tanks destroyed or captured. Prisoners and supplies also were gathered, Moscow declared.

The Russian midnight communique which disclosed the losses in manpower to Hitler's army during the ten-day Soviet offensive, placed German losses in material destroyed or captured during the same period at three figures:

Nine hundred planes, 1,146 tanks, 1,562 guns or various calibre, 800 mortars and 1,400 machine guns.

"The German radio countered with the assertion that the Red Army had lost more than 350,000 in dead, wounded or captured since July 5.

"(Terming the struggle "the greatest battle of attrition ever fought," German sources pictured the immense Red Army forces facing each other along the Russian front in the Orel area, which made up of 600 divisions — from 7,200,000 to 8,000,000 men "presently engaged" there.)

In the Belgorod sector, 155 miles south of Orel, the Russian announcement said that Soviet troops overcame stubborn enemy resistance from several populated areas in that sector, and that there were more than 1,00 enemy dead were counted on the field following Thursday's day battle, the Russians said.

Front-line dispatches describing Bolkhov's capture said Russian columns closed in on the city from the north, northeast and southeast after the northern prong had broken through defences the Germans considered impregnable.

Heavy fighting was reported to have continued into the heart of the town, with some Nazi pockets fighting until they were exterminated.

ALLIED AIRMEN SET HUGE FIRES AT SURABAJA

Surprise Japanese, Pour Explosives And Incendiaries on Naval Targets

2,400-MILE FLIGHT

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, July 23. (AP)—Allied airmen sprang a surprise on the Japanese yesterday with a destructive raid on the enemy's main Netherlands East Indies base at Surabaja.

It was the first raid on the once great Dutch naval base on Java since the Japanese captured it in March, 1942, and the heavy bombers raced in and began planting 500-pound bombs and incendiaries in the target area. Japanese ground batteries however, raised a heavy and ineffective barrage. All the bombers returned.

The Japanese communique today said the incendiaries and high explosives hit on oil finery, warehouses, railway installations and a dock. Towering fires, some of them visible 140 miles away, were started.

New Record of Flight

The four-engined warplanes flew nearly 2,400 miles in the operation, which was flown on Thursday. The previous record of 2,000 miles was made on raids against Makassar in Celebes Island.

The spectacular attack on Surabaja captured immediate attention from the Solomons area but there was no easing of the daily battering given Munda on New Georgia. Bombers continued to rain bombs upon the heavily defended Japanese airbase, dropping 135 tons of explosives. Fighters covered the bombers in 260 sorties, made "in direct support of our ground troops".

(Japanese forces at Munda are counted upon for the defences ringing the field, a spokesman at the South Pacific headquarters of Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr. said. He added that capture of the airbase was in no hurry.

Maintaining heavy pressure on the Japanese in the sector south of Salamaua, Australian and American troops have made a heavy toll of the enemy in a series of clashes near Nanking.

Moscow Appeal Seen in Washington As Trial Balloon of Importance

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 23 — (AP) — The appeal issued in the German to overthrow Hitler and make an immediate peace, launched through the international committee of free Germany," was viewed here today as a trial balloon of more than ordinary importance.

The committee, with obvious Soviet inspiration, appealed in a manifesto for the formation of a "genuine national German government," which would immediately end military operations, recalling the troops to the Reich's original frontiers and embark on peace negotiations.

Washington officialdom shared the reported view in London that the manifesto showed Russia's preeminent interest in the peace conditions to be imposed on Germany.

It undoubtedly was intended, it was said, as a propaganda weapon to help the Red Army's counter-offensive by weakening the German home front, since it was broadcast to Germany by the Moscow radio.

The Moscow committee also could be a tentative nucleus for a pro-Soviet organization to take over authority in Germany, some quarters believe.

Some apprehension was expressed privately here that such a statement might stiffen German resistance out of fear that the Soviets intend to dominate Germany.

London Press Says Rome Not Only Place to Lose Sacred Buildings

London, July 23 (CP Cable) — The bombing of Rome last Monday was aimed at military objectives, but the same cannot be said for the Germans in their air attacks. Observers recalled today that the Nazis struck at British cathedral cities "little more than a year ago with clear warning and incendiary bombs on Canterbury, Exeter, Bath and Norwich.

In the raid on Rome the United States army air force "showed unusual their targets were railway yards, airfields and factories. A year ago the German aim was equally good but their targets were cathedrals, churches and libraries.

Thousand Churches Damaged

Nazi air attacks started over Britain have destroyed or damaged thousands of churches of all denominations, it added. Unofficial estimates place the total between 3,000 and 5,000.

The War Damage Commission has severely damaged Canterbury Cathedral, the cradle of the Anglican Church, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, Bath Abbey, Llandaff Cathedral, Coventry Cathedral and Exeter Cathedral are among the most prominent religious structures which have been bombed.

MEN'S SOCKS STOLEN FROM STORE COUNTER

Shoplifters were reported active in Belleville on Thursday when several pairs of men's socks were taken from a sales counter. Employees informed police they saw a man loitering around the counter in question immediately prior to the discovery of the theft. Some weeks ago a similar case of shoplifting was reported at the same store and strangely enough men's socks were the only articles taken at that time.

LOCKED CAR STOLEN

Despite the fact it was securely locked at both the doors and ignition, a 1934 model Chevrolet de luxe coach was stolen from a parking position behind the St. Charles Motors' premises some time Thursday evening. The theft was reported to city police by Sergt. H. Vinillier of the No. 6 Repair Depot of the R.C.A.F. near Trenton, Sergt. Vinillier produced the keys of his motor car and assured police he had securely locked the vehicle after parking it.

BOTTLE OF ASTHMA REMEDY MISTAKEN FOR LIQUOR BY THIEF

Somebody had an awfully red face in Belleville yesterday afternoon and it went to prove—crime does not pay.

Mrs. Blakely of Madoc was in the city yesterday, along with friends and relatives, making some necessary purchases which included a bottle of medicine used exclusively for the relief of asthma. After making some purchases Mrs. Blakely returned to her parked motor car at the upper end of Front Street and deposited goods, which included the bottle of medicine.

Now the medicine bottle was the proper size and shape to that contained some potent "white" look it for a small bottle of hooch.

ADVANCE PARTY FLIES TO OTTAWA

The advance party from the Argyll Light Infantry (R) flew from here to Ottawa this morning to complete pre-camp arrangements for the local reserve military unit at Connaught Ranges, where the Argyll Battalion moves into summer camp on Sunday. The advance party will take to the air again from Ottawa consisted of Major A. H. Ketchison, Captain K. R. Holmes and Lieut. O. Lapp. The Argyll will bivouac under canvas at the Connaught Ranges for a two week period. Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding the unit, will proceed to Ottawa by motor car on Saturday and will be present when the unit arrives for camp on Sunday. The land advance party, travelling by motor coach, left for Ottawa with battalion equipment today also.

2 BOYS CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Police Report Apprehension of Two Youths in Queen Mary School at 1 a.m.

Hearing disturbances inside Queen Mary School while patrolling the city about one-thirty o'clock Friday morning, City Police apprehended two teen-aged lads who they had tried to escape from the building.

In court today the boys were held on remand on charges of vagrancy. They gave their home address as Toronto, one boy being a 17-year-old. The other boy was but 15 years of age. Both visiting relatives in this vicinity, police revealed today.

Police said Sergeant Arnott and P. C. Hughes were patrolling the city early Friday morning and when about to try the security of the Queen Mary School, Sergeant Arnott, Constable Wright apprehended the two lads as they were endeavoring to escape from the open door.

After placing the lads in separate cells at the station, police returned to the school to find a broken key in the basement door jack. Chas. Carter, 22 Octavia St., and Janitor of the school, was alerted and a thorough examination of the premises made. Nothing of value is thought to have been removed. Later in the day Sergeant Arnott found the other half of the broken key in a pocket of one of the lads reported to Chief Provost Bert. Both lads insisted they had found the school door open and merely walked in.

In police court, Deputy Chief Harman asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan to appear in the two older boy's case, while the younger lad was also remanded to the custody of Inspector T. D. Ruston, of the Children's Aid Society, as juveniles cannot be remanded to the custody of the common jail under law.

DREW ATTACKS NIXON GOV'T

Says Officer Writes Proxies Not Delivered to Unit Before Announcement

Toronto, July 22 (CP)—Lt.-Col. George Drew said at an election campaign meeting in Toronto Eglinton riding last night that proxy vote forms had not been delivered to troops overseas before the announcement June 30 of the Ontario general election.

"I have had a letter today dated July 8 from an officer in England who said that on that date proxies had not been delivered to his unit," said the Progressive Conservative leader. "He didn't even know at that time what system of voting we were going to have. And this less than two weeks from the election before the Courts of Revision already closed."

Col. Drew said the proxy vote, under which members of overseas active service outside Ontario may designate a friend or relative at home to cast their votes, was now "mishandled" by the government and that 100,000 men and women overseas were being disfranchised in the election.

"This has been a deliberate device to disfranchise 100,000 citizens of Ontario," he said, and declared they would do to a government that placed itself under the control of Mitch Hepburn. "And remember Nixon's boss learned in England exactly what the Nixons thought of him. They did a good job too. Nixon's boss has now placed the handling of the proxy votes in the hands of the Provincial Secretary, Ottawa. What simple faith he had."

Earlier in the evening, the Progressive Conservative leader said in an address broadcast over a province-wide network of CBC and private radio stations, that Premier Nixon's outline of policy in a speech Wednesday, night formed "a declaration of complete bankruptcy, on behalf of the Liberal Party in this province."

"Mr. Nixon's speech left no doubt in anyone's mind that those who vote for a Liberal candidate in this election vote for a continuance of the same destructive sort of government we have been getting . . . If we give us an interval of May, 1940, on that there is to be a continuation of the helplessness and confusion which led to the quick succession of three premiers in less than 16 months."

JOLLIFFE ASSAILS ONTARIO GOV'T

Says Thousands of Voters Left Off Lists, and Time for Election Ill Chosen

Toronto, July 23 (CP)— E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, last night in an election campaign address that democracy in Ontario is being "usurped by a government which cares nothing for the rights of the voters."

The present election is being conducted with such negligence and incompetence that tens of thousands of voters have been left off the voters' lists," said Mr. Jolliffe.

"In some cases it appears to have been done deliberately.

"The election was called at a time when large numbers of voters are away from home and the farmers are hopelessly overworked."

Mr. Jolliffe said Premier Nixon and his colleagues "have broken pledges their contempt for democracy." He criticized the proxy system of voting. Proxy votes given men outside Ontario may designate a relative or friend to vote for them.

Referring to Lt.-Col. George Drew, Mr. Jolliffe said the Ontario Progressive Conservative leader "did not raise his voice in protest against the drift towards dictatorship in Queen's Park until the election was announced."

Bertrand Withdraws Nomination in Favor Of Aurelian Belanger

Ottawa, July 23 (CP)—E. O. Bertrand, of L'Original, Ont., chosen Liberal candidate for Prescott in the forthcoming provincial general election, said last night that he had withdrawn his candidacy at the request of Premier Harry Nixon of Ontario Mr. Bertrand, now Liberal Member of Parliament for Prescott, made public the following telegram from Mr. Nixon:

"You have been chosen Liberal candidate in Prescott County for the legislature by receiving the largest vote at the convention properly called and organized. I recognize that fact and that you are at the present time the candidate.

"I would however esteem it a great favor and shall be most grateful if you would be disposed to retire in favor of Mr. Belanger Aurelian Belanger, Liberal Member of the Ontario Legislature for Prescott at dissolution who has rendered valuable service in the Legislature.

"This I believe would be in the interest of the unity we desire to see in Ontario and in accord our good friends in Prescott riding would join you and stand solidly behind Mr. Belanger".

Mr. Bertrand also made public a telegram sent to Mr. Nixon by Orilia Labelle, of Hawkesbury, Ont., and Isidore Bouleau of L'Original, presidents and secretary, respectively, of the Prescott Liberal Association, saying they consented to ask Mr. Bertrand to withdraw and tender-acy but "respectfully request that Mr. Belanger be chosen to discuss this situation at your earliest convenience after the election".

Council to Seek Authority From WPTB to Increase Basic Price of Fuel Wood Here

Plans Discussed for Providing Against Shortage Next Winter

NEED 20,000 CORDS

Discussion on the question of the City of Belleville acting as a purchasing agent for cord wood for use this winter to assist in the alleviation of what may be a distressing fuel situation took up most of the time at last Thursday night's special meeting of council.

Following lengthy discussion on conflicting angles of the situation, it was recommended that the appointed committee make representation to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with the view to having the base price of cord wood raised sufficiently to clear the city of any loss should any purchase wood for distribution by city wood dealers.

The crux of the whole situation was claimed to be that with the present cost of wood to the dealers, there was not sufficient margin of profit left if the wood must be sold at the ceiling price to the consumer as set down by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Mayor Rollins presided at the meeting and all members but Ald. Chamberlain's report. Mayor Rollins told council members that while it may not be the city's legal obligation to see that citizens are supplied with wood. It was its moral obligation.

The proposal was, he said, for the city to deal with the dealers to keep the city's hands at the time of its delivery to Belleville.

Discussion of the price the city should pay for the wood, to cover the wood, brought out intimation that the city would not be asked to cord if the wood had to be sold at the present ceiling price to the consumer.

Require 56 Margin

Ald. Wood-Hughes present at the meeting indicated they must have a margin of $4 per cord for hauling the wood. If they did not receive this figure they would lose money, it was claimed. Labor to cord the wood would not be obtained for less than $4 per day, they said.

"It looks to me that we are starting at the wrong place," stated Ald. Wood-Hughes, "that the city which was raised of the city taking a look should they purchase the wood and then bonus the dealers for its handling. The ceiling price should be raised. The matter should be taken up with the Prices Board so the dealer could be assured a fair margin of profit."

Ald. Armstrong indicated the intention was that the city would actually buy the cord of wood, distributor for the wood to the dealers who would pay upon delivery. There would be no necessity to issue debentures as the money outlay would b only temporary as the city would be recompensed immediately by the dealers.

"All this merely brings us back to where we started," said Alderman Butler. "Unless we get some assurance from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board that the ceiling price of wood will be raised, we must be prepared to subsidize the dealers for handling wood. I'd say to get action from Ottawa."

Profit For Dealers

Mayor Rollins claimed the city would be foolish to buy wood unless they could lay it down at a price permitting the dealers to make a profit. "That was not the intention," he said. "And I would like a clause into any recommendation preventing otherwise."

The original intention, claimed Alderman Armstrong, was to make representation to Ottawa asking the fuel controller to authorize wood dealers making a spread of $6 above the stumps. The intention to subsidize the dealers, "We should counteract by the wood, and then place the situation firmly before the fuel controller," demonstrated Ald.

Alderman Clapp thought a ceiling should be set on the suppliers. The Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company had bought hard wood at $10 per cord, a price which no dealer could touch, he stated.

The question of limit of business council was asked to ratify a change in the proposed route of the Alderground cable to be laid through the city by the Bell Telephone Company. The recommendation as set by the council by City Solicitor A. B. Collins stated the new route for the cable would be from Macdonald Ave., to Bridge street via the boulevard. The recommendation was passed without comment.

Mayor Rollins moved that a vote of appreciation be extended to Mr. J. W. Collins, Industrial Manager, Canadian Pacific Railways, Montreal, for the entertainment of the City of Belleville contained in the June issue of the company's industrial magazine. The assistance and co-operation of the Industrial Department of the C.P.R. with the council and with the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Belleville is very much appreciated, it was stated. The article in publication which was seconded by Alderman Pringle will be forwarded by the city clerk to Mr. Collins.

Many of Troops Mail Proxies Direct to Canada

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 23—(CP)—Proxy forms from Britain servicemen in Canada are being sent to Canada for distribution to the friends or relatives designated to cast a ballot. The forthcoming Ontario Provincial election on behalf of the overseas forces.

The final date for turning in the forms to commanding officers was July 16 but those who took advantage of the privilege of mailing proxies direct to Canada and reports here indicated that these are still being sent, despite the possibility they will be late.

The election date is Aug. 4.

Soldiers have participated in army orders of their eligibility to cast a proxy vote for a candidate in their constituency or relative in Canada to vote for them. Although there was no campaigning on this side of the Atlantic, the troops were able to follow the main issues of the election through The Canadian Press news.

It is difficult to estimate what proportion of overseas soldiers filled in proxy forms because of the number mailed independently by the adjutant of one Ontario battalion. It is said he received applications from nearly all the officers and men in his unit. About one-quarter were sent to him to mail, the others presumably were sent direct to Canada. Most of the soldiers who would pay upon delivery. There would be no necessity to issue debentures as the money

Prompt Resuscitation Action by Sgt. H. Cole, RCAF, Saves Babe's Life

A near tragedy was averted Thursday night through the expeditious ministrations of Sgt. Harold E. Cole, R.C.A.F. (Trenton), when he successfully administered prompt resuscitation to the near-drowned daughter of Flt.-Lt. Archie Green, R.C.A.F.

The child, eighteen-months old, had evidently wandered from the front of the cottage where her parents live around a small projectory point where she fell into the lake. The fortuitous appearance of 12-year-old Jack Hall, who was also returning from a short row in the Cole's boat is what made the rescue possible. Jack saw the small body lying on the bottom of the lake and, at first, thought it was a doll but, realizing that it was the body of small Betty Green who lived next door, he jumped from the boat and raised the limp body from the water and called for help. Mrs. Donald Sgt. Cole, who was nearby, took the girl's unconscious form from her son's arms and called to Sgt. Cole who immediately started resuscitation action which he continued for twenty minutes before the child was out of danger.

Dr. E. M. MacDonald who was called to the scene told Flt.-Lt. Green that they were fortunate someone was on hand to give artificial respiration early enough to save their daughter's life.

LONDON PRESS

It was on June 2, 1942, at the height of the German so-called "blitz" on London, that Canterbury Cathedral was first hit. A fleet of bombers struck at the historic city and dropped 25 bombs on the cathedral precincts.

The bombs demolished the Cathedral library, shattered the chancery and destroyed the Chapter House. The fabric of the Cathedral was damaged, but the main nave stone were strewn in the cloisters.

Westminster Abbey Hit

A year earlier Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral were hit during the aerial blitz on London. The roof of Westminster Abbey's lantern tower was punctured.

At St. Paul's the high altar and the crypt were also damaged and a hole was smashed through the Cathedral wall.

Commenting on the Pope's letter deploring the bombing of Rome, The Daily Mail said today: "We all share the Pope's sympathy for the victims of the Rome raid—for the 166 had many victims in this country. We understand his grief and concern for the monuments of Rome. We also have lost many irreplaceable treasures.

"But we cannot allow sentimental means of ending as quickly as possible a war which if long continued would engulf not Rome alone but the entire civilized world".

The Daily Mirror in an editorial protested against the Pontiff's letter because it was "calculated to confuse the Axis 'provocation' and cast 'stigma on the Allied Nations', especially the Americans who carried out the raid.

"The inevitable conclusion to be drawn from the Pope's letter is that one side of this struggle, namely the United Nations, has done something which it ought not to have done at all.

All Belligerents Responsible

The Mirror said, "The Allied action in bombing Rome is a matter for condemnation. . . It follows that the Axis and its satellites, and of any other belligerent, too, ought to condemn the same action".

The paper added: "The message was addressed to all the world. What we may be pardoned, however, if we imagine that it will be received in deep impression on those sections of his faithful who live in other belligerent capitals by the anxiety passed through terrifying ordeals and have their hearts and dwellings shattered; yet without, so far as one can be aware, causing any special discomfiture within the precincts of the Vatican City".

School Taxes to Be Reduced One-Half By Drew Government

ON ALL ONTARIO HOMES AND FARMS

Pledge 9 of the Progressive Conservative platform reads:

There will be a sweeping revision of our whole system of real estate taxation so that the owning and improvement of homes and farms on land, which are the very foundation of our society, will not be discouraged by excessive taxation. AS AN INITIAL STEP IN THAT DIRECTION THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT WILL ASSUME AT LEAST 50 PER CENT OF THE SCHOOL TAXES NOW CHARGED AGAINST REAL ESTATE. IT IS, HOWEVER, TO BE CLEARLY UNDERSTOOD THAT THIS CHANGE WILL NOT AFFECT THE AUTHORITY OF THE LOCAL SCHOOL BOARDS.

The promised transfer of 50% of the cost of primary and secondary education from real estate to the provincial treasury has been met in some quarters by queries as to how the extra burden is to be financed in Queen's Park when a Drew Government takes over the reins of government. Estimating that 50% of the cost of education will run into twenty million dollars the critics cry: "Where is all this money coming from?"

A considerable proportion or all of the money could readily come from economies in those branches of government which during the nine years of Liberal rule have raised the public taxation from fifty million dollars to over one hundred million dollars. The administration is now drawing to a close has in reckless fashion piled levy upon levy and debt upon debt until the annual budget deals exclusively in astronomical figures. What is more! Those who oppose the projected relief of home owners and other proprietors of real estate should bear in mind the stimulating and buoying effect of converting real estate into a marketable commodity. There will be encouragement to build and own homes which will provide work for a considerable proportion of the population. There is nothing like widespread housing activity to increase industry and gainful employment. The value of real estate would be increased, the housing problem would be solved, slums could be cleared away and there would be no need of a resumption of state and municipal relief after the war.

In this connection The Orillia Packet and Times says editorially that this reform, "will not necessarily add a dollar to the tax burden that the taxpayers have to carry. It will simply be a readjustment of the cost of maintaining the schools so that it will fall more equitably on a larger number of shoulders. At present the major part of the load falls on the section of the community who are property owners, who are neither the people who benefit directly nor those most able to pay."

But still the critics exclaim: "Where is the 20 million dollars to come from?"

That is surely a queer query to propound in a Province which in the last four years has raised billions for war besides scores of millions for the Canadian Red Cross Society and other voluntary organizations and at the same time heavily increased its purchase of war securities and its savings bank deposits.

The manner in which the Province has taken its war time tasks in its stride has imbued our people with a fresh confidence in our own spiritual, moral and material capacities for achievement. The skill, co-operation, and organizing abilities, with which employers and employees have faced new obligations and broken all time records in production, have opened people's eyes to a splendid future for Ontario and for the rest of Canada—if only we have wise government leadership.

That indeed was the keynote of the speech in which George Drew announced the party's 22 point policy, including that related to tax reforms. He said; — "Our whole planning for the future will be based upon the conviction that this Province has not yet begun to develop its resources. With effective planning we can make these resources provide work for our men and women who come out of the war and out of war factories—and that on a scale that will assure a higher measure of prosperity than we have ever known. Drew has also said:

"Our danger in this Province is not unemployment after the war, but rather a shortage of workers for the job which lies ahead if only those who direct our affairs have the vision to see the role which Ontario and Canada can play in the post-war world. If we believe Ontario is about to enter a rapid expansion in the producing capacity of our farms, our factories, our mines, and our forests, then we are safe in promising employment not only for those who will be demobilized, but to many others who will also be needed to produce those things that will be required in enormous quantities by the whole world."

The demands for replacement and reconstruction in many countries overseas after the war will tax Ontario's huge reserves of raw material and manufacturing facilities to the utmost limit. All the terrible destruction of the last four years has created and is creating such opportunities here at home for our young men and women as they have never yet known.

Given a new strong government in Queen's Park and a new strong government at Ottawa, we may look forward to a fresh era in Ontario and in the rest of Canada. It may indeed be assested without fear of successful contradiction that each of the 22 points in the Progressive Conservative platform makes for the creation of a greater and more prosperous Province which would not be inconvenienced in the slightest degree by government assumption of an additional obligation of twenty million dollars for primary and secondary education.

The Drew programme makes for progress in agriculture, in mining, in mines, forests, and commerce. It makes for the encouragement of individual initiative and private enterprise, for co-operative relations between employers and employees, for the opening up of new mining areas and for the employment of two million people in forest industries and derivative enterprises. The elimination of politics from the Civil Service will make for efficient government and the abolition of provincial government services which duplicate Federal services will prove a source of economy. The promised abolition of monopolies and the pledged assurance of adequate supplies of fuel, milk, and other basic necessities will contribute towards the development of a healthier and more efficient nation. So will the pledge of Social Security for those unable, through no fault of their own, to take care of themselves, especially in old age.

The issue is in the hands of the electors who are under a patriotic and moral obligation to do three things:

(1) See that your name is on the voter's list.

(2) Get out and work for the Progressive Conservative Party and its platform and a greater and more prosperous Ontario.

(3) Talk to your friends, and acquaintances and get them to the polls on the right side.

Make Ontario strong. Work and Vote for the Progressive Conservative Candidate.

Where the Money is to Come From

1. Partly from abolition of Over-Lapping Services.
2. Partly from Departmental Economies.
3. Still more of the necessary revenue will flow in from the stimulating influence this halving of school taxes will exert upon real estate values and upon rehousing and general building activities.
4. Most of the necessary revenue will arise from the accelerated development of Ontario's vast natural resources that will result from the presence in Queen's Park of a Progressive Conservative Government of strong, capable men who have presented the Province with the most aggressive and constructive programme in the history of the Province.

TO THE RESCUE OF REAL ESTATE
(Windsor Star)

Mr. Drew proposes that the Ontario Government, if he is called upon to form it, will assume at least fifty percent of the school taxes now charged against real estate . . . If that were done in Windsor it would knock about 10 mills off the tax rate. That . . . would prove a relief to all taxpayers.

DREW, NIXON, AND SCHOOL TAXES
(Ottawa Journal, July 13, 1943)

There will be a sweeping revision of our whole system of real estate taxation so that the owning and improvement of homes will not be discouraged by excessive taxation.

This clearly is one of the most important of the 22 points in the election program issued by Mr. George Drew, Ontario leader of the Progressive Conservative party.

Mr. Drew, elaborating briefly, said that "as the initial step" the provincial government would assume "at least 50 per cent of the school taxes now charged against real estate," but explained that this change would not affect "the authority of the local school boards." . . .

Mr. Drew's declaration of principles makes it possible to "inherit a prevalence which" has existed for many years. We tell men and women that they should own their own homes—but we pile on those homes such a load of taxes that ownership often is a grievous burden which rests most heavily, by comparison, on those least able to pay. There was a classic example in the depression days when a very large part of the cost of direct relief was charged against the municipalities and so against real estate. Here was a situation which the municipalities had not brought about, could not cure, and for which they had no responsibility at all, and yet the unfortunate taxpayers are left "holding the bag" because there was no lesser government to which he could pass it. Only now are the cities recovering from this gross injustice.

It would seem elementary that the cost of education should be distributed as widely as possible among all the people, and yet our present system throws (in the cities at least) the lion's share of it upon real estate. Mr. Drew, speaking after his nomination in High Park, Toronto, said that in Britain, in Australia and New Zealand, the greater part of school costs is borne by the State. Ontario should follow their example, and according to the Progressive Conservative leader it can be done without any increase in provincial taxes. "This province," he told the Toronto meeting, "was over-taxed last year by an amount considerably more than would be involved in these changes."

Here is a first-class election issue, with the Liberal Premier Nixon defending the old system and the Progressive Conservative party urging changes little short of revolutionary. No one can say this time there is "no difference" between parties.

In Sicily

The thirteen-day-old invasion of Sicily proceeds apace. Yesterday's news touching the advance of forces north and westward with the expectation of the early collapse. Now the port of Palermo has been taken. This is a natural sequel of the fall of Enna, a strategic point of central Sicily. On the east and centre the British and Canadians have been making progress. On the Gulf of Taranto the harbor of Reggio was hammered by the Royal Navy as it has been a base for aid to Sicily.

Signs are not wanting of the early collapse of the island and of the withdrawal of the war onward after Sicily is taken.

Il Duce True to Braggart Type

Mussolini, demagogue who ranted and dinned his voice and threats into the world's ear for years before the war broke out, is remembered as the Fascist leader who took office in 1922 and started the Fascist march to Rome, only Mussolini was not in it. He stayed behind in a northern city until he made sure that it was safe for an Italian's man to come back.

Mussolini has been accused many times of dodging danger and today he shows no more daring in making himself visible to the risk of danger than he ever did. When military targets were pounded in Rome by American airmen in 506 planes this week, there is nothing definite shown in the newsreels of the Italian Duce. Had he been in Rome in the streets risking himself in Fascism's behalf it is likely that Italian bulletins would have said so all about him. One story said that he spent the time of the Allied raid in the depths of a specially prepared dugout he had had built for himself.

According to the Axis reports he and his accomplice in aggression, Hitler, met in Northern Italy and talked over the war situation. Undoubtedly the meeting of Hitler was none too pleasant for Hitler could reorimnate Italian Mussolini with having fallen down in Italy's conduct of the war with the loss of North Africa when the force could likewise have voiced resentment against Hitler's German whose armies collapsed in Tunisia without a fight to the finish as a German report previously had said the German troops had been instructed to carry on.

Neither one of these destroyers of the peace of the world takes any risks. They don't ride in processions as Hitler did in Danzig in 1939. Mussolini does not parade down Berlin streets with Hitler. Such days are past because the war is not going as they intended. Fortunately for mankind this pomposity of Mussolini and the vicious vaunting of Hitler are no longer laundered in the ears of the world through radio broadcasts. Neither appears often. They have fallen on evil days.

Yet these two men who little dare to show themselves are those who are to blame for the shedding of blood in Europe and elsewhere in the world out of vainglory and selfish pride, envy and hatred. Both these men are wrecking and have wrecked other countries who in Malta, allowed these monsters to traffic in international strife and in human suffering. They are men of evil, against whom the accusing finger of law and order points.

Mussolini in the twenties was a figure that never failed to be found in a public place, on a balcony or some other coign of vantage addressing Italians by the thousands. He made himself a little tyrant, struck at Ethiopia savagely and without remorse because he thought conquest was an easy thing. He struck at Albania. In haste he threw himself into the war in 1940 for he no doubt thought it was already practically won by Hitler and he feared he was missing his opportunity. He helped to strike down his good neighbor France. Then he struck at Britain in the Mediterranean and the world knows who has won this struggle. He stabbed at Greece and his troops would have been driven into the Adriatic Sea had it not been for the anxiety of Hitler to save the Duce in his defeat. That is the type of man who lorded it over those he could dominate — the detestable figure the world is pleased to see humiliated and crushed, the man who runs no risks he could avoid. But dodge as he will he cannot avoid the penalty of responsibility.

Japanese Losses

Stories of successes of the Allied Nations against the Japanese with a preponderance of Japanese air losses and ship losses over those suffered by the Americans and British and other Allies have a very definite meaning for they prove what has been confirmed by a statement over the Tokyo broadcasting station by a Japanese air officer who declared the war picture is becoming increasingly dark for Japan and referred to the overwhelming victories of the Allies in the air.

Sir Archibald's New Title

Sir Archibald Wavell who has been honored by elevation to the Peerage as a viscount, carries in his title the family name of Wavell and the name Cyrenaica as well as the name of the cathedral and university city of Winchester. The name Cyrenaica commemorates the first great battle in Africa in 1941 which was won by the British army under Wavell. Owing to the Axis advances in the Balkans including Greece, the Middle East Army of Wavell went in part to the aid of the Greeks.

The name Wavell will live along with the memory of the conquest of Cyrenaica in the title he bears, Viscount Wavell of Cyrenaica and Winchester.

His recent appointment to the office of Viceroy of India has everywhere been hailed.

New Customer Every 3 Minutes

(Financial Post)

"A new customer is born every 10.4 seconds. An old one dies every 21.6 seconds. Industry loses 1,450,000 old customers in a year and gains 3,020,000 new ones who know nothing of your or your product."

That's what a top official of the War Production Board recently told fellow Americans, urging businessmen to place no dependence on the traditional way of doing business, of marketing, distributing and selling, urging them to seek out the new, to go on telling their story through advertising whether they had goods to sell or not.

For Canada his figures would be approximately these:

A new Canadian customer is born every three minutes. An old customer dies every five minutes. Canadian industry loses 115,000 customers a year and it gains 255,000 new ones "who know nothing of you or your product."

Pleasing Stalin

(London Evening Standard)

In view of the part which Russia will play in world affairs in the future, it is perhaps not inopportune to refer to an incident that occurred in Moscow recently when Sir Archibald Wavell was one of the guests at an official banquet.

Called upon at the last moment to speak, Sir Archibald proposed the health of Stalin in French and thereby pleased Russian.

Stalin, apparently unaware that the then C.-in-C. in India knew the Russian language, showed his pleasure in no uncertain fashion. Afterwards he was seen in deep and intimate conversation (in Russian) with the new Viceroy.

They'll Understand Now

(Guelph Mercury)

Churchill's assertion that Italy get out of the war wasn't heeded. But we'll bet they understand the plane talk they're now getting.

CHANCE

Think you that life is fixed and cold
And tedium rules both night and day,
Or what the afternoon may hold
At morning any sage can say,
While high adventure and romance
May ride upon the winds of chance?

Suppose across your path today
The wind should blow a stranger's hat
And you should meet a fight to stay,
And he should give you thanks for that,
Who knows just where that chance would end?
That's all you need to find a friend.

A grain of dust within the eye!
A friendly stranger offering aid
And Cupid spills a mellow lie
Has brought together man and maid.
That chance is all he asks to catch
Two people for a lifelong match.

At dawn what shall be known at night
Till night has come we cannot know.
The winds of chance blow left and right
And good or ill the fates bestow.
And none can guess how close may be
That chance which some call destiny.

Beurling Stories

(From a Letter to the London Express)

Sir:- Here are two stories of "Screwball" Beurling told me by an R.A.F. officer who served with him in Malta.

During a "Wings for Victory" work on the island the R.A.F. decided on a trick-flying display. Two wing commanders and Beurling —then a sergeant pilot—were picked as the best flier at the station.

The wing commanders decided to give the blandest a real thrill by flying down the main street in V formation inside the wall of houses on either side. Screwball was to lead the formation.

They came roaring down the street wing-tip to wing-tip, almost grazing the walls on either side.

As the leader, Beurling's task was difficult, but it was child's play compared with that of the senior officers, who were defying death by inches.

Screwball, however, decided to give the others an additional thrill, and, to the amazement of everyone, most of all the wing commanders, who were congratulating themselves on the successful end of the venture, he calmly turned his plane over on its back and flew the remainder of the street upside down!

The second story is an amusing illustration of the high degree in which Beurling is gifted with eyesight, and the unbelievable coolness of mind which accompanies even when in action.

He had just returned from patrol and claimed,s probable, saying that he had shot up the cannon shells into the cockpit.

While not doubting that he had scored a victory, his fellow-pilot Officer was unable to believe that anyone, in the heat of aerial fight, could have the presence of mind to allow the eyesight to observe the exact number of hits.

Unperturbed, Screwball calmly maintained that he had shot five shells into the plane.

He was still talking to the officer when a report came in that an Italian plane had crash-landed on the island with the pilot injured—and five cannon holes in the cockpit!

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

Cornwall: Quaint Land of Cornishmen

The following are extracts from a letter received from Capt. Jack Marsh from Capt. C. H. A. Walters now overseas. Capt. Walters gave up his medical practice to enlist with the R.C.A.M.C.

Dear Jack:-

Just back on duty after a most pleasant leave in Cornwall. You will remember it is almost two years since I went down to Devon and this time I determined to be as far west as I could get. Ended up by going to Penzance, about just two miles north and east of Land's End at a lovely old Georgian house which has been converted into a hotel by its owner. That is near as one can get to Canada and still stay in England.

* * *

Had nine days this time and spent the first two days of it down on the southeast coast with my old outfit, the 2nd. Canadian Corps. They were having a big dance so I went down for it and the weekend. Had a grand time. On Monday started for Cornwall. Have joined Cornish Riviera Express which is one of the few trains left in England. Runs about as it likes. It normally takes nearly eight hours from Paddington station to Penzance but the train was late and it was Pirrymoor. Got a seat in a corridor all that way, but heard plenty of conversation to take from a navy man standing next to me about fighting Japs to demand a full view of how he and a Canadian (whose name he couldn't remember) had come to blows. Apparently he was a cold Channel for several hours. All in a casual, friendly way, vein as it was a story about everyday life.

* * *

I think you'd like Cornwall. The weather was perfect all week and the sun, shone brightly. Managed to get into civies, went hatless and in a few minutes was getting a good tan on the edge of the cliffs and I went to sleep and woke up to the sound of waves on the rocks. Lay there right off the Atlantic that never ceases, breaking on the rocks below. Began to note, but scrambling up and down the cliffs to the little fishing villages and tramping the moors looking for ponies and Cornish fields, a mass of swaying daMoidis.

* * *

Two or three things struck me at once—there are no trees along that piece of coast at all—only shrubs and they are stunted, twisted by the wind. Then there was the barrenness of the rocky hills and moors. It takes a hardy race to live in that country. Another thing there has been such a constant flow of Canadians on the English ships of all kinds. The villages are quaint collections of stone houses all the same color (whitewashed by) with the narrowest winding streets imaginable. The fishermen's boy drivers excite my admiration as they drive their donkey carts on such places as they just scrape through. Their carriages almost touching on either side.

About a mile from the hotel is a little village called Mousehole, locally Cornish. I can't see why the population of England isn't increasing at a more rapid rate than it is. It was difficult, but I was child's play compared with that of the senior officers, who were defying death by inches.

Screwball, however, decided to give the others an additional thrill, and, to the amazement of everyone, most of all the wing commanders, who were congratulating themselves on the successful end of the venture, he calmly turned his plane over on its back and flew the remainder of the street upside down!

The second story is an amusing illustration of the high degree in which Beurling is gifted with eyesight, and the unbelievable coolness of mind which accompanies even when in action.

He had just returned from patrol and claimed,s probable, saying that he had shot up the cannon shells into the cockpit.

While not doubting that he had scored a victory, his fellow-pilot Officer was unable to believe that anyone, in the heat of aerial fight, could have the presence of mind to allow the eyesight to observe the exact number of hits.

Unperturbed, Screwball calmly maintained that he had shot five shells into the plane.

He was still talking to the officer when a report came in that an Italian plane had crash-landed on the island with the pilot injured—and five cannon holes in the cockpit!

Glasgow, P. G.

Another day I walked along the cliffs from Penzance to a place called Monachale, about three miles away. Very quaint with a tiny little protected harbor and winding stone-paved alleys between the houses. For the first time saw Breton fishermen in wooden sabots tending their fishing nets. There are big husky fellows, slow in movement with weatherbeaten faces and thick curious speech. They used sometime to these parts in peace time, so what would be more natural they would come back for a home when the Hun drove through?

Met some interesting people during the week. The owner of the hotel is a retired army colonel who fought in both the Boer war and the First Great War. He was in the relief to Ladysmith and met his brother there who was one of the besieged. After the war he apparently mixed little of one, known world and being an excellent raconteur gave me many an interesting hour. Then there was a young R.A.F. Squadron Leader with his wife, who were a D.S.O. and D.F.C. and of course was most reticent about his previous activities. Apparently he had some friends who escaped from Germany to France, and I heard a couple of such stories that you wouldn't believe. If you read it in a book, but are personally understandable. A few such times.

Altogether I had a very fine leave and came back to work very much rested up. Found a whole stack of mail on my return—that's one of the best features of any leave-finding a heap of letters when one returns. So glad to hear all the news. Keep writing. All the best to everyone.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, July 23 (CP)—When Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Mr. Churchill discussed the difficulties in gaining recognition for the early commitments of Canada, part in the Sicilian campaign, he was exhibiting a growing tendency on the part of the smaller Allied nations to demand a full voice in the decisions affecting their national and political interests.

The same tendency was revealed a short time ago when some of the smaller countries made a vain plea that Britain and the United States, at their post-war conference of powers, should not be left to "run the show" in the background permanently or in a subordinate position to the projected post-war machinery.

A Job of Sorting

The United States war relocation authority, custodian of 100,000 Japanese and Japanese-Americans, plans to tackle in September a big job it has been preparing for nine months—get the 90 percent pro-American away from the 10 percent pro-Japanese in the detention camps.

It would have done this long ago were it not for the fact that it has been charged with the responsibility of sorting out the loyal from the disloyal.

Another big job is the sorting of the 4,000,000 men registered for the draft. Many of them will be found unfit for military service, but will be needed in war industry. Others will be found fit for the armed forces, but will be needed in war industry.

Both these jobs are being done by the selective service system, which has been criticized by many persons because it has been slow in getting started.

Selective service officials say they have been slow because they have been careful, and that they have been careful because they have been determined to avoid the mistakes made in the last war.

Warm in Washington

When Congress reconvenes in September, the governor now in Washington will be refrigerating fluid to war plants, leaving the Capitol's air-conditioning system stranded.

Keep your eye on the Republican post-war policy association, dedicated to the proposition that the G.O.P. of isolationism and already becoming a major force in the United States.

Headed by Deneen A. Watson, a 39-year-old Chicago lawyer and financed by Dennison B. Hull, a Chicago broadcaster, the association has held conventions in the east and mid-west and will soon into the far west and the mountain states layer. By October it expects to be ready for its first national convention.

Its job is to convince Republicans that the United States must abandon isolationism and participate with other countries in maintaining international order. The outstanding international among 1944 prospects, is obviously the man they are helping most at the moment.

Airborne Troops Perform Outstanding Service in the Invasion of Sicily

By LEWIS HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 23 — (AP) — By dropping German armor behind the beach landings, airborne troops proved their worth in Sicily and from the right to a still more prominent part in coming invasions, Maj.-Gen. Joseph M. Swing of the United States Army declared today.

At a press conference the General-chief of the American airborne force which descended on Sicily was larger than any other that has been in a single operation. Gen. Swing did not make public the exact number of troops employed, but he indicated it was close to the whole personnel of the 82nd Airborne Division.

In their first test under fire, these paratroops and troop-carriers used anti-tank guns and 75 millimetre field howitzers to beat back efforts of the 15th German Armored Division to counter-attack on the beaches where the American 1st and 45th Infantry Divisions were coming ashore. The soldiers from the air held against the best the enemy threw at them for 36 hours, Friday night until the land forces reached them, Gen. Swing said.

Gen. Swing, who is the commander of another airborne division in the United States, was sent to Sicily to observe and co-ordinate the Sicilian invasion plans. He left Sicily a few days ago and now is on his way back to Washington to report on the operations on the island.

Regarding British airborne operations behind the enemy lines in the Syracuse area, Gen. Swing praised Sir Bernard L. Montgomery as saying, "They advanced our operations by a week."

PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR

Benjamin Franklin died in his own house in Philadelphia April 17, 1790.

It came somewhat as a shock to learn that his private character, his public services and his great abilities were not universally appreciated by his contemporaries.

William Maclay, one of the two Pennsylvania senators in the first Congress, wrote in his private journal under date of April 22, 1790:

"This day there were accounts published of the death of Dr. Franklin. And the House of Representatives voted to drape their chairs for a month. When I consider how much the Doctor has been celebrated, and how little I can praise his public fame with his private character, I am tempted to doubt whether any man was perfect. Yet perhaps it is for the good of society that such characters should be held up for men to model after. I will, therefore, allow him my vote of praise, and if any Senator move for the like honor, I shall have no objection to it, although I suffered Congress to go without any attention to his memory, though he bolonged to our body, and perhaps had more claim to a mark of sorrow."

Franklin had incurred the displeasure of many senators because a society of which he was president had petitioned Congress for the abolition of slavery.

The next Maclay wrote: "Carroll rose and made a motion that the senate should wear crape a month for the loss of Dr. Franklin. Before he was seconded, Ellsworth got up and opposed the motion. It could not be carried in the Senate, he insisted that it must be seconded. I rose and seconded Carroll. Izard and Bulfinch followed Ellsworth, and I well know that this opposition of them proceeded from their religious opinion. Perhaps my supporting Carroll had something of a tincture of the same kind. Grayson and Dr. Johnson joined Ellsworth. Ellsworth withdrew his opposition, and would be lost. This was really indecent. But as the matter, strictly speaking, was not senatorial, or such as belonged to us in our capacity as a public body, and as it was opposed, I would lodged at me and I nodded assent, and it was withdrawn."

Under the date of January 24, 1791, Senator Maclay wrote: "A letter from the National Assembly of France on the death of Doctor Franklin was communicated from them, and received with a coldness that was truly amazing. I cannot help painting to myself the disappointment of Genet, the friends of the patriots, while their warm fancies are figuring the raptures that we will be thrown into on the receipt of their letters, and the information of the honors which they have bestowed on our countryman, and receiving the complimentary echoes of our answers, when we, the authors of it, have not a shade of them. Franklin, or freedom. Well we deserve—shall we do deserve?"

YOUNGER BOYS HELP IN HAYING

Dog Refuses to Ride to Heyfield, but Climbs on Rack and Rides in on Load

Moira, July 20 (Special)—In spite of the acute shortage of help, haying is nearing completion except in the case of low-lying fields. Many of the younger boys have worked very valiantly to supply the lack of older workers.

Mr. Lee Ketcheson possesses a dog, which has been of very peculiar service. The animal follows the wagon to the field, climbs into the rack, helps to trample down the hay and then rides in the barn. As soon as the team enters the barn, Collie begins to worry about a means of descent but a push from Mr. Ketcheson helps him to make up his mind. Next trip he again climbs the wagon out, absolutely declining to get into the wagon until it reaches the field.

The Noorduyn Norseman

The Noorduyn Norseman, the only all-metal, single-engined commercial plane in Canada's aircraft program was born on a summer day in 1935 in a small office high in a Montreal office building. It was there that R.B.C. Noorduyn wrestled with the problems of specifications and construction necessary for a plane designed to purely Canadian needs.

His own ideas, tempered in the bath of Canadian bush pilot expert, ence, resulted in the creation of the Norseman, which it now being delivered to the U.S. Army Air Force as a cargo transport craft. At least, Canadian bush pilots in the R.C.A.F. insist on the Norseman. Officially the craft delivered to the United States is now as the UC-64 and this model contains a number of modifications suggested it to the use of the American air force.

Like the Harvard trainer, also built by Noorduyn, the Norseman is powered by a single 550-horsepower Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine. A high-wing monoplane, it has a wing span of 51 feet, 6 inches and is of conventional steel tube and wood construction. Designed, as it is, to meet the varied conditions of Canadian flying it is quickly convertible from wheels to land to floats, the conversion taking only about one and a half hours from wheels to floats and 20 minutes from wheels to skis.

Amazing Versatility

In peacetime the Norseman won the hearts of the northern fraternity when Bernt Balchen took over the job of personal pilot to Lord of the U.S. Army Air Corps, of helping evaluate the fields in Greenland, the famed pilot asked for the use of a Norseman and flew it out for job. That was the craft's introduction to U.S. official circles and the impression it made was sufficient to keep the Norseman flying soon over the border in increasing numbers.

The plane is equipped with swing-over type dual controls, and in addition to the seats for the pilot and co-pilot there are quickly removable seats for six passengers. The original version of the plane provided for eight seats so that under the new arrangement considerable space is left for military equipment and other cargo.

The pilots' cockpit is provided with good-sized doors on either side, for convenient entrance and exit when the cabin is loaded with freight, and to enable the crew to get out on the floats quickly, an important feature under conditions of strong wind and current. Doors are also fitted with an arrangement whereby they may be jettisoned instantly in an emergency. At the rear end the cabin is reached through a door on the left side. The door and panel to which it is hinged are removed quickly by providing a large opening for loading freight. There is a corresponding removable panel on the other side for loading freight.

Heated Cabin

The cabin of the Norseman has been carefully sound-proofed and temperature-proofed and a very efficient system of heating and ventilation installed. Among the improvements made for the United States model is the installation of additional fuel tanks in what is normally the rear compartment of the fuselage below the cabin floor. The total capacity of these tanks, plus those in the wings and engine nacelle in the fuselage gives the plane a cruising range of 1,200 miles.

When Bob Noorduyn set out to design the new utility plane in 1935 a wealth of experience in the aircraft industry behind him, dating back nearly twenty years ago, when he first started tinkering with model planes in his old home town, and where he was born, his father being Dutch and his mother English. In his work he has been associated with many of the pioneer builder and pilots, names like Sopwith, Bellanca, Byrd, Wilkins, and the compatriot Anthony Fokker with whom he worked in partnership in the United States for many years following the last war.

In drawing his plans for the Norseman, he took the sum of experience of these famous names, plus that, of Canada's own noted bush fliers, and produced a plane capable of coping with Canadian conditions in any of their unpredictable phases.

Churchill Portrait Damaged in Raid, Restored, Unveiled

London, July 22—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill told members of the National Gallery here today that "in days to come, and even in the present time, more exact definitions have to be established about the rights of the individual and the relation of the individual to the great framework of the state."

Mr. Churchill attended the unveiling of a portrait of himself which was damaged in an air raid last May. Lord Latham, who expressed his gratitude for the committee's decision to restore the portrait which had survived alike the vicissitudes of politics and the violence of the enemy."

"There will be great tasks of rebuilding to do," he said in discussing the post-war period. "None has a right to abstain except on grounds of intellectual or moral scruple from the task of rebuilding or to content himself with a purely critical attitude instead of that of throwing brickbats at toiling workers."

A Running Mate

When you see a happily married pair what charm or virtue it is that they have to admire most in all each other, it is funny to see the expression of blank bewilderment on their faces.

They don't KNOW. They haven't stopped to think!

Is it his thoughtfulness, his generosity, his brilliant intellect? Is it her sympathy, her sweet and even temperament, her clever flair for wit? They are utterly vague and unconscious of it all.

But, if you should ask either of them what little failing they find hardest to bear with in their respective mates, they would not have to stop to think. They'd know right off the bat, without consulting a dictionary to find a word for it!

What IS a "good husband?" Not a perfect husband or a dream husband, but just a common or garden "good husband," such as every girl expects to draw, in the matrimonial sweepstakes. Somebody is always giving a new definition or formula for the best type of husband or wife, or a new system for making a go of marriage.

But a husband, like a salad or a cocktail, is a mixture of so many ingredients, that the only thing about him of which you can be absolutely certain, is that you LIKE him—and don't always like him, either.

Oddly enough, a "good husband" is not always what is known as a "good man"; a good man, or a good citizen, who obeys the law, observes all of the commandments, pays his bills and keeps his wedding vows, may be the most irritating, insufferable and cantankerous of headaches.

An open-handed, pleasant-tempered racketeer may be a "good husband" as so many of their devoted moll wives have testified. Carrying a gun is no perfect doctor's license, a thoughtful man from remembering to bring the Little Woman a diamond bracelet in the other pocket.

Nobody can tell any woman just what combination of qualities will make the right husband for HER. Because the whole success of a marriage depends on team-work.

Unless a man and woman are TEAM-WORK—that's the smartest gaited to do team-work; unless each understands where the other is heading and can keep the same pace, any marriage is hard-pulling. The trouble with most marriages, which end in Reno or Florida, is too much self-expression and independence and too little cooperation and team-work.

What you need for happiness in marriage is not necessarily a "model" husband or wife, but a good running mate! That sounds very dull and commonplace, but it is really the hardest thing in the world to find!

Ignorance of Appendicitis Symptoms Cause of Many Needless Deaths.

If it can be said about any disease that death is needless, it can be said about appendicitis, which usually is easy to diagnose. The operation is simple. There is almost always plenty of warning, yet the figures show that during every twenty-four hours in 1941, twelve persons died of appendicitis. This is a death rate far lower than that which occurred from appendicitis forty years ago. However, this difference may be the result of improved diagnosis rather than of actual increase in the number of cases, but when it is realized that appendicitis can be diagnosed early and, with operation, practically all deaths prevented, it is quite discouraging to realize that so many deaths do occur from this disease.

Unfortunately, sometimes when a youngster gets a stomach ache his mother puts him to bed and then gives him a laxative, figuring that he will be all right in the morning. But in the middle of the night she youngster wakes up crying with severe pain. He quickly becomes worse because his condition is due to appendicitis, and the giving of the laxative has served only to cause the appendix to rupture.

Then, too, there are people who have repeated attacks of appendicitis, each one perhaps a little more severe than the one before but instead of having the appendix removed, they keep putting the operation off until finally an attack occurs in which rupture of the appendix takes place before the operation for its removal can be carried out. When the appendix breaks open, the contents spill into the cavity of the abdomen, and the disease known as peritonitis develops. In peritonitis there is high fever, great prostration and severe infection.

Persons should make it their business to learn the symptoms of appendicitis and when any of them occur should call the physician at once for an immediate examination. Appendicitis usually starts with an attack of pain, usually in the centre of the abdomen. The pain as a rule then passes into the right lower part of the abdomen and gradually becomes more severe. The muscles over this part of the abdomen become stiff and rigid and there is some tenderness. There may be fever ranging from 99 to 101 degrees. The number of white cells in the blood usually is increased.

It may be difficult to make a diagnosis of appendicitis if at the same time, the patient has a sore throat or cold. These two conditions may occur frequently in the same person. However, by careful study of the blood and a physical examination, a physician usually can tell when appendicitis is present. If the disease is suspected there should be no hesitancy in having the operation carried out appear far better to remove the appendix unnecessarily than to run the risk frequently of allowing it to rupture and produce a fatal condition.

Opening Dance At Instrument Flying School

Girls of Hostess Club and St. Michael's Girls Club Entertain Personnel

No. 1 Instrument Flying School may now be considered as officially opened and fully recognized having had officially received the best wishes and blessings of one hundred Belleville girls from the Red Triangle Hostess Club and St. Michael's Girls' Club, when they visited the station at Deseronto to entertain the personnel at their first dance since the station was opened. The girls were transported to their destination by Fred Rawson, who supplied two of his own buses and borrowed another to make the trip. Before returning to the city it was necessary to bring out cots in the buses to accommodate the tired but happy girls home.

Dancing commenced at 8.30 and continued until 12.30 but, due to an unforeseen delay, the return trip was not started until after one o'clock in the morning. Congratulations go to Mr. Harry Goodman, Y.M.C.A. organizer, at the Deseronto station, for his ceaseless and fruitful efforts to make their opening daring the great success it was. Although the first few dances were sparsely patronized, no more than four or five couples willing to brave the eyes and criticism of the sideline shifters, others soon followed and the huge aeroplane hangar floor was crowded. The now locally famous "Six-Are-Dee" dance orchestra lent into their task and produced music worthy of several well-known name bands and the dancers appreciated their efforts. Twenty "W.D.'s" from Trenton Airport accompanied the orchestra to Deseronto.

Mr. Goodman was ably assisted in his efforts to get the servicemen and girls to dance by the station's commanding officer, Wing Commander D. F. Macdonald, R.C.A.F., who, accompanied by Mrs. Macdonald, circulated among the men and urged them to dance. Every ounce of co-operation was given Mr. Goodman by both officers and men, the whole personnel pitching in to make it a good party as inducement for the girls to return at a later date.

Two "spot dances" were arranged and prizes given to the winners. The first couple winning was Miss Ann Bowery, Napanee, and Cpl. Malcolm Bowman, Niagara Falls, Ont., and the second winning couple was Sgt and Mrs. Taylor from Toronto.

Determined to make the opening dance popular beyond any rising, the service co-operated to the point of bringing in watermelons from Toronto by air. A decorated refreshment booth was operated by station canteen employees and there were ample soft drinks to meet the demand of the often thirsty dancers and from the antics of one of the latter, intended to the gyratory convulsions of the more experienced rug-cutters, there were many pained throats.

Skipping the month of August, it is the plan to repeat these dances at No. 1 I.F.T. monthly and, if the initial one can be taken as a criterion, the forerunner of what is to come, not even snow and sleet will keep the girls from Belleville from attending, nor dampen their spirits throughout the winter months ahead.

FASHION FLASHES

GETTING READY for resort wear most girls seek simple, functional clothes. A nice example is a pink chambray frock closed from throat to hem with white buttons and trimmed with white ruffles at neck and sleeves. Worn over white bra and shorts.

STILL GOING STRONG is the well done silk suit. A new beauty is of black silk crepe with a print of yellow and white daisies. The dashes are cut out and appliqued around the collar and revers and also edge the sleeves.

TWO OF THE BEST color combinations seen lately include brown with pink and black with yellow. A pretty hat is of yellow Milan straw, a sailor, with a stiff black rippled veiling bordering the brim. Tiny sprays of mimosa are tucked here and there about the brim above and below the veiling.

THERE'S NO REASON why the dressy frock for the more mature or large figure should not be every whit as smart as a size 14. Black sheer pleated all the way from shoulder to hem makes a splendid dress. Black shadow lace borders the deep plunging neck and the same lace, but narrower, edges the short sleeves and hem.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were waiting for pop to come home for dinner, and ma said, I do hope your father comes home in an obliging humor. I practically give Maid Hews my assured garantee that we'd come over there and play bridge this evening. Oh dear, I hope I wasn't too hasty, she said.

Oh, dont worry, ma, he'll probably say yes, unless maybe he happens to hear some bad news or something after he gets home, I said, and ma said, Such a thing to say, such a thing to think, why should he possibly receive any bad news?

Well, for instances I mean my report card for example, I said.

Pop being the one who's always suppose to sign my report card according to a rule in our house, and ma said, Oh dear, is it such an unusually bad one?

No mam, G. wizzickers I should say not, I mean it's not anywheres near as bad as some I've brought home, but I mean it's not anywheres near perfect, either, so when I give it to pop to sign he's libel to compare it to some of the better ones instead of to all the worse ones, and it's libel to put him in a bum humor, I said, and ma said, Well is there any good and logical reason you cant postpone the whole operation till tomorrow morning?

Sure, ma G roodlem, I may sleep too late and be in a hurry and forget, and anyways you know how pop hates to have his attention taken away from his paper in the morning, and besides, ma, it's not really such a bad report, I mean it's almost good news compared to some I've brought home, I said, and ma said, Oh, give it to me, I suppose I can sign it just this once for your father's sake.

Which she did, and pop came home looking half cheerful and half hungry, so ma waited till after dinner and pop said Okay.

Cardinals Lose Pitchers But Continue to Win Games; Reds Beat Dodgers to Help Cause

Boston Braves Beat Chicago for First Time This Year by Taking Two; Phils Win Twice

YANKEES WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Some plaintive chirping has been coming from St. Louis Cardinals recently because of their pitching staff, badly maimed by injuries and calls to the service.

But their National League rivals probably will be slow to show any sympathy for the world champions, who just won four games in a row and increased their first place margin to 5½ games.

Cardinals came up with another victory over New York Giants last night 4-3 with big Mort Cooper acquiring his 13th victory against five defeats by pitching eight-hit ball and holding the Giants scoreless after the first inning.

Reds Help Out

The cause of the Cardinals was helped at Cincinnati as Bucky Walters shut out Brooklyn Dodgers 3-0 on three hits to get his fifth victory. The Reds made 10 hits off three pitchers with Ival Goodman bearing the burden of defeat.

The Dodgers' grip on second place was left unshaken, however, because Philadelphia Phillies bounced off the floor to wallop third-place Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0 and 8-6 in a doubleheader. Schoolboy Rowe pitched the opening shutout and Nick Etten followed with a two-hit with a six-run rally in the ninth inning of the second game to win for rookie Jack Kraus.

Boston Braves, who had not beat Chicago Cubs all season, also turned the trick with a double victory 6-4 and 3-2, nailing the first thru a five-run rally in the fourth inning and the second on two errors.

Keller Hits No. 16

In the American League New York Yankees out-walloped St. Louis Browns to win 9-5 with Charles (King Kong) Keller batting his 13th homer with two on for the Yanks.

Detroit downed Washington Senators twice in a twilight-night doubleheader 7-5 and 1-0. Rudy York's 13th home run and second in two nights came with two on in the sixth inning to win the first game and rookie Frank (Stubby) Overmire captured a pitching battle from Early Wynn in the second feature, although giving up six hits to Wynn's four.

Similarly, Cleveland was outhit 7-5 but managed to beat Philadelphia Athletics 3-1 by scoring twice in the fifth.

Chicago at Boston was postponed.

Canadian Boxer In for Title Bout Overseas

By ALLAN NICKELSON

LONDON, E.A.F.P., Somewhere in England, July 23—(CP)—Consider it a definite possibility that the cream of Britain's professional boxing crowds could be taken home by a Canadian and don't be surprised if Hammerin' Harry Hurst handles the job.

It all depends on Harry himself, of course, and if the 25-year-old Montreal mittsman scores a few more knockouts, as he did in an eight-rounder hopes to match him with Freddie Mills, world light-heavyweight champion, Eric Boon, in a title bout.

Everywhere he goes Hurst fight cards around Liverpool, believes Harry one of Canada's leading lightweights, can show the form to warrant a title fight. And that despite the fact that the Montrealer dropped a decision in his first bout in Britain.

Physical trainer instructor at this Canadian bomber station, Flight Capt. Harry has found it a bit of a problem to get in the week of hectic trim. There aren't any outstanding boxers around the station so Harry trains the hard way—without sparring partners. That, he says, is tough.
